GATES SWING OPEN FOR 27 'POLITICAL PRISONERS'

Three Others Confined at Leavenworth Are Held for Deportation, Although Their Sentences Have Been Commuted by President Coolidge.

TWO SERIOUSLY ILL WITH TUBERCULOSIS

Men Would Have Left Prison Several Days Ago but for Delay Caused by Red Tape and Misdirecting of Letter.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 22.—Twenty-seven "political prisoners," given commutation of sentence by President Coolidge, left the Federal prison here at 7:45 o'clock tonight. Three were left behind, held for deportation to their native countries.

It was 4:30 p. m. when Warden W. I. Biddle reached the prison with the commutation warrants. Somewhere along the line an overworked mail clerk had placed the envelope containing the warrants in a mail bag directed to Atchison. His blunder cost the prisoners an extra day.

The time for lockup had passed before the warrants arrived and most of the men had been placed in their cells for the night—regretful that freedom had been deferred another day. This delayed the process of dressing out, as the men had to be brought from their cells, passed through the tailor shop and then to the chief clerk's office for their warrants, funds and personal effects.

None Looks Back.

Finally, it was announced that all was ready and the march to the front gate began. Here there was a delay of five minutes while the men were checked to see that no other prisoner went out with them. The big gate swung open and the short walk to the interurban station began, Warden Biddle leading. For a short distance he walked with the men and then waved good-by to the group passing silently into the night. None looked back at the rows of glistening lights of the prison.

On a street car that barely held all of them, they rode to the heart of Leavenworth and there separated, to go to different railway ticket offices to get tickets. Later they departed for Kansas City over the interurban line.

Are Given $8331 From Friends

Before the men left the prison, they were paid in cash $8331. This money came from friends on the outside, but included $5 gratuity given by the Government. As they left the prison the men carried amounts ranging from $100 to $450.

Burt Lorton, Chicago; Harry Lloyd, Seattle, and J. Jacob Tori, San Francisco, are the three men held for deportation. Word was received at the prison that an effort was being made to procure bonds for them.

The commutation warrant for Vincent Santill, out on bond, was sent with the others. It will be returned to Washington. Santill is in New York City.

Two Are Tubercular.

Edward Quigley, one of the released prisoners, is ill. Quigley sat in the Warden's office with Caesar Tabib and Roy P. Conner, and a hacking cough racked him frequently. He has spent 51 months in the tubercular ward. Caesar Tabib appeared strong beside him, but Tabib also is listed as tubercular. Both will go to Kansas City, where they expect to remain some time. Quigley's home is in San Francisco. Tabib claims New York as his home.

Warden Biddle suggested that he call a taxicab for Quigley. "Thank you, Warden," replied Quigley, "I'll go with the rest of the boys."

James P. Thompson, who gave his residence as Seattle and was convicted at Chicago, was looked upon as the leader of the war prisoners. He is a Scotchman and a graduate in chemistry at Dublin College. He complained that the men had been undernourished.

"Most of the young fellows who came here are robust when they come and stay only a short time. Prison life does not tell on them,

CHILDREN PREPARE FEAST FOR BIRDS IN TREES IN PARKS

Annual Party Under Auspices of Bird Club Expected to Have More Guests Than Usual.

Birds which have remained north for the holidays are guests of the juniors of the St. Louis Bird Club, who, for the sixth year, have prepared a feast for their feathered friend this week at evergreens in city parks and in St. Louis County.

Children of each school where the custom is observed went in a party to their selected tree and laid out the feast from tubs of the bird-delicacies they had prepared. Boys climbed the trees and the girls handed them garlands to decorate the branches in Christmas tree fashion. Bags of suet also were tied to the upper branches, and grain and nuts were scattered over the ground for those birds like sparrows, disdain to be all up in the air at mealtime.

The schools whose children are giving the festival and the place of each party are: Community School, the grove near Demun avenue and Wydown boulevard; Farragut School, Fairground Park, Bryan Mullanphy School, Shaw's Garden, Mary Institute, Forest Park, Cote Brilliante School, O'Fallon Park and the Bird Sanctuary in that park.

POLICE STOP SALE OF STUDENT MAGAZINE IN RHODE ISLAND

Article Written by Brown University Man Pronounced Unfit For Public to Read.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 22.—Sale of the December number of "Casements," a magazine published by undergraduates at Brown University, was ordered stopped this afternoon by the police on the advice of the city solicitors' department, which pronounced material in the magazine unfit for public reading."

The article to which objection is made is one of a series of four sketches parodying well known writers. It was prepared by a member of the junior class.

Copies of "Casements" which came into the hands of the police were referred by Lieut. John A. Murphy to Assistant City Solicitor Sigmund W. Fischer Jr. In announcing his decision to stop sale of the magazine, Fischer said:

"The material in the particular article referred to is clearly obscene and unfit for public reading, and I have so informed the police. They will call upon book stores and dealers having the issue on sale to withdraw it. If they do not, they will be prosecuted by this department."

CHARGES OF FRAUDS IN FRENCH WAR CLAIMS MADE

Deputy Says Industrialists in Devastated Regions Have Received Large Sums.

Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The debate on finance in the Chamber of Deputies today gave Deputy Inghels an opportunity to renew his accusations against the Government's tolerating a system of distribution of funds in the devastated regions which permits some to build palaces and accumulate fortunes while the humbler victims of the war are unable to obtain even a pittance wherewith to rebuild their ruined cottages.

He denounced the "fraudulent claims" which he said had cost the French treasury millions of francs. He said huge sums have been asked for the benefit of rich industrialists. Reibel, minister for the devastated regions, answered that Inghels' charges had all been disproved, but Inghels stuck to his charges and concluded his speech by demanding a general revision of all claims above $5000.

Home-Built Houses For Sale

In St. Louis and its suburbs are a number of new houses for sale which have been built in the substantial home-like way upon which you would insist, if you were building the house yourself.

These houses are in select, convenient locations, and they are being offered for sale upon reasonable terms.

Do not overlook these opportunities for home ownership. Investigate today. Read the offerings in the "Real Estate" columns of the Post-Dispatch and call up the agents or owners. They will show you the properties and talk terms without in any way obligating you.

BRITISH LABOR TO TEMPER PROGRAM TO WIN LIBERALS

In View of Minority in Commons, It Will Push Only Measures It Thinks Liberals Will Support.

WILL CENTER ON 3 MAIN PROBLEMS

Foreign Affairs, Housing and Unemployment Chief Issues—Capital Levy to Be Sidetracked.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON
London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—There exists a wide gap between what the Labor party has proclaimed on the stump it would do and the possibilities of performance in a House of Commons where labor's measures one after the other can be defeated by a Tory-Liberal combination and Labor turned out at any moment by a vote of censure.

Assuming that Ramsay Macdonald will form a Cabinet, this is an attempt to indicate the foreign and domestic policy of the first labor Government, with special reference to political possibilities.

Labor will try to put through only those measures which it thinks the Liberals will support, or thinks Liberal failure to support would cost the Liberals votes at the next general election.

Labor's two paramount issues of the last campaign—the capital levy and the nationalization of railways, mines, banks, etc.—are not serious questions of the hour. It is doubtful whether they would be, even if labor had a clear majority.

As it is, the labor leaders plan to postpone by setting up experts to examine the capital levy and not to introduce it until they have a majority in the House. The same delaying tactics will be applied to nationalization.

Three Main Problems of Labor.

Now for labor's present program. As at present determined the labor tacticians are trying to concentrate upon three main problems. The first is foreign affairs. The other two are domestic issues, unemployment and housing.

Here is an inspired suggestion as to two points in foreign policy which Ramsay Facdonald believes could be carried through in the new House of Commons without causing a defeat of labor.

Labor banks here on the support of the Liberals, because most of the Liberal leaders already have indorsed the principles underlying them. The two points are complete recognition of Soviet Russia, and an international conference "to deal with the problems of reparations, war debts and the Versailles Treaty. To that conference not only the war Allies would be invited, but also Germany, Russia and America."

It is Labor's intention and here, too, they would have much liberal support, to insist upon such a conference whether or not France and the United States accept the invitation.

Unemployment and housing are the two domestic questions which Labor thinks should be dealt with at once, and upon which it is hoped a program can be elaborated that the Liberals would be able to support.

The Labor Program.

The labor program here, as put forward unofficially by an authority, follows:

Safeguard the tenants by establishing the principle that until there is a sufficiency of houses there shall be no evictions and no increases of rents.

Start a national housing scheme through the local authorities with a view to meeting the admitted shortages. In doing this labor would:

Take the necessary steps to prevent the building trusts from fleecing the public by charging exorbitant prices.

Prevent the private building speculator from erecting "rabbit hutches" at rents fit only for mansions.

Secure the local authorities by loans at the lowest possible rate of interest.

Leave the local authorities to act as the primary authority, subject to the requirements laid down in the housing law. These requirements would include the abolition of slum property and unsanitary dwellings.

The effect of such a scheme would be to reduce unemployment and thereby relieve the exchequer-

CARR FURNISHES $25,000 BOND TO AWAIT CHARGES

Chippewa Cashier Says He "May Have to Go Back to Plow," but No One Will Lose.

DEPOSITORS' BOOKS TO BE CHECKED SOON

"They've Got Everything I Had," Declares Financier Who Made Bank One-Man Institution.

Joseph S. Carr, who a few days ago was magnate of the one-man Chippewa Bank, and business leader in a prosperous South Broadway neighborhood, is now under a $25,000 common-law bond to answer any charge that may result from the bank's sudden closing.

He still occupies his 63-acre country place, but is expecting a 30-day notice to vacate it, following his action in assigning his real and personal property to meet the bank's losses resulting from his juggling of depositors' accounts. His stocks in several other St. Louis banks, and his stocks and bonds of other concerns, have been similarly turned over to the State Department of Finance, and Carr remarked yesterday that he might have to "go back to plowing."

A more sinister prospect was suggested by his attorney, Thomas B. Harlan, when he remarked, on the occasion of the bond-signing, that "it may be a question of the penitentiary for Joe Carr."

Began as Small-Town Banker.

Carr, before he took part in organizing the Chippewa Bank in 1904, was a small-town banker. He ran the bank in Center, Ralls County, Mo., a town near Hannibal. He was a native of that region of Northeast Missouri, and had worked also in a bank at Vandalia after leaving the Kirksville Normal School.

After coming to St. Louis, Carr gradually transferred his North Missouri investments, which already were considerable, to the new field, and became one of the large stockholders of the Chippewa Bank and its cashier. His recent holding of the Chippewa Bank's stock was 660 shares, or 33 per cent of its $200,000 capital issue. This was more than twice the holding of any other stockholder, that of Gottlieb Eyermann Jr., president of the bank, being 311 shares.

Carr was an advocate of community banking, as opposed to centralized banking. He also was a worker, and became a leader, in community business matters. He still is president of the Chippewa-Broadway Business Men's Association and of the Outlying Bankers' Association, in which 36 banks besides the Chippewa are represented.

Pockets Bulge With Deeds.

After being in seclusion since the bank's closing was announced Friday morning, Carr appeared in Judge Calhoun's court at 11 a. m. yesterday with his lawyer and two bondsmen. Attorney Harlan signed the bond with the others, who were Harry F. Tacke, building contractor of 5149 Rosa avenue, and Louis B. Smutz, general insurance dealer, Laclede Gas Building.

Carr and his attorney visited the Circuit Attorney's office, but no announcement has been made as to any charge which is likely to be made. If the Chippewa Bank's 8500 depositors do not lose through Carr's manipulation of the bank's affairs, it will still be possible for stockholders to prefer a charge against Carr, who resigned the office of cashier Wednesday.

When he entered the courtroom Carr's overcoat pockets were bulging with papers which he said were warranty deeds for real estate involved in his assignment of his assets to the State Finance Department. He said the real estate was worth $300,000, but he did not mention the amount of other papers he carried, which appeared to be life insurance policies.

"Got Everything I Have."

"They've got everything I have," Carr said to reporters, "and they didn't have to ask me to turn it over, either. I have turned over a million, nearly; there is $335,000 capital, surplus and undivided profits. Make it a million and a quarter, and that's half the bank's deposits. (The deposits shown in the bank's September report were $2,483,131.)

"I am satisfied there will be ample, and plenty left. As for me, I can go back to plowing, if necessary. I have done it."

Carr was asked whether he had invested largely in oil stocks.

"No," he replied. "Except in one instance, a Louisiana oil property which we sold last summer for

Coolidge Sends Greetings by Radio To Arctic Explorers

Christmas Message of 43 Words Relayed to Capt. MacMillan by Amateurs.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 22.—President Coolidge today sent Christmas greetings to the tiny group of explorers that are in an ice-bound cabin, only eleven degrees from the North pole.

A short time after he had written a Christmas greeting to the children of the United States, President Coolidge wrote a Christmas message for Captain Donald B. MacMillan. Amateur radio men connected with the American Radio Relay League, the radio telegraphers' organization that has maintained communication with the MacMillan expedition, started the Coolidge message on its 4000-mile journey from this city tonight.

The text of the greeting, containing 43 words of cheer from President Coolidge to Captain MacMillan and his crew was sent from Hartford to Refuge Harbor, North Greenland, entirely by means of amateur transmitting stations. The text cannot be made public owing to the regulation which provides that radio messages must be held in strict confidence.

As Captain MacMillan's schooner, The Bowdoin, is equipped with an amateur transmitting station, he is able to communicate only with amateur stations in the United States and Canada. It was for this reason that the Radio Corporation of America appealed to the league, asking that the amateur organization forward the message. The message was originally filed with the Radio corporation at Washington.

THREE NEW EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS FELT IN ECUADOR

Funds Coming in Rapidly for Relief of Homeless and Suffering Quake Victims.

By the Associated Press.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Dec. 22.—Three new earthquake shocks have been felt in Tulcan, according to advices from that city today. Tulcan several days ago was severely shaken, many persons were killed and a great amount of material damage was done.

Communication with the border Columbian towns which were affected by the recent disturbances is still interrupted. It is reported that the towns of El Angel and Sangabriel have been partly destroyed. Funds are coming in rapidly from all parts of the country to aid those made homeless by the earthquake.

JOHNSON ISSUES STATEMENT ATTACKING HENRY FORD FOR INDORSEMENT OF COOLIDGE

LAYS SHORTAGE AT HOTEL JEFFERSON TO BAD WHISKY

Manager Hay Says Missing Auditor, Charlie Frank, Drank Noticeably After Prohibition.

CANNOT EXPLAIN IT IN ANY OTHER WAY

Arrest of Frank in Connection With Vanishing of $12,000 Asked for—He Departed 6 Weeks Ago.

The downfall of Charlie Frank, missing auditor of Hotel Jefferson, whose books are said to be short about $12,000, dates back to the advent of prohibition and "bad" whiskey. Lyman T. Hay, manager of the hotel, who has known Frank for some 25 years, can think of no other explanation for the trusted employe's alleged peculations.

Frank has been missing about six weeks, but Hay, loath to believe that his confidence had been betrayed, has said little about it. He had known Frank since he started to work for him as cigar clerk at the Eastman Hotel in Little Rock, and brought him to St. Louis when the Jefferson was opened. He helped him to climb from one position to another until 10 years ago, when the hotel's auditor died, Frank was given the job as a matter of course. When Frank went on an occasional "spree" in the last few years, Hay looked the other way and considered it of minor importance.

Saw Auditors at Work, Vanished.

Then, in the middle of last month, Frank came to work one morning and found auditors of the firm of Haskins & Sells beginning their annual audit. He said nothing, but the next day he failed to appear and the auditors later announced his books were wrong. Hay notified the National Surety Co., which furnished $5000 surety bond for Frank, and on its advice yesterday asked the police for Frank's arrest.

"I have known Charlie a long time, and he was the last man on earth that I would have suspected," Hay told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night. "He had a good home, a good wife, he was regular in his habits, and I thought he was saving money. I can't imagine what he could have spent the money for, unless it was to buy whisky. The only explanation I can see is prohibition.

Hay Never Knew His Address.

Charlie came from some where in the East, and started to work at the Eastman as a mere boy behind the cigar counter. Then he was brought up here as bookkeeper in the stock room, and was later promoted to the auditor's office. When he was made auditor in 1913, he was put under $5000 bond.

"I never said anything to him about the bond, and he renewed it every year and paid the premium himself. Once in a while he would drink a little, but I never noticed it much, until after prohibition went into effect. Then he began to get drunk, but it was always when he was off duty."

Hay, because of his implicit confidence in Frank, never bothered to note his home address. Frank lived in a South Side apartment, and last summer, when his wife went away, Frank moved to the hotel temporarily. When his wife returned, he rented another apartment somewhere in the same general neighborhood, Hay said.

Two weeks after Frank's disappearance, his wife disposed of the household furniture and returned to her family in Chicago. Hay learned later from an attache of the hotel, who had talked to her. But he has heard nothing of Frank's whereabouts. Frank was about 40 years old, of short, thick stature and dark complexion.

Loss of Faith Hurts Worst.

The auditors are still at work checking his books, and have found shortages running between $11,000 and $12,000, ranging over a period of about 18 months, according to Hay. He intimated that his loss of faith in Charlie Frank hurt him far more than the

EGYPTOLOGISTS RAISING LID OF TUTANKHAMEN CANOPY

Great Linen Pall, Blackened With Age, Which Covers Inner Shrine, Exposed to View.

By the Associated Press.

LUXOR, Egypt, Dec. 22.—The first of the three sections of which the heavy curved roof of the canopy in Tutankhamen's mortuary chamber is composed was raised something over three feet by Howard Carter and his assistants today. They labored four hours, but were unable in that time to detach the section. The lifting of the lid is proving a most formidable business, owing to the care with which it must be handled and to the fact that it is much heavier than was anticipated.

The work of raising it is done by inserting a series of light wooden wedges, which Carter taps into position with a mallet immediately under the lid. The raining of the first section has made it possible to see from above the great linen pall, blackened with age, that covers the second shrine immediately within the canopy, or outer shrine.

Chemists were busy today in the laboratory, applying restorative treatment to some of the larger articles of furniture removed last year from the ante chamber of the tomb. These include the so-called hather or cowheaded couch, inlaid with ivory and ebony (Hather was the Egyptian goddess of love, to whom the cow was sacred); a bed, one of the ceremonial chairs and part of the chariot harness. The gilding and colors are coming well under the treatment, and Tutankhamen's cartouche has been found on the pieces.

OIL MAN RETURNS AFTER STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE

Tells Parents Incoherent Story of Kidnaping in November; Ill From Exposure and Nervousness.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 22.—J. Harvey Olive, former manager of the Camden (Tenn.) branch of an oil company, who turned up at his parents home near Parrish, Ala., after having mysteriously disappeared from Camden in November, tells an incoherent story of being kidnaped by a party of men and held a prisoner for days, according to his father, J. C. Olive.

The former Camden man was reported to be slightly better today, although suffering from exposure and nervousness. His father said that his son had not been asked to explain his movements after his disappearance in detail, owing to his physical condition.

SENATOR ASKS WHY VIEWS WERE CHANGED

Declares Manufacturer Assailed Weeks Oct. 13 and Approved Administration After New Shoals Bill Was Introduced in House.

"HIS OPINIONS DON'T CONTROL DECISION"

Points to Support of Wilson and Harding When They Were in Office and Calls Him "a Marvelous Business Man."

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Hiram Johnson thinks Henry Ford is "a marvelous business man." In a statement today the California Senator pointed out that Ford denounced the administration on Oct. 13 for selling part of Muscle Shoals to the Alabama Power Co. Next the administration introduced a bill in the House to let Ford have Muscle Shoals and to build him another plant to replace what was sold, the Senator continued.

"And then on Dec. 19, Ford came out for President Coolidge as a 'safe' candidate," added Johnson. If Mr. Coolidge were not safe and his administration were under the influence of private interests on the thirteenth day of October as Ford plainly said to the American public, what occurred between the thirteenth day of October and the nineteenth day of December to transmute the bitter denunciation of Mr. Ford against the administration then to enthusiastic advocacy now?"

This was Johnson's first extended commentary on the event that the Coolidge supporters think set the Johnson boom back another lap.

Silent as to Effect on Him.

Johnson did not touch on the question of how his chances are affected by the Ford action. Political leaders vary in their views, Johnson's friends insisting, as do the Democrats, that Ford cannot deliver his following to Coolidge.

Senator Johnson's statement follows:

"American politics present a most interesting phychological study. Henry Ford has declared for Mr. Coolidge because, as he says, Mr. Coolidge is 'safe.' Immediately the part of the press of the country representing special privilege, which has always denounced and caricatured Mr. Ford, gives him a certificate of character, and, with open arms, welcomes him to its ranks. Perhaps the time is propitious for Goldman and Bill Haywood to return, declare for Mr. Coolidge, and be acclaimed by the same special privilege press.

"But in the light of Mr. Ford's previous utterances, just when did Mr. Coolidge in Mr. Ford's opinion become 'safe'? On the thirteenth day of October, after Mr. Coolidge had been in office for more than two months and when Secretary Weeks had sold what Ford claimed to be a part of the Muscle Shoals project, Mr. Ford denounced in unmeasured terms the Secretary of War, and inferentially, the administration, as being under the control of private interests inimical to the farmers, and the Secretary of War made an angry rejoinder.

Recalls Attack on Weeks.

"Obviously, according to Mr. Ford, the administration of Mr. Coolidge was then unsafe, and didn't even wish to do right. Thereafter, Congressman Madden gave to the press the outline of a measure he would introduce in Congress, apparently for the administration, designed to give Mr. Ford Muscle Shoals, and a plant of like character to that sold by Weeks. The message of the President on the sixth day of December was not

MANIAC KILLS 4 WOMEN, A BOY AND HIMSELF

Wife, Mother-in-Law, Sister-in-Law and Deputy's Wife and Son Shot Down by Timber Worker.

SLAYER HAD BEEN EMPLOYE OF OFFICER

Massacre Believed to Have Resulted From Quarrel With Deputy's Wife Over Use of Auto.

By the Associated Press.

COOPERS MILLS, Me., Dec. 22.—Six lives were sacrificed today to the murderous frenzy of John Snow, a young man who came from Poland a few years ago.

The authorities say that after shooting his wife, three other women, and a 15-year-old boy, Snow turned the revolver on himself, inflicting a fatal wound. The dead:

JOHN SNOW.

IDA SNOW, his wife.

MRS. RUTH BRANN, 80 years old, Mrs. Snow's mother.

MRS. EVA EATON, Mrs. Snow's sister.

MRS. FRANK JEWETT, wife of Deputy Sheriff Jewett.

KENNETH JEWETT, the Deputy's son.

Mrs. Jewett and her son were killed in their home at Whitefield, seven miles from here while Deputy Jewett and the other members of the household were doing some Christmas shopping in Gardiner. The others were shot in the little cottage which they occupied on a road a mile from the center of Coopers' Mills, which is in the town of Jefferson. Mrs. Eaton's five weeks' old baby was found unhurt in a crib in the cottage when the murder was discovered by Mrs. Eaton's seven-year-old son, who had been playing in the yard.

Terrified at the sight of the three women lying dead and Snow dying, the boy ran to the home of a neighbor. Others living nearby were notified and their first thought was to send for Deputy Sheriff Jewett. A messenger was sent to Whitefield. When he reached the Deputy's home there was no response to his ring at the door bell and he entered the house. He found Mrs. Jewett and her son dead on the floor.

Had Been Employed by Jewett.

Meanwhile Deputy Jewett had been found in Gardiner. When he started for the scene of the murder in Coopers' Mills he was unaware that his own wife and boy also had been killed.

Sheriff John P. Kelly of Booth Bay Harbor was notified of the murders and took charge of the investigation. It was learned that Snow had been employed recently by Jewett, working in the woods. Members of the Jewett household said that they talked with Snow about 6:30 o'clock this morning and that he spoke of wanting his wife and baby, from whom he had been separated for some time, to go to Gardiner to live with him.

Deputy Jewett left home at 10:30 a. m. Within an hour Snow is believed to have shot Mrs. Jewett and Kenneth Jewett and to have started for Coopers' Mills in the Deputy's automobile. According to the authorities, two hours later he had killed the three women there, and later in the afternoon succumbed to his self-inflicted wounds.

Mrs. Snow's mother, Mrs. Brann, several times had provided money to establish Snow in various lines of business, all of which proved unsuccessful. The neighbors said that the two women and Mrs. Eaton had frequently asserted that they were afraid of Snow beacuse of his violent disposition.

Last August Snow was placed under bonds to keep the peace after charges that he had beaten his wife and threatened to kill a man named Davis had been lodged against him.

Investigation showed that all the victims had been shot in the head at close range.

Although uncertain as to the motive for the killing of Mrs. Jewett and her son, authorities believe that when Snow called at the Jewett home, he asked to borrow the Sheriff's automobile to drive to Cooper's Mills and this provided the basis for a quarrel and the subsequent shooting. Jewett said tonight that he is confident that his 15-year-old son had refused to lend the car to Snow and that Snow then became violent. He said he based his theory on the fact that Snow used the automobile he sought to borrow in proceeding to the Brann place where the other murders took place.

Although neighbors heard shots there were no witnesses at either shooting. At the Brann place, the position of the body of Mrs. Brann indicated that the 80-year-old woman was shot down as she attempted to escape through a window.

"It's all guesswork," was Carr's reply to questions as to the amount of his shortage with the bank. Attorney Harlan interposed that no "shortage" was admitted, though "irregularities" were conceded to have occurred.

Shows Signs of Strain.

Carr, who showed signs of recent strain and worry, nevertheless took a confident tone, particularly in speaking of the value of the assets made over by him for the protection of the bank and its depositors. His lawyer, Harlan, has said these assets may bring as much as $700,000 at forced sale.

Finance Commissioner Millspaugh and his counsel, T. E. Francis, have not confirmed the high estimate made by Carr and his lawyer of the value of his assigned real estate and stock holdings. However, they believe that the assignment does make a substantial addition to the bank's resources for the protection of stockholders. These resources, without the forced sale value of the carr assets, would be more than $419,000, the items being the $200,000 capital stock, $135,000 surplus and undivided profits, $50,000 bond of Carr and $34,000 certified check which he paid in settlement of the first irregularity discovered, before he resigned his office Wednesday.

A list of the property made over by Carr to the Finance Commissioner was furnished yesterday to Attorney Francis, who declined to make it public. It consists of several pages of closely written items. Included in the holdings of stock are shares in a number of St. Louis banks, most of them neighborhood institutions.

Not in Other Bank Managements.

While Carr was interested in these other banks as a stockholder, he had nothing to do with the management of any except the Chippewa, where he was virtually the executive head. Francis, in explaining his unwillingness to make the list public, said he feared some persons, not acquainted with banking conditions, might lose confidence in the other banks in which Carr held stock, though, as stated, he had nothing to do with their management.

"The fact that Carr was interested in an oil concern was printed yesterday," Francis said, "and solely for that reason some of the other stockholders seem to be alarmed though the company has been doing well. Carr's interest is less than one-tenth of the company's capital stock."

Carr's residence property on Lackland road, St. Louis County, which Carr and his lawyer have figured at a value of $100,000, is assessed this year, according to the records in the Assessor's office at Clayton, at $27,250.

The last previous owner, J. B. Miller, a lawyer, sold the property to Carr Oct. 12, 1920, the deed being recorded Nov. 26, 1920. Miller today said the sale was for cash, but declined to disclose the price paid by Carr. He said Carr assumed the mortgage obligations, which at the time of the sale were $27,000. Carr has stated that the property is mortgaged for $30,000. The property consists of the homestead, formerly the Halsey C. Ives home, and 63 acres.

Late Deposits Held Separate.

Directors of the Chippewa Bank held nearly 70 per cent of its stock, according to the last statement furnished to the City Assessor. The entire number of stockholders was 52, and the largest were Carr, with 660 shares, and President Eyerman, with 311. Sam B. Jeffries, director and counsel, held 160 in his own name, while the firm of Jeffries & Carr, executors of the estate of C. D. Corum, had 137 shares. John R. Harkins, a director, had 120 shares; Dr. Henry Schulz, vice president, had 60 shares, and Richard Bartholdt, a director, had 48.

Deposits which were accepted by the bank clerks after the time when the bank's officers may be held to have known that its condition was impaired, will be held separate from previous deposits, and will be repaid in full, Commissioner Millspaugh has announced.

In the Night and Day Bank failure tre president and directors were indicted, and the president was tried twice unsuccessfully, on charges of receiving deposits in a failing institution. The only person convicted in the original failure of the Night and Day Bank has been the cashier, A. O. Meininger, who ran that bank as a one-man institution.

Hopes for Reorganization.

Finance Commissioner Millspaugh yesterday issued a statement to the Chippewa Bank depositors, expressing regret that no definite information could be given. He said:

"I desire to assure the depositors that every effort of the department will be exerted to protect their interests, and if a feasible plan for reorganization can be evolved which will protect their interests, it will be adopted.

"It is my hope that this can be done in order that the funds on deposit may be made available for use by the depositors at the earliest possible moment; but until a determination of the condition of the affairs of the bank is made it must be obvious that the depositors must exercise that excellent degree of patience which has thus far characterized their actions.

"I hope that the optimistic statement of Mr. Carr's attorney may be justified by the ultimate results; but in this connection I desire to say that the efforts of the department have been exerted up to this time in securing the assignment of Mr. Carr's property for the protection of the depositors, and the matter of the value of these assignments will be taken up as early as possible, and when determined, the public will be informed."

To Check Depositor's Books.

In determining the extent to which deposit accounts were juggled, depositors will be invited to meet the examiners in the next few days, so that their books may be checked with the bank's accounts.

Richard H. Levy, insurance salesman, of 5295 Waterman avenue, yesterday declined to discuss his business dealings with the Chippewa Bank and his account, which figured in the first admissions by Carr, the cashier, of discrepancies in the bank's affairs.

As has been related, the irregularities in Carr's accounts first were discovered through a certificate of deposit for $4500, issued by Carr to Levy, which was not entered upon the deposit certificate books of the bank.

When Carr was confronted with this by an examiner for the St. Louis Clearing House Association, he was said to have made his first admission. At that time Carr stated, it was said, that the only irregularities were in the handling of Levy's account. Carr fixed the amount at $34,000 and made restitution to the bank in that amount, Wednesday night in a director's meeting, at which his resignation was demanded. Later it appeared that the shortage would run higher.

Levy, who now is connected with the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, with offices in the Chemical Building, stated he knew nothing of any irregular handling of his account by Carr until he read of it in newspapers. He said he had been acquainted with Carr for about seven years, but only as a depositor and customer of the bank.

Any irregularity, he said, "is up to the bank." He stated he had deposited cash for the deposit certificate issued to him. He first stated he knew nothing of a transaction in which this deposit certificate was sent to a bank in Virginia, but later said this was "regular banking business." He declined to explain the transaction. An inquiry by a Bank Examiner of Virginia regarding this certificate of deposit led to discovery of the condition of the bank.

Evermann's Account Shrinks.

Carr has promised Millspaugh to go over the books of the bank with the State examiners to point out all irregular transactions. On the face of things, the examiners have found that all the books, except the individual ledger, appear to be in good order. But apparent irregularities have been found in the individual ledger, and Carr is expected to point out their relation to irregularities in the other books.

Among the accounts said to have been manipulated by Carr is that of President Eyerman, which has shrunk from $40,000 to $10,000 through these manipulations.

Millspaugh said the true condition of the bank would not be known until all the depositors had been circularized and had given statements from their deposit books and slips for comparison with entries on the books.

GREECE INVITES VENIZELOS BACK UPON OWN TERMS

Council of Ministers Offers Him Full Liberty of Initiative to Take Situation in Hand.

REPUBLICANS TO ACT IF HE STAYS AWAY

Greek King and Queen Arrive in Rumanian Capital, Where They Expect to Reside.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Dec. 22.—The Council of Ministers has decided to instruct Col. Plastiras of the Revolutionary Committee, to ask ex-Premier Venizelos, without any conditions and with complete liberty of initiative, to return to Greece and take the political situation in hand.

The invitation asked Venizelos to arrive before the convocation of the newly elected National Assembly on Jan. 2. This request is interpreted in some quarters as indicating a fear on the part of the Revolutionary Committee that a republican Government will be formed if the return of the former Premier is delayed.

Among the leaders only M. Papanastasion, who has been mentioned as the possible next Premier, is of the opinion that Venizelos will decline, in which event the republicans declare they will form a Government.

Rumanian Envoy Recalled.

The Rumanian Minister to Greece, M. Djouvara, has suddenly been summoned back to Bucharest.

M. Djouvara had publicly denied a report that he had attempted a diplomatic demarche against the enforced departure from Greece of King George and Queen Elizabeth. Rumania, he declard, merely joined Great Britain in demanding assurances of safety for the King and Queen.

M. Djouvara informed Premier Gonatas that he hoped to return to Athens in three weeks time.

Reports that Jugo-Slavia would adopt a course similar to that alleged against Rumania were contradicted by statements in tonight's newspapers in which the Jugo-Slavian representative declared that his country had no intention of "interfering in the affairs of a friendly and allied nation." Several of the anti-Venizelists papers assert there are large concentrations of Jugo-Slav forces on the Greco-Serbian frontier.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 22.—King George and Queen Elizabeth of Greece arrived here at 3 o'clock this afternoon from Athens.

They reached the port of Constanta this morning and journeyed to Baucharest, a distance of about 65 miles by rail.

At Constanta the King and Queen were welcomed by the Crown Prince and Princess of Rumania, and Prince Paul and Princess Irene of Greece.

King George and Queen Elizabeth will reside at the royal palace at Controceni.

FUNERAL FOR FRANK I. COBB TO BE HELD TODAY

Services Will Be Conducted at St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church by the Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland.

BURIAL WILL BE AT WESTPORT, CONN.

Prominent Men Among Honorary Pallbearers—Other Notables Send Messages of Sympathy.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Funeral services for Frank Irving Cobb, editor of the New York World, will be held in St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, East Sixteenth street, at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon. The Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland will officiate, using the full Episcopal service. There will be no eulogy.

Following the services, the body will lie in the chapel until 9:20 a. m. Monday, when it will be taken to Westport, Conn., Mr. Cobb's summer home, where interment will be made in the town cemetery. The body will be accompanied by Mrs. Cobb, her children and a few friends.

Messages of sympathy from persons in all walks of life poured in to Mrs. Cobb at her home, No. 247 Fifth avenue, today. Some of the more prominent to telegraph were Secretary of State Hughes, William G. McAdoo, Gov. Smith, Miss Ida M. Tarbell, Senator Glass, Owen D. Young, Cyrus P. Curtis, Supreme Court Justice Dowling and Charles W. Anderson, who in his telegram acknowledged the debt the negroes of America owe to the dead editor.

The honorary pall bearers at the services will be: Former Gov. Nathan L. Miller, Former Under Secretary of State Frank L. Polk, Former Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, Justice Victor J. Dowling, Justice E. S. K. Merrill, Bernard M. Baruch, Dwight W. Morrow, Alexander Konta, Samuel A. Beardsley, John Godfrey Saxe, Walter Price, Louis C. Duval, Patrick Francis Murphy, Frank A. Munsey, Louis Henbold, Adolph S. Ochs, Rollo Ogden, Arthur Brisbane, Geoffrey Parsons, H. S. Pollard, John H. Tennant, Don C. Seitz, John L. Heaton, Herbert Bayard Swope, Florence D. White, Joseph Pulitzer, and Ralph Pulitzer.

Gov. Smith, who was to have served as an honorary pall bearer, sent word that the necessity of finishing his message to the Legislature would prevent his serving. He will be represented at the funeral by his private secretary, George R. Van Namee, and Maj. Gen. Charles W. Berry.

The Manhattan Club, of which Cobb was long a member, will be represented at the funeral by Justice John V. McAvoy, Surrogate James A. Foley, George F. Harriman, Phoenix Ingraham, Edward J. Kelley, Frank C. Laughlin, Robert Linn Luce, Former Justice Edward E. McCall, George W. Middleton, Justice Alfred R. Page, Edward G. Riggs, Lyman A. Spaulding and Alfred Tilt. The Query Club, a woman's organization of which Mrs. Cobb is a member and which Mr. Cobb addressed on several occasions, will be represented by a delegation of twenty.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, D. G. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

TRIBUTES TO FRANK I. COBB BY PROMINENT PUBLIC MEN

Numerous Editors and Judges and Officials Declare He Was One of America's Greatest Editorial Writers.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Among the many tributes to the late Frank Irving Cobb, late editor of the New York World printed in the World today are:

Bernard M. Baruch: He was a great editor and a great American. His life was as gentle and true as his labor was brilliant and powerful. But I am thinking of him tonight in the personal relation of a friend, and my heart is too full of sadness for the untimely loss of my friend to say anything adequate of what he did for his country.

Frank A. Vanderlip: I am deeply sorry to hear of the death of Frank I. Cobb. I regarded him as the greatest editorial writer in America.

Gerard Swope, president, General Electric Co.: eople in general won't realize for some time the loss to the community that the death of Frank I. Cobb causes. His clear thinking and forceful writing and the expression of advanced leadership in public opinion are going to be sorely missed in the development of our democratic institutions. But the community of his friends loses even more than that—the very loving and modest personality whose memery will be cherished for many years to come.

Felix Frankfurter, Professor of Law, Harvard Law School: In Mr. Cobb's death our national life has sustained a severe loss. His influence was for sanity, tolerance and generosity. In our national history his name deserves a conspicuous place for his championship of traditional American freedom during the period of hysteria following the war. He realized that an atmosphere of freedom and fair dealing is essential for democracy.

Former Gov. Martin H. Glynn, editor, Albany Times-Union: In the death of Frank Cobb America loses one of its greatest journalists. Henry Watterson placed Frank Cobb among the ablest and most brilliant editorial writers of recent years and Watterson was right. I consider that in Frank Cobb's death one of the intellectual luminaries of this generation has been extinguished and to his mental abilities let me add a tribute to his manhood: he was as fearless as he was able, as kindly as he was just and these qualities made all who knew him respect and love him.

Finis J. Garrett, Representative in Congress from Tennessee: The most gifted editorial writer of the present decade has passed away.

Acting Mayor Hulbert of New York: The death of Frank Cobb is a great loss to the United States; he was the premier editor, and his pen always was wielded in behalf of the inarticulate millions; democracy has lost one of the foremost champions of the right.

Judge Julius M. Mayor, United States Circuit Court of Appeals: It is with profound regret that I learn of the death of Frank I. Cobb. He had an unusual grasp of public affairs and a keen understanding of events and their relation to the progress of the country.

John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times: I say of Frank Cobb, dead, what I have said to him living, that he was to us as a leader in his profession what Virgil was to Dante—our master and our guide in making our way through the mazes of this world's events by the aid of his open, plain and courageous discourse. I am personally proud of this gift of the Middle West to New York.

Rollo Ogden, editor-in-chief, New York Times: The death of Mr. Cobb brings to me a keen sense of personal loss. He had an all-conquering charm which compelled both liking and admiration. His writing bore the stamp of a powerful intellect and generous feelings. In the profession which he adorned, his passing away leaves a lamentable vacancy.

Nathan L. Miller, former Governor of New York: Frank Cobb obtained the very highest rank among American journalists. His trenchant pen and unusual power of logical analysis were employed in exposition of truth and the exposure of error. American journalism has lost one of its brightest stars and hosts of men, among whom I number myself, have lost a stalwart friend. He was a real man.

Charles E. Hughes: I learn with deep regret of the death of Frank I. Cobb. His brilliant qualities equipped him for distinguished service and his death removes a strong and independent journalist, to the loss of the nation.

Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York: With deep regret I learn of the death of my good friend, Frank I. Cobb. His fairness, his courage, his unfailing intelligence, and his great gift of stating the right as he saw it in simple, straightforward phrase, make heavy the loss to his profession. Such guides of public opinion are all too few. His kindliness, loyalty and simplicity endeared him as a friend and as adviser. As such I grieve for him and miss him.

Ida M. Tarbell: He was the soundest, finest editorial writer of our time. His effort to teach us to think honestly and act highly will never be forgotten.

Medill McCormick, Senator from Illinois: He upheld the great tradition of his great chief.

2 ST. LOUIS FIRMS TO ADMIT GUILT IN TRUST CASES

Members of Material Men's Association Seek to Arrange for Fines of $12,500 and $18,000.

FORMAL PLEADINGS BEING DRAFTED HER

Voluntary Capitulation of Companies Expected to Be Blow to Remaining Defendants.

From the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 22.—The Continental Portland Cement Co., now dissolved, and another large company holding membership in the St. Louis Material Men's Association have agreed through their attorneys, to plead guilty in the Supreme Court charges of having violated the State antitrust statutes, and pay fines of $12,500 and $18,000, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

Information of this move by two of the 14 defendants in the antitrust prosecutions against members of the association was gained from authoritative sources, but unofficially. The identity of the second company was not revealed.

Accompanied by Attorney-General Barrett, who instituted the suit in July, 1921, an attorney representing the two companies visited the Judges of the Supreme Court in chambers. Conditions of the proposed pleas, and the Attorney-General's recommendations, were placed before the court.

Voluntary capitulation of the two firms, which were said to have been leaders in shaping the defense against the prosecutions, expected to be a severe blow to the remaining defendants, should they elect to go on with the contest of the charges.

Formal Pleadings Drafted.

Formal pleadings are being drafted in St. Louis, it was learned, and are to be made in open court in a few days. Neither Barrett nor the Judges who could be reached would discuss the action, stating they could not do so properly without violating legal proprieties.

The Continental Co. was dissolved following the sale of its holdings to another company which now operates the plant, Continental, St. Louis County.

The antitrust proceedings instituted by Barrett in 1921 included corporations holding membership in the Material Men's Association, the St. Louis Lumber Trade Exchange and the St. Louis Planing Millmen's Association.

The nineteen members of the St. Louis Lumber Trade Exchange already have been found guilty, assessed an aggregate of $96,000, judgment of conditional ouster having been entered against them and suspended during good behavior.

Two Cases Unfinished.

The two trust cases which are unfinished and in which Barrett some time ago gave notice that the taking of testimony would be resumed immediately, are against members of the St. Louis Material Men's Association and members of the St. Louis Planing Mill Men's Association. It is charged in both cases, as in that of the lumbermen, that Missouri antitrust laws have been flagrantly violated.

So sweeping was the decision of the Supreme Court in the lumber case that representatives of

It is charged in both cases, as in that of the lumbermen, that Missouri antitrust laws have been flagrantly violated.

So sweeping was the decision of the Supreme Court in the lumber case that representatives of the State felt jubilant as they prepared to complete the other two prosecutions. They were blocked for a time in one, by the reported illness of the head of one of the large firms. In the course of exchanges with regard to settings for the two cases, talk of settlement began and it is known that the Attorney-General has listened to the suggestions of several attorneys, most of which were not satisfactory, however, Barrett holding out for higher fines than they were willing to pay.

Barrett Silent on Matter.

Barrett from the start has declined to discuss these negotiations. Today he said, "I must decline to affirm or deny any report that you may have. If I have discussed any settlement with any attorney it would be highly unethical for me to disclose that fact before it becomes a matter of court record."

Rassieur Says Firms Would Rather Pay Than Go to Trial.

Theodore Rassieur, of the law firm of Jourdan, Rassieur & Pierce, representing the Continental Co. and another of the defendants in the suits, yesterday stated the dissolution of the Continental concern led to the negotiations.

"We are trying to reach some adjustment, and agree on the proper amounts to pay," Rassieur said. "We would rather pay certain amounts to get out than to take chances on litigation." He declared it was not a case of pleading guilty, but of settling, as in a civil damage suit.

Attorneys for the company said to be involved with the Continental in the negotiations last night declined to authorize a statement that such a stage had been reached. Officers of the company referred inquiries to company counsel.

Anarchist Central Figure in Suicide of French Royalist's Son

—Pacific & Atlantic Photograph.

GEORGES VIDAL, editor of "Libertaire," French anarchistic organ, who is accused of causing the suicide by suggestion of young Philippe Daudet, 16-year-old son of Leon Daudet, leader of the French Royalists. Young Daudet spent the last three days of his life in Paris with Vidal, and died by his own hand, a convert to anarchy. Bitter enmity exists between Vidal and the elder Daudet, and Daudet accused Vidal of winning his impressionable young son to anarchy by way of revenging himself on Daudet. Vidal, on the other hand, contends that it was with the utmost difficulty that he prevented young Daudet from killing his father by way of demonstrating how completely he was won from royalism. The photograph shows Vidal going to court to answer to the preliminary hearing on Daudet's charge. The case has caused great political interest in Paris.

OPTION TO BUY CHASE FOR $3,620,000 TAKEN

Syndicate Offering $400,000 of Stock for Sale—Ulman to Retire From Management.

An option to purchase Hotel Chase for $3,620,000 has been obtained by a syndicate represented by Roy F. Britton, attorney. The hotel, at the northeast corner of King's highway and Lindell boulevard, was opened Oct. 1, 1922.

The present owner of the hotel is Chase Ulman. The S. W. Straus Co., of Chicago holds a first mortgage for $2,700,000 and an individual has a second mortgage for $320,000. The purchase would be subject to these. In letters being mailed by Britton to prospective investors, $400,000 in stock in the syndicate is offered for sale.

Ulman, in admitting an option has been given, said that he understood the syndicate was pleased with results so far. He said he would have $300,000, a half interest, in the hotel should the syndicate sell the required amount of stock, but that he would not be as active in its management as now.

"I've been working hard for the last few years and I intend to take a rest and travel," Ulman said. "I don't think I'll do any more building for a year or so."

Ulman said a "certain percentage" of the first mortgage has already been paid off. He placed this amount at $60,000.

Ulman has figured prominently in recent apartment and hotel projects. In addition to Hotel Chase, he built the Chester Apartments, Branscombe Hotel, Cathedral Apartments and Neatherby Hall Apartments.

Britton was in Chicago yesterday. He is expected back in St. Louis tomorrow.

BRITISH LABOR TO TEMPER PROGRAM TO WIN LIBERALS

er and the local authorities of considerable expenditure. But still further measures for meeting unemployment could be taken by administrative or legislative section. Labor in power could:

Extend and develop the trades facility act, under which credits are advanced to enterprises, both home and foreign, which entail employment for the British worker.

Set on foot national schemes for the development of roads, waterways, land reclamation and of forestation.

Fix the leaving-age from school of children at 16 and make provision for maintenance grants in order to relieve the parents' financial strain.

To get the money for these schemes the labor government would attempt to bring down the costs of the army, navy and air forces to a pre-war basis.

Would Seek Tax Reductions.

In the next budget with the hope of Liberal support, Labor would seek to reduce the taxes on tea, sugar, coffee and cocoa and abolish the entertainment tax; make up the deficit thus caused by raising the super-tax and increasing the death duties on the understanding that, with the passing of the legislation needed to impose the capital levy, these additional taxes would be removed; include a proposal for the taxation of land values; abolish royalties on coal and other mining; re-establish the agricultural wage boards; give credit facilities to farmers; offer a subsidy to agriculture, provided there were stringent control over production and prices; prevent any further inroads on education, trade boards, factory inspection, medical service, etc; remove the disabilities on old age pensions and later utilize the receipts from the land value tax to operate a scheme for mothers pensions.

CABINET NAMES SAID TO BE ON BOOTLEG LIST

Wheeler Demanding Publication of Roster Taken in Dry Raids.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Dry forces are throwing a pre-Christmas scare into thousands of Washington bootleggers and hooch purchasers. They threaten to charge 2000 persons whose names were found in the possession of a group of alleged rum sellers, with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act.

It is reported by police officers who made several arrests yesterday and the day before that the names of two Cabinet members, several members of Congress and a number of diplomats are among those listed as customers by the persons taken into custody.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Antisaloon League, is demanding the publication of the names on the lists. He believes that they can be tried for conspiring with booze venders to violate the Volstead act. Thus far the city and Federal authorities have given out no names except those of the so-called bootleggers.

The Secretary of State is watching developments in the present drive on bootleggers. He will give prompt attention to evidence that any accredited official of a foreign Government has been engaged in illicit use of intoxicating liquors. It was made clear today that if any such diplomat is found guilty he will have to leave this country.

BONUS FOES GOING BACK TO HOMES TO STIR UP SUPPORT

With Congress in Recess, G. O. P. Leaders Are Hopeful of Enlisting Aid Against Measure.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Congress is to be asked to make a comprehensive and scientific inquiry into the subject of taxes and other exactions levied upon the public, for the conduct of Government.

The plan is an outgrowth of President Coolidge's proposal to reduce Federal taxes as represented in the plan submitted by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. It is sponsored by Representative Garner of Texas, ranking Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee. Garner is opposed to the Mellon plan as it now stand, but announces that his mind is open on tax revision generally and that at the proper time he will move that the Ways and Means Committee authorize and conduct the investigation he proposes. His aim is not only a reduction of taxes, but the bringing about of co-ordination between Federal, State and local taxes directly imposed, together with the indirect burdens registered by transportation charges, tariff exactions, etc.

No action will be taken by Garner until it is determined what disposition will be made of the soldier bonus, because he points out it is folly to attempt legislation until what it is known extraordinary charges will have to be met.

With Congress in recess it became evident today that Republican leaders are going back home for the purpose of making a drive against the soldier bonus. Public sentiment in opposition to the bonus will be welcomed by many Representatives who have voted for it in the past and who are prepared to vote for it again, unless justified in changing their attitude by evidence of an altered attitude in public opinion.

Supporters of the administration are by no means discouraged in their fight against the bonus. They say several Representative have already indicated their intention of voting to sustain a presidential veto and strangely enough the most vigorous fight to sustain the President is being made now in the House rather than in the Senate.

Supporters of the administration are hopeful enough sentiment in favor of tax reduction and against bonus will develop between now and the time Congress reconvenes so that a definite stand may be made against the bonus advocates.

While there is little hope among administration supporters of preventing the bonus from passing, owing to the fact many Representatives feel they should vote consistently with their past records, there is a chance, the same members believe, of preventing the bonus bill from even being presented for passage over the President's veto.

Those who express this hope call attention to the fact that the American Legion which is supporting the bonus includes but a small part of the former service men, and that the Legion itself is believed to be divided on the question. Use is being made of the argument, also that with the passage of the bonus will come later a demand for pension legislation. Estimates are being made of what a charge a pension system will be on the country, but if they are paid to world war veterans on the scale paid to civil war soldiers, the annual tax burden, it is roughly estimated, will be in the neighborhood of $4,000,000,000 a year and covering a long period in the future.

Some of the advocates of the bonus, who fear such a burden plus the bonus charge would be a menace to the future of the country, are planning to make granting the bonus conditional upon a definite legislative pledge never to pay pensions to the world war veterans.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The Mellon tax reduction plan cannot pass the Senate without the aid of at least eight Democratic votes, it is said in a letter from Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, made public today by W. W. Nichols, president of the American Manufacturers' export association.

"I approve in large part the Mellon plan and will gladly support tax reductions if we can pass it through the Senate," he said.

"The Republicans do not control the Senate. There are about ten so-called Republicans who will not only oppose the Mellon plan, but will support radical amendments to the present revenue law, which if adopted, would result in business stagnation. If we can get about eight Conservative Democrats to vote for a sensible revision and against all radical amendments to the revenue law, I think we can secure favorable action."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—A plan to pay each former service man a cash bonus of $500 by imposing a special tax on "war profiteers" was presented to President Coolidge today by officers of the Private Soldier and Sailors' Legion.

NO ATTENTION PAID TO TCHITCHERIN'S FORGERY CHARGE

State Department Officials Convinced Revolutionary Instructions to Workers' Party Were Authentic.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The confidence of officials of the State Department in the authenticity of the revolutionary "instructions" to the Workers Party of America, "to put the Red Flag on the White House," made public a few days ago, was unshaken today.

The charge made by Russian Foreign Minister Tchitcherin yesterday that the document is a forgery apparently aroused no concern at the department where it was indicated that administration officials feel wholly competent to pass upon the authenticity of documents which come into their possession.

Not the slightest disposition was shown today to retreat in any degree from the declaration that the Communist Third Internationale and the Soviet Government of Russia, are, for all practical purposes, one and the same thing.

In fact, Tchitcherin's declaration that the Soviet Government has never sent any documents to the Workers Party of America and his forgery charge, are regarded as propaganda in and of themselves calculated to mislead American opinion into believing that there is a real difference between Third Internationale and the Soviet regime.

As viewed by the State Department, the Soviet is an organ of the Communist party, while the Third Internationale is the same party's organ for the spreading of propaganda throughout the world.

Officials apparently welcomed Tchitcherin's charge that the revolutionary "instructions" made public were forgeries, although it was noted with interest that he confined his denial to the declaration that the Soviet Government proper had not sent them to America. It is argued here that if the Soviet Government itself was in no way responsible for the "instructions" and has no connection whatever with the Third Internationale, Tchitcherin and other Soviet officials should not be concerned to have the authenticity of these and other documents established through negotiation before an impartial tribunal.

Newspaper Containing Alleged "Forged Article" Sought.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 22.—Efforts are being made to locate the date and number of the Izvestia (official organ of the soviet regime) in which Secretary of State Hughes says the editor, Steckloff, acknowledged the close connection between the soviet government and the communist internationals. All the files of the paper are available here, but as yet no date has been given for the statement which Mr. Hughes says the Izvestia published.

It is maintained that in any event such utterances became a moot point when Steckloff, in a long article, denied that he wrote what had been ascribed to him and challenged the production of the date when the article appeared. He further branded the entire document as a "forgery."

Evidence Seized in Raid on Communists Offered.

By the Associated Press.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 22.—O. L. Smith, assistant attorney general of Michigan, announced today he will wire the chairman of the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee offering to submit evidence seized by the State in a raid on a communist convention in support of the claim that revolutionary propaganda from Russia is being circulated in this country.

Smith has the original of a message sent to the convention, which was held in Berrien County, Mich., in August, 1922, signed by "Bukharin, Rodek and Kuusinen." The message, he asserts was brought from Moscow by foreign delegates about May 1 of the same year. The three men who signed it, he alleges, were officers of the Communist Internationale, and were also Soviet officers. The message, according to Smith, contained instructions from the Communist Internationale to the Communist party of America.

The message which was seized in the raid and said by Smith to have come direct fom Moscow, states that the "Workers must unequivocally refuse to obey capitalistic laws" and that "we must urge the working class to the violent destruction of the entire legal machinery and the defeat by any means of the Government's attempt to confine the revolutionary party to underground channels."

Smith conducted the state's case against the persons taken in the raid. Seventy-two persons were named in the complaint. About half were apprehended. They demanded separate trials and two of them, Charles E. Ruthenberg and William Z. Foster of Chicago, were tried. The Foster case resulted in a disagreement. Ruthenberg was convicted but an appeal to the state supreme court is pending.

SWEETHEARTS OF 40 YEARS AGO TO WED

Another Marriage to Unite Mascoutah Man, 70, and Widow He Met in Berlin.

Two romances, one the "love-through-the-years" kind, the other the "over-the-ocean" type, are nearing the "happy ending" stage for four persons, all more than 50 years old.

One is that of Emil W. Zinser, 59, of Denver, and Mrs. Kate Becherer, 54, of Belleville. They were sweethearts at Belleville when Zinser was 20 and Mrs. Becherer, then Miss Kate Wachtel, was 15 years old. Her parents objected to Zinser's suit, however, and he went West, supposing that the romance was over.

For 39 years, until last Friday, the couple had not seen each other. In the meantime both married; only to become widower and widow, respectively, years later. About two months ago, Mrs. Becherer accidentally met a brother of Zinser in a Belleville hospital. The brother wrote Zinser, now a painting contractor at Denver, and the latter at once began corresponding with Mrs. Becherer. Friday, he came to Belleville to see his former sweetheart. Yesterday they announced their intention to wed.

The principals in the other romance are Martin Ritzel, 70, of Mascoutah, Ill., and Mrs. Minna Wurl, 59, of Berlin, Germany. Ritzel met Mrs. Wurl 10 years ago in Berlin when on a visit to his former home. He was married at the time, but later his wife divorced him. Another marriage in America was followed a few years ago by the death of his second wife.

Ritzel and Mrs. Wurl, who had become a widow, began corresponding. Recently, she complained of the hardships of life in Germany. Ritzel's answer was a proposal of marriage. She accepted, came to America, and was met at Union Station yesterday by Ritzel. They will be married on Christmas day at Mascoutah.

3 ERASURES IN 1919 TAX BOOKS DISCOVERED

Assessment on Property in Name of Cohens Reduced in Two of Cases.

Three reductions of assessments by erasures on the 1919 tax books have been discovered by investigators for the Comptroller's office, it was reported yesterday.

One reduced the assessment of Louis Cohen $10,000 and another reduced assessment on property held in the name of Louis and Sarah Cohen $10,000.

The corresponding Cohen assessments for this year were reduced $10,000 each by erasures, as has been told. Investigation will be made of tax records for 1920, 1921 and 1922, the books for 1919 having been taken up first so that supplementary tax bills might be sent out before the outlawing of the obligations.

The 1919 reduction for Louis Cohen was on property at 2815 Dickson street. The assessment shown on the Assessor's blotter book was $15,000, but the tax books sent to the Collector placed the assessment at $5000. The property held by Louis and Sarah Cohen was reduced from $15,280 to $5280.

Property held in the name of Julia C. January et al., Frank Koers, leasee, was reduced from $179,710 to $79,710, by erasure of the first figure.

Mrs. Julia C. January, 5101 Westminster place, said last night that she had paid the taxes on the property on which the assessment is shown to have been reduced. She said she does not remember any of the details, as it was four years ago.

Besides the three erasures, 91 errors, some trivial, were discovered in the 1919 tax books. Prosecution for any wrongful alteration of the Assessor's records in 1919 is barred by the statute of limitations. Louis Wollbrinck was Assessor in 1919.

Thompson said he was going to his sister in Washington. He plans to write of his experiences and the treatment received while in prison.

Red Tape Held Political Prisoners Several Days.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Departmental red tape operated to keep the political prisoners in jail several days after the order of the President commuting their sentences to expire at once.

The President acted on the cases last Saturday. It was expected that the prisoners, all of whom were at Leavenworth, would be freed in time to reach their homes by Christmas. But the Department of Justice, it was learned today, did not wire the commutation order to Leavenworth. The warrants of commutation were sent by registered mail.

U. R. REORGANIZATION PLAN UP TO LAMM

Special Master to Make Report to Judge Faris on Move to Force Action.

A forced reorganization of the United Railways, as proposed by counsel for some of the interests involved, would cost about $9,000,000 in interest and other costs, Special Master Lamm was told by St. Louis bankers yesterday, in a hearing of an application by Receiver Wells to issue $4,100,000 of receivership certificates to take up underlying bonds now in default.

Should these bonds not be taken up by Jan. 10 the entire $30,000,000 issue of general four per cent bonds will automatically go to default, and to refinance this issue would necessitate a new issue of this sum, but at a much higher rate of interest.

Charles W. Bates, counsel for Receiver Wells, said Judge Faris had given leave to file the application, which, if granted, would give about one year's time to effect a reorganization by preventing a default in the general 4 per cent bonds.

The plan was objected to by Samuel Jeffries, counsel for the suburban bondholders' committee, who said the plan already had been threshed out before Judge Faris and rejected by him. He added that this application was an attempt to overule Judge Faris.

F. O. Watts, president of the First National Bank; Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., and A. L. Shapleigh, corporate president of the United Railways, testified that a reorganization forced by foreclosure of the general 4 per cent bonds would prevent an effective permanent reorganization of the company.

They testified they were at work on a feasible plan that contemplated long-time franchises and the immediate expenditure of $5,000,000 for extensions of lines and other improvements. It was Wade who testified that he had calculated the probable cost of refinancing the company under present conditions, should there be a forced reorganization, and found that it would be at least $9,000,000. This, he said, would be avoided if the reorganization was not forced by a default in bonds.

Col. A. T. Perkins, manager for the receiver, testified that business was improving with the company and presented figures in support of Bates' argument that nothing was to be lost by granting sufficient time to effect a proper reorganization.

Special Master Lamm took the subject under advisement and will report his recommendations to Judge Faris, probably before Jan. 2.

OSTRACISED FOR ADOPTING YOUTH TRIED FOR MURDER

Vestryman Given Cold Shoulder by Congregation Though Boy Was Acquitted of Charge.

SAYS RECTOR DOES NOT SPEAK TO HIM

Asserts Church Official in New Jersey Town Said He Would Throw Lad Out of Edifice.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MADISON, N. J., Dec. 22.—Francis Kluxen III has become the Dreyfus of this little town and of Convent, the one adjoining. The boy, who two years ago, when but 14, was quickly acquitted of the charge of murdering 11-year-old Jeanette Lawrence, is about to become the heir and adopted son of Monell Sayre, executive vice president of the Pension Fund of the Episcopal church of America and as the result of Mr. Sayre's action, Grace Church here, its vestrymen and the most notable citizens of the fashionable suburb of Convent, N. J., are ostracising Sayre.

Tells of Ostracism.

Sayre made these statements today in his home in Convent. He related the occurences at a vestry meeting called last night in Grace Church, and said that one of the vestrymen threatened to "throw Francis Kluxen out of Grace Church if the boy ever set foot in it again."

"The meeting," said Sayre, "was called for the one purpose of considering my relations with Francis and my having brought him last Sunday to Grace Church. I am not trying to proselyte for the Episcopal Church and Francis is a Catholic who attends the chapel of St. Elizabeth's convent. He merely came with me to visit the church."

Sayre then said as a result of this visit, the Rev. Vicar W. Moire, rector of Grace Church refuses to speak to him. He said that the people of this town and of the convent, who were formerly his social companions turn their backs upon him at the railroad station. Sayre himself is a vestryman of the church and has no intention of resigning.

Says He Won't Resign.

"I am not the resigning kind," he said. "For one thing, the action I am taking to adopt Francis is the result of my own investigation of his case and his handicap. He is not only a bright boy, of great courage and fine character, as my 18 months with him have demonstrated, but he is a boy who has a hard fight ahead of him. He has been proved innocent, and the evidence against him in this awful crime was so flimsy that former District Attorney Miles and State Attorney-General McCran would not even prosecute him."

Sayre described the convocation of the notables in this section when it was learned over a year ago that Francis Kluxen was a member of the Sayre household, which consists of Sayre, his cousin, Mrs. Friend Pitts, and her husband, a retired banker.

According to Sayre, Mrs. Pitts received a telephone call from a woman neighbor, the wife of a member of the New York Stock Exchange, whose identity has not been given. This woman demanded that Sayre remove Francis from the home. Mrs. Pitts told her cousin, who wrote to the husband and ascribed the telephone demand to a "woman's charming whim."

Following this, the notables convened and called Sayre to be examined. He, in turn, refused and invited them to his home. They came, demanded that the boy be sent away, were refused, all in the politest phraseology. Then the notables stiffly withdrew and have remained withdrawn.

Files Adoption Petition.

Sayre today made a formal petition to the County Court in Morristown for the adoption of Francis Kluxen III. The boy was in court, as were his father and mother. The parents are willing to allow the adoption, not only because they have formed a deep affaction for Sayre, but because they realize that their son will need every advantage to protect himself in the fight against a minority that considers him guilty of an atrocious crime.

"Everything I have is for the boy," said Sayre. "I am a bachelor, 48, with no near relatives, and while I think Francis has the character to win in his fight and to make his own living, I nevertheless shall give him what I have to provide the weapons of education and money in his battle."

Denial by Rector.

At the meeting of the vestry last night, all but three vestrymen were present. A. C. Puddington, warden of Grace Church and a member of the vestry, denied that a threat of physical violence to keep the boy from the church had been made.

"I do not want to be cross-examined on the matter," he said. "There was no threat made."

Dr. Moire said he was "surprised that Mr. Sayre said he had not spoken to him."

"I would speak to Mr. Sayre any minute," said the clergyman. I am deeply concerned that there should be any misunderstanding. I have no personal feelings in regard to the boy, and there was no action whatever taken in the matter. It would be a great pity to injure our little church here and, I wish it to be emphasized that no action was taken in the Kluxen matter."

EXPEDITION WILL SEEK 'BLOND INDIANS' IN PANAMA

American Professors Hope to Find Tribe Reported by Explorer—Hope to Find Ancient Ruins.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 22.—The University of Rochester will send Dr. Herman L. Fairchild, emeritus professor of geology, as its representative on the expedition that will sail the first week in January to seek the home of the tribe of white Indians in the unexplored lands of Panama, it was announced today.

Richard O. Marsh, of Brockport, leader of the expedition, is the discoverer of the tribe, having seen some of its members on a former journey into the Panama wilds, according to Dr. Fairchild.

The geology professor, who is 73 years old, said today that he planned to confine his studies largely to the geological structure of the district, said to be the abode of the blond aborigines.

Plan to Use Airplanes.

Airplanes furnished by the United States Army, may be used to penetrate the district, bombing planes being used to transport the explorers from the Canal Zone to the mouth of the Chucumaque River.

"Mr. Marsh has told me that we will go up the Chucumaque River as far as possible by boat," Dr. Fairchild said. "From the headwater, exploration of nearby territory will be made. Then a small party, headed by Mr. Marsh, will penetrate the unknown region to find the blond Indians, and, if possible, establish friendly relations with them. When that is accomplished, the larger party may move in to take up the work of studying this strange people and their territory.

"It is barely possible that ancient ruins may be found there. If these blond Indians are the descendants of some race that antedated the dark Indian, there may be relics of their former civilization. A suggestion of this comes from the old and highly decorated ruins in Yucatan, Central America, and Peru."

Said to Use Eight-Foot Bows.

A motion picture camera operator will accompany the expedition, Prof. G. L. Baer, representing the Smithsonian Institute and the National Museum at Washington, and Prof. Breder, of the American Museum of Natural History, will be members of the party.

Marsh said today that the expedition had planned to sail early in December, but had been delayed because of the winter maneuvers of the American fleet around Panama, which has kept busy the airmen who may be assigned to carry the explorers from the zone to their base of explorations. A large variety of gifts will be taken along, he said, to aid in winning the favor of the barbarous and warlike tribes. A bow and set of arrows, the best obtainable, will be taken as a gift to the chief of the blond Indians.

These blond fighters are said to be adept in handling the bow. They have weapons that are eight feet long, it is said.

EFFORT TO EXTRADITE WOMAN IN KLAN CASE

Mrs. Weaver Insists She Was in Chattanooga on Date of Coburn Murder.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Dec. 22.—With requisition in his possession, an agent of the office of Solicitor General John A. Boykin tonight left for Birmingham, Ala., to make an effort to return Mrs. Margaret Weaver, indicted as an accessory before the fact in the slaying of William S. Coburn, Ku Klux Klan attorney to this state for trial.

Mrs. Weaver has denied that she was implicated in the killing of Coburn. She also denied she was in the State on November 5, when Coburn was shot, and said she would oppose extradition. She was arrested in Birmingham today.

Philip E. Fox, klan editor, who was found guilty of murdering Coburn and sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday, declined to comment on the verdict. Testimony that he was in the company of Mrs. Weaver shortly before he shot Coburn was offered during the trial. The woman also was said to have had the pistol used in the slaying in her possession at one time.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 22.—Mrs. Margaret Weaver, arrested here today, told detectives that she was in Chattanooga on the date that Philip E. Fox, former publicity director for the Ku Klux Klan killed William S. Coburn, and that she was not certain "whether she ever knew either Fox or Coburn."

She said that she proposed, if necessary, to produce hotel records to show that she was in Chattanooga on the date mentioned. She made no effort to conceal her identity, when the officers arrested her, telling them, "I am the woman indicted in Atlanta." When arrested she was registered at a downtown hotel as Mrs. E. M. Williams. She told detectives she was en route to a farm seven miles from Birmingham.

WALTON CASE BEFORE U. S. SUPREME COURT

Petition Filed for Review of Impeachment on Ground of Prejudice.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Formal application to review the impeachment of former Governor Walton of Oklahoma was made to the United States Supreme Court today by his attorneys. The petition alleged prejudice on the part of the Oklahoma Senate, which removed the Governor and against the Oklahoma House, which preferred the charges against him.

Never before has the Supreme Court been asked to review the impeachment of a state officer. The grounds upon which today's action was based was the "due process" provision of the Federal Constitution. Governor Walton's counsel declared he had been denied due process of law by being tried by prejudiced Judges, a majority of whom, it was alleged, were members of the klan.

Presented to Full Court.

The petition was presented to the full court, in chambers. Associate Justice Vandeventer recently was asked to grant a writ in the case individually, but he deferred action. Today's plea cannot be acted on by the court until the present holiday recess ends, January 2.

The klan was charged in Governor Walton's brief with having obtained control of the Oklahoma government and, by the impeachment of Gov. Walton, of having denied the people of Oklahoma protection. Various alleged cases of mob violence, flogging and imprisonment of citizens by klan members were alleged.

The Governor presented facts during the trial, the brief declared "clearly showing a conspiracy between a majority of the members of the court and an agreement in advance to convict and remove" the executive. It was declared that Governor Walton was entitled to a judicial trial and "an opportunity to be tried by Judges unprejudiced and qualified to sit in judgment."

"The facts averred," the brief continued, "must be accepted on their face as true. Then the petitioner had no trial. It was no more nor less than a party having his case prejudiced by conspirators under an agreement to remove him unlawfully from the high office to which he had been elevated by the people of the state."

Injury to Reputation Alleged.

Supreme Court review of the impeachment was asked for on the ground that Gov. Walton "may not be degraded from his high office, with all the attendant dishonor, disgrace and financial injury, by super-Government, pre-judgment, or conspiracy; that the will of the people of a sovereign state shall not be stricken down by the influence of any 'empire,' visible or invisible."

The impeachment, the brief declared, injured Governor Walton's name and reputation and it was added that "the people of Oklahoma are thereby exposed to anarchy, insurrection and their attendant evils, and subjected to the government and domination of the aforesaid secret society known as 'The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan' and 'The Invisible Empire,' and that the will of the people of the State of Oklahoma, regularly ascertained and declared at their election, has been set at naught, stricken down, nullified and overcome."

MEXICAN REBELS IN FULL RETREAT TO VERA CRUZ

Will Make Last Stand There Against Pursuing Federal Forces—City of Puebla Evacuated.

By the Associated Press.

NOGALES, Ariz., Dec. 22.—Revolutionary forces on the front east of Mexico City are conducting a continuous retreat toward Vera Cruz, where they will make a last stand to defeat Federal forces who are pursuing them, according to intercepted rebel messages made public by the Mexican consulate here today.

By the Associated Press.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 22. — The rebels have evacuated the city of Puebla "for reasons of military expediency," it is announced by their headquarters here. They had held the city for several days.

23 Mexican Deputies Issue Manifesto Blaming Obregon.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 22.—A manifesto issued by 23 members of the Mexican National Chamber of Deputies, and made public by Ruben Vivcarra, vice president of the Chamber of Deputies, and representative in San Antonio of Adolfo de la Huerta, lays the blame of the revolutionary outbreak on President Obregon.

It declares that the President for many months has failed to respect the freedom of municipalities, "the fundamental basis of our democratic function, thereby threatening the existence of the entire popular representative organization of our Government, which organization guides the destinies of the nation."

In ousting constitutional Boards of Aldermen, by direction of unscrupulous Governors, supported by the President, flagrant violations of the sovereignty of the states occurred, and "useless were the decisions of the Supreme Court in the cases of the states of Nuevo Leon, Michoacan and San Luis Potosi. Useless were the express commands of the national Senate in relation to the election of Deputies to Congress of the State of Zacatecas, and useless also were the indisputable constitutional prerogatives of the government of the State of Coahuila, which was deposed by the cruel and tyrannical hand of the President."

The manifesto charges that Gen. Arnulfo R. Gomez, with the protection of the President, prepared to assassinate en masse the members of the Cooperatista bloc in the House of Representatives.

Obregon is charged with consenting to, and ordering, the arrest of Federal legislators and constitutional Governors.

Mexican Women to Discuss Means of Stopping War.

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 22.—Mexican women without distinction of social classes will meet soon in the city of Mexico to discuss measures which will be adopted in an effort to stop the fighting which has broken out on Mexican soil, according to press dispatches reaching San Antonio tonight. The invitation, issued by a group of women in the capital, follows:

"It is the duty of the women of Mexico to see that the civil war is stopped at once and that Christmas with all its glory which is celebrated happily throughout the world and which always has been observed by the great Mexican family, be met with peace."

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Dec. 22.—A telegram received this morning by D. D. Laussault, representative of the De La Huerta Government, stated that Gen. Marcial Cavazos, commander of the Obregon troops at Apizaco, had announced his allegiance to the revolutionary cause. Gen. Lopez Paylo has also joined the revolution, the telegram stated. These former Obregonista officers are said to be in command of approximately 2000 troops.

MANAGER DENIES M'ADOO IS FOR U. S. RAIL OWNERSHIP

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Frank A. Hampton, one of the Washington campaign managers in William G. McAdoo's contest for the presidential nomination, today made clear his candidate's attitude on the Government control of railroads. In response to an editorial in a friendly Southern paper, which said that McAdoo's "preference" is said to be for Government ownership of railroads, he declared that McAdoo was for private ownership under effectual Government supervision in time of peace.

"He takes the position," Hampton explained, "that if Government regulation and supervision shall fail, eventually the Government will be forced to take over the railroads and operate them, but Mr. McAdoo is not in favor of Government ownership or operation of railroads."

Hampton said he was speaking with respect to Mr. McAdoo's position on this matter "with authority and solely for the purpose of giving information."

JEWISH FINANCIER TO PAY COST OF SCIENCE COURSES AT VIENNA UNIVERSITY

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Dec. 22.

SIGMUND BOSEL, a Jewish financier of Vienna, has untaken all the expense for the upkeep of scientific institutions in the University of Vienna, following an appeal by Chancellor Seipel. M. Doeller, president of the University, ordered all faculties to prepare a budget which is to be submitted to Bosel.

Only 30 years of age, Bosel has amassed a huge fortune during the last few years, and is considered the richest man in Austria.

The University of Vienna was closed temporarily in November because of demonstrations against Jewish students.

NEGRO ROBS COUPLE OF $750 COAT AND RINGS

Holds Them Up at Garage—$1100 in Jewelry Taken in Another Robbery.

A negro, armed with a pistol, compelled Mrs. Betty Goodman, 5370 Ridge avenue, to take off a fur coat, valued at $750, and give it to him, together with a $500 diamond ring, at 11 o'clock last night after he had held up her husband, Oscar, in front of a garage he uses at 1437 Arlington avenue.

Goodman was opening the door of the garage to put up his car, in which his wife still sat, when the negro appeared at his side and ordered him to hold up his hands. After taking Goodman's watch, valued at $100, and $22 in cash, the robber started to hurry away. A movement by Mrs. Goodman revealed her presence to him and he made her get out of the car and surrender the coat and ring.

Jewelry valued at $1100 and $25 in cash was taken from Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bloom, 6605 Kingsbury boulevard, University City, at 7:30 o'clock last night by two men who held them up in front of their apartment. The jewelry consisted of two rings, one worn by Bloom, the other by his wife. The rings were insured against holdups. The men fled in a small roadster.

Charles Post, grocer at 3500 North Ninth street, telephoned the police at 10:30 p. m. to report that he and his wife had just escaped from the ice box where they had been imprisoned ten minutes before by two robbers who took about $500, the day's receipts, from the cash register.

Philip G. Hawkins, 2019 Martha place, jewelry salesman, told the police that he was robbed of a red leather grip containing jewelry valued at $500 by two men who stepped from an alley on Sarah street between Delmar boulevard and Enright avenue at 5:45 p. m. yesterday. One of the men snatched the grip from his hand, and both ran through the alley, he said. The jewels were insured, he said.

Frank M. McKenzie, 7931 South Broadway, reported that his billfold containing $140 in $20 bills was taken from his hip pocket on a southbound Broadway car near Franklin avenue, yesterday afternoon. Two men had jostled him shortly before he discovered his loss, he said.

Max Sayatta, 16 years old, of 3958 Washington avenue, told police that at 7 p. m. he was ordered into an alley between Olive and Locust streets at Fourteenth street by a negro who held an imitation pistol. He laughed, saying, "That's not a real gun." Whereupon the negro drew a knife and cut him on the hand. He turned over $2.40, all he had.

INDEPENDENT ART SHOW OPENS FOR TEN DAYS

Experiment in Doing Without the Formal Jury May Result in Annual Exhibit.

An independent exhibition of the work of St. Louis artists opened yesterday at the galleries of the Art League, 511 Locust street, as an experiment by local artists in the elimination of the jury system in art shows here. The show is under the direction of a committee made up of recent prize winners at the Artists' Guild, with Victor Holm as chairman.

Approximately 100 pictures and examples of sculpture and handicraft are on exhibition. Attendance was not large yesterday, as the show had not been extensively heralded, but the exhibit will continue for 10 days. If sufficient interest is evinced, it is planned to make the exhibition an annual affair.

The exhibition is an outgrowth of dissatisfaction among some St. Louis artists with the jury restrictions at shows in the past. No prizes are offered in this show and the artist is his own jury, being permitted to exhibit two examples of his work that he considers his best.

The exhibition has nothing to do with the Art League policy, it was said, but was arranged at the request of the committee, which includes Kathryn Cherry, T. P. Barnett, Robert Kissack and William Schevill. The committee asked for recent work and among the exhibitors are a number of prominent St. Louis artists.

U. S. SHIPPING BOARD DENIES PARKER CHARGE

Refutes Lack of Interest in Bar Association's English Excursion Next Summer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—In a formal statement today the Shipping Board takes direct issue with the statement of Judge Alton B. Parker that the Cunarder Berengaria was chosen by the American Bar Association committee for the excursion to England next summer only because the Shipping Board manifested no interest in the matter.

The statement details the steps taken by the board to capture this business, including invitations to the president, treasurer and secretary of the Bar Association to be its guests on the trial trip of the Leviathan. Two of the Bar Association officers accepted and the excursion was discussed in detail at that time.

The statement says in part:

"Officials of the United States liner first heard of the proposed trip of the American Bar Association in October, 1922, and the assistant traffic manager at once took personal charge and got into touch with Frederick E. Wadham and arranged numerous meetings not only with him but with the committee then considering the matter, one of which meetings was held in the office of John W. Davis at which rates, ships and technical features were discussed.

"Both the S. S. Leviathan and the S. S. George Washington were offered to the committee. The United States lines were asked whether they were willing to meet any offers made by an English line and were informed that they were, which was confirmed by a letter stating 'We are prepared to make the same terms and conditions as have been or will be advanced by any of our competitors.'"

U. S. Shipping Board Takes Direct Issue With Alton B. Parker.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—Replying to criticism of the American Bar Association, in selecting the Berengaria, a British liner, for the association's trip to England next summer, Harold B. Beitler, secretay of the executive committee said today that the only reason an American vessel was not selected was the refusal of the United States Line to provide a definite and acceptable sailing date for the Leviathan, the only American ship in which the lawyers could be accommodated.

"Since our decision," he said, "we have learned what we did not know before, and what explains to us the United States Shipping Board's disinclination to deal with us in a definite business manner—that is, that the United States lines have contracted to transport the American delegation to the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the world in London in July.

"In other words, the officials of the shipping board who now criticize us for not taking the Leviathan were keeping us in the dark as to the possibility of sailing on that boat because they were negotiating with the Advertising Clubs."

Mr. Beitler added that he understood the advertising club had refused the Leviathan offer at the last moment, deciding to sail on the George Washington, with arrangement for individual members who might desire it to go on the Leviathan.

LEVIATHAN LAID UP FOR REPAIRS AFTER GROUNDING

Overhauling Engines Will Take Two Months—Then Ship Will Go Into Dry Dock.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Pending an official inquiry to fix responsibility for grounding of the Leviathan controversy raged today over causes of the mishap which lodged the giant liner in a mud bank off Staten Island for seven hours yesterday.

Repair work was started today on the Leviathan's two low pressure reversing turbines. After the overhauling, which will require about two months, the vessel will be taken to Boston for dry-docking and reconditioning.

Contrasting views were expressed by the shipping men over the statement of Pilot Joseph Bigley that the strong ebb tide and wind carried the ship off her course. Expert pilots held that the Leviathan was caught between two divergent currents flowing from the Kill von Kull and the Hudson River, which acted as a pivot and swung the ship into the mud. The reverse turbines, they say, did not respond as quickly as usual.

Other shipping men, including a Shipping Board official, criticised the pilot for holding the ship to the west side of the channel and said that the vessel, when it struck, was clear of the waters of the Kill.

DRUG PEDDLER IS SENTENCED

Sullivan Hinkle Given Four-Year Prison Term.

Sullivan Hinkle, drug addict and peddler, was sentenced to four years in Leavenworth penitentiary yesterday by Federal Judge Faris following his conviction by a jury Monday. Hinkle was arrested in March, 1922, with two other men, as they alighted from a train at Washington avenue station, with drugs in their possession. The others pleaded guilty and were given three years each. Hinkle jumped his bond and remained at large until he was arrested shortly before his trial.

ARGENTINE GIRL WINS LAURELS IN 30-MILE SWIM

Crosses River Plate in 24 Hours 19 Minutes, and Is First Person to Accomplish Feat.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 22.—A 20-year-old Anglo-Argentine girl swimmer, Lillian Harrison, has completed a swim across the River Plate, being the first person to accomplish the feat. She started yesterday from Colonia, on the Uruguayan side, and reached Punta Lara, near La Plata, a distance of about 30 miles, this morning. She swam for 24 hours and 19 minutes.

Others who have attempted to swim across the River Plate, including Enrique Tirabocchi, who swam across the English last summer, and Romero who has made several attempts to swim the English nel, swam longer distance river, but deviated from a court and failed to reach the site shore.

TWO NEGRO WOMEN AND NEGRO MAN WOUNDED IN SHOOTINGS

One Victim, Out on Bond is Murder Case, Says She Was Attacked Out of Revenge.

Two shootings last night resulted in the serious injury of two negro women and a negro man, and the arrest of a third negro woman.

Lucille Houston, under $10,000 bond for the murder of Will Skinner, 2115 Morgan street, who was killed Dec. 5, was shot in the thigh by Martha Rooks, 3 South Twenty-second street, at the corner of Twenty-second and Walnut streets. At the hospital she said that the Rooks woman was a close friend of Skinner's and shot her for revenge. The Rooks woman pleaded self defense.

Morse Malone, 21, and Lille Mav Gordon, 18, both of 118 South Twenty-first street, were taken from that address, both wounded. They told conflicting stories.

ANOTHER 5 YEARS FOR ROSS; FACES 3 MORE TRIALS

Former Liquidation Officer of Night and Day Bank Already Convicted Twice of Embezzlement.

NOW HAS TOTAL OF 10 YEARS TO SERVE

Had Offered to Go to Prison for Seven Years if All Prosecutions Were Dropped.

Convicted twice of embezzlement from what was left of Night and Day Bank funds after the institution had been wrecked and facing 10 years' imprisonment as a result, Donald W. Ross, who was State liquidation officer of the bank, has three more embezzlement charges to face.

Ross was charged in five indictments with peculations aggregating $167,000 from the wreckage. He received a five-year penitentiary term by a jury in his first trial, Dec. 5, and a similar punishment in Circuit Judge Calhoun's court yesterday. Ross predicted correctly what the second verdict would be, just before it was brought in.

Other Cases to Be Tried.

The Circuit Attorney's office intends to push prosecution of the remaining cases, trial dates for which have not been set. Appeals are expected from both convictions. Ross is at liberty under $25,000 bond.

Before the second case went to trial Friday, Ross' counsel proposed dropping the idea of appeal and entering a plea of guilty in the second case—provided the State would grant the minimum punishment of two years' imprisonment in the case in which the "guilty" plea would be made, and dismiss the remaining cases. The offer was rejected.

The trial was brief. Testimony lasted about three hours and a verdict was reached and sealed Friday night. No evidence was presented by the defense. It was shown that a check for $3342.47 sent to Ross for funds due the bank liquidation account, by Case & Miller, attorneys for the State Finance Commissioner, who were collecting obligations due the bank, had been deposited by Ross in his personal account. He carried liquidation and personal accounts in the same bank.

Other Meininger Cases.

As is known, Arthur O. Meininger, who wrecked the Night and Day Bank by defalcations amounting to $400,000 or more when he was its cashier, has been convicted of embezzlement and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. His appeal is pending and numerous other charges against him are awaiting trial.

CUSTOMER FLEES FROM STORE WITH TWO DIAMOND RINGS

Urbane Mr. "Burke" Fleeces Local Loan Company After Third Visit to Establishment.

"Mr. Burke" visited the National Loan Company, 11 North Sixth street, three times yesterday to purchase a diamond ring. He had a very bad cold and just couldn't make up his mind, but on his third visit, along about dusk, C. I. Beger, vice president, succeeded in getting him down to two rings valued at about $700 each.

"Burke" studied the two rings. He had his handkerchief in his hand when he suddenly reached a decision. He seized both rings in the handkerchief and made for the door. Beger ran out and saw him run through an alley to Broadway.

His customer, Beger said, was about 25 years old and well dressed. He introduced himself as "Burke."

R. E. COLLINS ESTATE TO WIFE

His Sister-in-Law in Her Will Provides for Publishing Son's Poems.

The wills of Attorney Robert E. Collins and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Clara S. Collins, a widow, both of whom died Dec. 18, were filed yesterday. Collins left his estate in trust of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., for the benefit of his wife, Mrs. Ida Collins. His will bears date of June 23, 1921.

There is no date on the will of the sister-in-law, who disposed of the bulk of her property to her son, Monroe S. Collins. To the Methodist Orphans' Home, 4385 Maryland avenue, and the Methodist Home for Boys at Clayton, she bequeathed $100 each and to Blanche C. Basendal, a friend, $500. A provision requires the executor to use funds of the estate to defray expense of publishing poems written by Mrs. Collins' son, Robert E., who died several years ago. She did not appoint anyone as executor but her wishes will be carried out by Harry E. Sprague as attorney for the estate. Mrs. Collins wrote in her will that she desired "a very inexpensive funeral."

ECKERT GETS 5 YEARS; $2000 FINE IN NARCOTIC CASE

Druggist for 25 Years Convicted on All of Five Counts by Jury in Federal Court.

Charles V. Eckert, who has owned neighborhood drug stores in St. Louis for 25 years and was a drug clerk for 15 years previously, faces a five-year prison term for selling habit-forming drugs in comparatively large quantities. His present store, which he has owned about two years, is at 4836 Delmar boulevard.

Following his conviction of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic act by a jury in Federal Court Friday, Eckert was sentenced to five years in the Federal penitentiary and fined $2000 by Judge Faris yesterday. In pronouncing sentence the Judge said to Eckert:

"The jury gave you a fair trial and the court feels that it has, too. The only doubt of the latter, however, is whether the dilatory tactics and deliberately offensive character of the defense in an attempt to irritate the court into commission of an error caused the court to commit error; I don't think it did."

Verne Lacy was defense counsel.

Sale of Morphine Alleged.

One of the five counts on which the druggist was found guilty charged sale without prescription of 200 morphine tablets to a Federal informer, Sept. 13, 1920, at a store the defendant owned then at Vandeventer avenue and Page boulevard, after which Eckert was arrested. The sentence on this count was for the full five years' imprisonment, plus the fine.

The other counts, under a new theory, charged filling prescriptions for narcotics in bad faith and not in the course of professional practice. Five-year concurrent prison terms were given under each of these counts. Eckert had nothing to say when he heard the sentence. He was kept at city jail temporarily while arranging for $10,000 bond under his contemplated appeal.

It was charged that filling by Eckert during the first half of 1920 of about 5000 narcotic prescriptions issued by Dr. Thomas S. Manning constituted violation of the Harrison act. Dr. Manning, as is known, was convicted of violating this law and received a 15-year penitentiary sentence, but he is to have a new trial.

Evidence of Government.

The Government's evidence, in brief, had shown: The sale without prescription of the 200 morphine tablets to the man sent by the agents; the issuance by Dr. Manning of hundreds of dope prescriptions to addicts, and the filling of some of these by Eckert; the gross disparity between volume of narcotics sold at Eckert's and at other St. Louis drug stores, and the great difference in amount of narcotics ordered on prescriptions seized at Eckert's and the amount physicians said was ordinary for proper treatments.

Chief evidence for the defense was Eckert's testimony that he had acted in good faith in filling the Manning prescription presented previously. Character witnesses were also introduced.

PRESCRIPTION WAS FILLED WRONG, $40,000 SUIT ALLEGES

William Krummenacher, an Overland Druggist, Says Package Was Delivered by Mistake.

Suit for $40,000 damages alleging a mistake in filling a prescription, was filed at Clayton yesterday by Carey Potter of Overland against William Krummenacher, an Overland druggist.

Potter's suit is in behalf of his 2-year-old daughter, Daisy Irene. It alleges that a prescription for the infant was "carelessly and unskillfully filled with another and different drug which was poisonous when given to one of her tender age." This was in June, 1921. The girl, the petition states, had only a slight illness, but the drug made her "sick, helpless and prostrate" and she will continue that way for life.

Krummenacher said a physician had prescribed aspirin for the girl and that he filled it exactly as ordered, but a delivery boy, by mistake, had delivered another package containing aspirin in 5-grain capsules. As soon as he learned of the mistake he sent the messenger back to recover the package, but Mrs. Potter, he said, refused to give it up and ran the boy away, saying she had already given some of the aspirin to her daughter. Krummenacher added that the package delivered through error bore the name and address of another person and should not have been accepted at the Potter home.

Safe Carried Away by Robbers Found.

The 300-pound safe which Otto A. Kadlowsky, a salesman, of 4156 Lucky street, reported had been carried away from that address some time between 9 a. m. and 3 p. m. Friday, was found yesterday beside Lackland road, near Marion avenue, St. Louis County. The door had been forced and $103 in cash taken. Some antique jewelry and private papers of Kadlowsky were left in the safe by the cracksmen.

ments. The loss was $30,000. One fireman was overcome by smoke and another was injured by falling timbers.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS IN CITY INSTITUTIONS

City Hall Observance, With Community Singing, to Be Held Friday Night.

St. Louis' municipal Christmas celebration will be held at City Hall next Friday night, but patients at several of the city institutions are already enjoying a series of entertainments, extending in some instances throughout the week.

The City Hall program, under the auspices of the Division of Parks and Playgrounds, will begin in the rotunda of the hall at 8 p. m., with community singing of "America." There will be dances by municipal playground girls and by girls of the Grand Boulevard Community Center, a "greetings" address by the Mayor, vaudeville specialties and selections by a quartet, "Holy Night" and "O Come All Ye Faithful," as well as songs of the jazz variety, will be sung by all who care to join in.

At the end of the program dancing will begin in all the main corridors of the building. Christmas trees are to be placed on the Market street side of the hall and of the Municipal Courts Building, with a larger tree between the two structures.

Program at Hospital.

Christmas began for the patients at the City Sanitarium last Thursday, when the school children of the institution gave an entertainment for the other patients. Friday caroling and other musical programs were given and Saturday the occupational therapy department entertained the patients. Today the Daughters of Isabella will offer a vaudeville show, with presents for each of the children. Tomorrow about 100 of the children will have a Christmas party at Arcadia Hall, after which they will be taken to a motion picture show.

On Christmas eve "Santa Claus" will visit the different wards with toys, donated by the Daughters of Job, for all the children. The Masonic order has sent a filled stocking for each child, and Mrs. C. A. Bauer has given seven buckets of candy for the patients. There will be 18 Christmas trees set up in different parts of the institution. A chicken dinner, with seasonal trimmings, will be served Christmas day.

Christmas carols and the distribution of gifts will begin Christmas day at Koch Hospital, where a chicken dinner will also be served. In the evening motion pictures will be shown. Entertainments already given at the institution include a party Friday for all school children, and a musical program and gift distribution Saturday by the Cheer Club.

Carol Singing.

Carol singing by various groups, beginning this afternoon and extending through Christmas day, will help in bringing the holiday spirit to the city hospital. Dancing and orchestral numbers will also be given, before the distribution of oranges, candy and other gifts. Each mother and baby in the maternity division will receive gifts also from the Episcopal Church. After-Christmas events include a motion picture show next Wednesday night, visits Friday from the Helpers of Holy Souls, and a musical for the employes Saturday by Mrs. Howard Watson, for the Board of Religious Organizations.

Violin, piano and vocal selections, Christmas carols and fancy dances are on the program for an entertainment tomorrow at the city dispensary. Gifts will be distributed to the children.

A program of similar nature will be given Christmas eve at city hospital No. 2, for negro patients. On Christmas day "movies" will be shown. Pupils of the Waring Branch School last Friday gave a Christmas play for the children.

BOOKKEEPER RELEASED AFTER ERROR IN AUDITING IS FOUND

Erwin L. Wieland Was Arrested Friday Because of Alleged Discrepancies in Accounts.

Erwin L. Wieland, 27 years old, who was arrested Friday because of alleged discrepancies in his bookkeeping accounts at the W. S. Donaldson Printing and Lithographing Co., was released following the announcement of officials of the company that there had been an error in auditing the books.

Wieland was arrested at the request of City Collector Edmond Koeln, who was on a $5000 security bond for the bookkeeper, after he had been informed by officials of the printing company that Wieland had left his job Dec. 3 and that an audit had disclosed discrepancies. In 1920 Wieland was sentenced to two years in prison for embezzling $10,000 from the Skinner-Kennedy Stationery Co., where he was employed as bookkeeper.

Make Fig Jam for Christmas Dinner

Easily made at home from Alice Bradley's New Recipe.

Something unusual, delicious and inexpensive is eagerly sought by every housewife for her Christmas dinner, and Miss Alice Bradley's new recipe for Fig Jam meets every requirement, and, besides, is easily made. Here is her famous recipe, which, by-the-way, makes the finest layer cake filling you ever tasted.

FIG JAM

Soak ½ pound figs in one cup water over night. Cut in strips, using scissors. Add juice of one lemon and 2¼ cups sugar, bring to boiling point, and boil vigorously one minute, stirring to prevent burning. Add 1-3 cup (1-3 bottle) CERTO, again bring to boiling point, remove from fire, let stand until thickened slightly, then pour into glasses.

The above is only one of nearly a hundred special recipes found in the book on jams, jellies and marmalades prepared by Alice Bradley, principal of Miss Farmer's School of Cookery, Boston, Mass. Other recipes in this book which make a special appeal to the housewife at this time of the year are those for making jams from canned and dried fruits such as dried Apricot Jam, which is inexpensive and especially good. Then there are recipes for making jellies from bottled fruit juices, perhaps the most interesting of which is Grape Jelly made from Grape Juice, which is really much finer than that usually made from fresh grapes.

Try this new recipe for your Christmas Dinner, and if you are interested in making the very finest Jams, Jellies and Marmalades—many of them entirely new—at the lowest cost and with the least labor, write for a free copy of Alice Bradley's 24-page book, illustrated in six colors, "Jam, Jelly and Marmalade Making," to the Douglas-Pectin Corporation, Room 1029 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y. Better write today and get your copy before Christmas so you can try some of the other new recipes for your Holiday spreads.

IMPORTANT — Certo is pure concentrated fruit pectin made entirely from fruit, and supplies the jelly-making principle which is lacking in figs and many other dried fruits and fruit juices. That is why jams and jellies made by the short boiling Certo process look better, taste better, are more easily made and cost less.

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a Family Supply of Really Dependable Cough Medicine. Easily Prepared, and Saves About $2.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old homemade cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

During 1922 the Post-Dispatch printed 6858 Agents Wanted ads—3200 more than the THREE other St. Louis newspapers combined.

COMMUNITY FUND READY TO AID NEEDY

Enough Money Distributed to Help Deserving Poor During Christmas Period.

Enough money has been contributed through the Community Fund to provide food and clothing for the needy and there is no reason why anyone that is deserving should go without help at the Christmas period, Thomas C. Hennings, vice chairman of the fund, announced yesterday.

"The Community Fund stands ready to alleviate any distress, to give food and clothing to those who, through circumstances beyond their control, have none; and to gladden the hearts of children whom Santa Claus might not otherwise visit," Hennings said.

"There are seven organizations in the Community Fund which function in the interest of impoverished and homeless families and individuals. The Red Cross, the Provident Association, the Salvation Army, the County Welfare Association and others are equipped to meet any need. We ask that the public co-operate with us by reporting any worthy case."

It is up to the public to eliminate begging on the streets, according to E. G. Steger, general manager of the Provident Association, who has made a close investigation of mendicancy in recent months. His and other organizations are ready to take care of any man who may be out of work, he said, adding, "we can do little toward getting beggars off the streets as long as the public continues to shower them with money."

Men's All-Wool
Mufflers
95c

Brushed all-wool Mufflers with fringed ends. Shown in buff, brown and gray. Solid colors.

There'll come many a bitterly cold day when a Muffler of the caressing warmth of one of these will be a lot of comfort. 95c is little enough to pay for such a cozy, Winter-long protector. A more acceptable gift would be hard to find for so small a sum.

Other Mufflers are priced from 65c to $7.50.

"OUTSTANDING U. S. SOLDIER" IN THE WORLD WAR, RETIRED

Master Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, Possessor of 10 Decorations Quits After 22 Years of Service.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 22.—The United States army today lost Master Sergeant Samuel Woodfil designated by Gen. Pershing, as "the outstanding American soldier in the World War," and the possessor of 10 military decorations who retired with full military honors at Fort Benjamin Harrison here.

Sergeant Woodfill stood at rigid attention in a dreary rain and heard himself mustered out of the army after 22 years and five months of service. A part of the Eleventh Infantry, a battalion of the Third Field Artillery and Fifth tank platoon, 600 men in all, presented company front when Brigadier-General Dwight E. Aultman, commanding officer at Fort Harrison read the citation which put an end to Sergeant Woodfill's military service.

$5000 ALLOWED ON CHECK NOT SIGNED BEFORE SIGNER DIED

Woman's Claim Against Estate of Los Angeles Doctor, Who Expired Here, Upheld.

A claim of Miss Marie McCabe, 14 South Taylor avenue, for $5000 against the estate of Dr. Conrad H. Czarra, a former resident of Los Angeles, was allowed yesterday by Probate Judge Holtcamp. It was based on a check issued in her favor by the physician a few hours before he died at Missouri Baptist Sanitarium June 10, last. As his death took place before the payee could cash the check, it was necessary to present it as a debt against his estate.

The American Trust Co., as administrator, resisted the claim on the ground that no consideration was shown, but the court held that the check itself was prima facia evidence. Miss McCabe, who formerly was a ticket seller at the Orpheum Theater, was not permitted to testify.

Dr. Czarra's estate inventoried at $13,294. After payment of debts, the balance will go to his widow, Mrs. Jennie Czarra of Los Angeles, and a brother living in Chicago.

3000 Worthy Families to Receive Well-Filled Dinner Baskets, 10,000 Children To Be Entertained at Coliseum by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund

Pipes and Tobacco for Homeless Men to Be Distributed at Municipal and Benevolent Lodging Houses

Left—Committee at Work Packing the Baskets. Right—Baskets Waiting for the Food, Which Will be Added as Late as possible.

SANTA CLAUS, HIS SNOW MEN AND TOYS TO FROLIC IN WONDERLAND GARDEN

Arrangements Virtually Complete for 24th Annual Community Celebration—Gifts to Be Distributed to Children.

ARRANGEMENTS for the huge Christmas party at the Coliseum on Christmas morning are virtually completed. The toys and gifts for 10,000 children of Santa Claus age are ready and waiting; generous Christmas dinner baskets filled to the brim are ready for distribution to 3000 needy families tomorrow; gifts of pipes and tobacco are on hand for the homeless men cared for through the agency of municipal and benevolent lodging-houses on Christmas, and members of the executive committee are engaged in putting the finishing touches to the various activities of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association so that no unfinished details shall mar the smoothness of the 24th annual community manifestation of the Christmas spirit.

Tickets for the Coliseum entertainment will be distributed to children from four ticket depots in various sections of the city tomorrow between 2 and 4 o'clock. These tickets carry coupons entitling the bearers to free transportation on street cars going to and from the Coliseum, through the courtesy of the United Railways. The Coliseum doors will be opened at 9 a. m. and will close promptly at 10 a. m. when the Santa Claus carnival will commence.

No Spectators' Seats.

As in previous years, the Executive Committee, with much regret, calls attention to the fact that there are no spectators' seats to be had at the Coliseum, since all available space is occupied by the child guests of the Festival, and with the exception of about a score of prominent men and women who have been invited to inspect the uses to which the great fund annually contributed by the community is put, there can be no departure from the rule which excludes the general public.

Contributions to the Christmas Festival Fund are being sent to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch this year with gratifying promptness. To date the total amount received is $8258.47, which is well on the way toward the $15,000 budget required to finance this year's work of hospitality.

It is requested that those who have Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund contribution lists see that they are filled as promptly as possible and mailed or sent by messenger with the amount of money called for thereon, to the Post-Dispatch cashier, so that prompt acknowledgment may be made.

Individual contributions also should be sent to the Post-Dispatch, the donor stating that the money inclosed is for the Christmas Fund. Checks should be made payable to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund.

Basket Distribution.

Tomorrow the Basket Distribution Committee will deliver by means of volunteer workers on city trucks to the homes of 3000 families the baskets which the members of the Basket Packing Committee have been engaged in filling the last three days. Fat chickens, approaching turkeys in size, head the list of good things in each basket, and among the other contents are coffee, sugar, milk, tomatoes, baked beans, evaporated peaches, soup, bread, potatoes, onions, spaghetti, rice and candy. Through the generosity of the Staufer Laundry Tablet Co. a package of laundry tablets will also be in each basket. One thousand loaves of Honey Wheat bread, the donation of the Walter Freund Bread Co., will be apportioned among the baskets also. The number in the family to receive the basket was taken into consideration when the packing was done, and the amounts of each food apportioned to fill the needs of each particular family.

The Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. has made it possible, through their contribution of smoking tobacco, the gift of a package of tobacco to each man who will be the guest at the homeless men's dinners provided by the municipal lodging house and the Salvation Army home, and a pipe, purchased by the Festival Association, will accompany each package of tobacco.

Dolls, horns, rubber balls, books and skating or hockey caps will be the gifts distributed at the Coliseum, and each child guest will receive a generous package of candy.

Entertainment Program.

Interest will center about the immense production by the staff and children of the Municipal Playgrounds on Christmas morning. Arranged and directed by William F. Yorger, superintendent of recreation, the entertainment is entitled "Santa Claus in Wonderland." Included in the Entertainment Committee are:

Fred W. Pape, chairman; William F. Yorger, Henry Abeken, Louis Kittlaus, W. Brennan, Byron Tremlett, Erwin Anderson, Harry Allen, Frank Tracy, William Bremser, William Hough, Virgil Kimmey, Leo Concannon, Joe Cullinane, I. B. Krukenkamp, Vernon Bradburn, William Bradburn, Paul Schultz, Edwin Vitt, Ben Kessier, Dr. H. Lehrman and Misses Margaret Breen, M. Agnes Brennan, Margaret Steele, Agnes Cady, Jesse Christ, Madge Hawe, Felicitie Nally, Anna Chapman, Emma Marie Ruppel, Louise Butler, Viola Kilgen, Mary Monahan, Catherine Wehrle, Dorothy Peters, Elsie Kuehl, Helen Yorger and Louise Roberts.

Following is a brief sketch of the affair, with the order of episodes and symbolic dances:

Santa Claus in Wonderland.

All little children know that Santa Claus creeps out of the mountains every year on the twenty-fifth day of December in order that he may bring them a lot of nice toys and good things to eat. In the snow-capped mountains Santa spends 359 days each year, cutting and sewing, hammering and molding, sawing and carving toys, so that he may make thousands of little kiddies happy on Christmas morning. Good old Santa knows that all little boys and girls like to have snow on Christmas morning, in order that they may go coasting on the new sleds he brings them and make snow men and slippery sliding places.

And lo! Santa Claus sends heralds, the SNOW MEN, to the Coliseum in Wonderland to make sure that the kiddies of Saint Louis have snow when he arrives. The SNOW MEN are surprised to find a green sward. They order the clouds to pour forth their bounteous gifts, and immediately an abundance of Christmas Snow Flakes envelope the garden of Wonderland. Santa Claus finally arrives, driven by his thoroughbred ponies. He hops out of his sleigh and brings forth all of the toys he has for his children.

What joy! The Spirit of Good Will and Jubilation permeates the atmosphere; Joy and Happiness abound everywhere. All Sorrows and Cares are forgotten. Wonderland is clothed in a mantle of Good Will.

Santa Claus beckons to all his good little children and tells them to watch very closely, because he is going to show them the toys he brought for them and how they work.

The Waltzing Dolls.

Behold! The Waltzing Dolls, that can really walk; and the Jumping Jacks, see how they jump and bounce about. And, oh! those funny looking tumbling toys; aren't they funny? Look at the tricks they can do. And Santa's ponies, how pretty and graceful they are. But, oh! look at the lovely little village dolls Santa has made. Any little girl could be proud to have a doll like that. Then Santa has brought some real pugulistic toys. See how they swing, and the funny capers they cut. Surely Santa must be kept very busy making such pretty and interesting toys for us. Oh! if he could only stay with us forever.

But alas, the hand of time beckons Santa to another clime, where he must also make merry on this Christmas day, and, amid great pomp and splendor, Santa Claus bids farewell to the little folks in Wonderland.

The Spirit of Christmas, however, remains, and the children of Wonderland frolic and play, the live long day, until the Sandman gives his command, and all journey to Slumberland.

Order of episodes and symbolic dances.

Enter the snow men to make ready for Santa Claus (Boys of Mullanphy, Columbus, Carr and Murphy playgrounds).

Enter Santa Claus, driven by his thoroughbred ponies.

Santa brings forth his toys.

The kiddies are called to attention and Santa shows them how the toys work.

Where Children May Obtain Tickets for Christmas Festival

TICKETS for the entertainment at the Coliseum, Christmas morning, will be issued to children only between 2 and 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Dec. 24, at the following places:

1. Soulard Playground, 7th and Soulard streets. William Bremser in charge.
2. Mullanphy Playground, Eleventh and Mullanphy streets. Miss Madge Hawe in charge.
3. Public Bath No. 3, Twenty-third and O'Fallon streets. I. B. Krukenkamp in charge.
4. Y. W. C. A., Garrison and Lucas avenues. Col. Wm. H. Butler in charge.

Children are requested not to call at the Post-Dispatch Building, as tickets will not be issued there, and are urged to wait until Monday afternoon and to apply then at the ticket distribution station nearest their homes.

Most of the members of the Executive Committee are veterans in the work of furnishing Christmas joy to these members of the St. Louis community family, who unaided might lack Christmas happiness. A. M. Roth, chairman of the committee, has been a member since the institution of the community event by George S. Johns of the Post-Dispatch. Other members whose assistance has been given for a number of years include H. J. Bube, Louis Noite, Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Sippy, Nelson Cunliff, Robert D. Corlett, C. J. Kehoe, Oscar Stifel, Samuel J. Russack and J. R. Cooke, while more recent but equally efficient and enthusiastic members include William L. Igoe, Emil Steger, Miss Margaret Fleishman, Maurice Weil, Fred W. Pape, William Yorger, Brigadier David E. Dunham, Col. A. T. Perkins and Herman Spoehrer.

Each supervises a different branch of the festival work and all contribute to its ultimate success. For several the year's work is completed before Christmas morning, while for others the principal activities of their committees are carried out on Christmas morning. Among those committees whose work centers about the Coliseum festivities are the following:

EXPERIENCE OF CLERK LOYAL TO HIS EMPLOYERS

Got $20 a Week for 14 Hours a Day Work, Lost Arm in Saving Receipts of About $600 in Holdup.

Lester Manville was a $20-a-week clerk and loyal to his employer. When an attempt was made to hold up the store in which he worked 14 hours a day he disarmed the masked robber and threw him out. And then Manville was shot twice from behind.

The store's receipts, $600 or $700, were saved, but Manville's wounds necessitated his right arm being amputated at the elbow. His employer promised to take care of him, but the store changed ownership and Lester was out of a job and nearly helpless. Yesterday he filed suit for $50,000 damages.

Defendants in Suit.

The suit is directed against the Piggly Wiggly Stores Inc. and William Benson, who was manager of a Piggly Wiggly store at Page and Walton avenues March 24, last, when the robbery was frustrated by Manville. The stores passed into other hands this summer when Clarence Saunders of Memphis, originator of the "help-yourself" grocery, got into financial difficulties.

Manville's petition for damages narrates that a woman employe of the store had just left the store about 9:30 p. m. when she was attacked by a masked highwayman, whereupon Manville assisted her back into the store and grappled with the armed man who "then attempted to rob said store."

Manville had overpowered, disarmed and thrown the robber out to the street, when, according to the petition, Benson "recklessly and heedlessly" fired a number of shots at random "from a place where he was in hiding in the rear part of the store, without looking or taking aim at the bandit." There was no reason for the firing, it is asserted, as the robber already had been disposed of by Manville.

Lost Lower Right Arm.

Manville, wounded in the right shoulder and the right side, staggered across the street. An ambulance took him to City Hospital. Blood poisoning set in and three months later Manville lost his lower right arm.

Manville is 22 years old, married and the father of two children. He and his wife had been employed in a shoe factory at Marine, Ill., until Thanksgiving day, when they were laid off. He was earning $7 a week. His employment in the Piggly Wiggly store began Feb. 14 last, shortly after he had been honorably discharged from the navy.

Failed to Keep Promise.

Manville told a Post-Dispatch reporter, after the suit was filed, that while he was at the hospital he received two telegrams from Clarence Saunders, urging him to come to Memphis as soon as able, with all expenses paid by Saunders. St. Louis officials of the company, he added, repeatedly assured him that "we'll take care of you." They made no specific promises to him, he said, but his wife was informed that he would be given a lifetime position. His $20 a week was paid until Sept. 10, when he was notified that a change of ownership had been effected and his salary would be discontinued. Subsequently he applied for work with the new company and was refused.

Illinois' 1924 Tax Rate 50 Cents.
By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 22.—The tax rate in Illinois for 1924 has been fixed at 50 cents on each $100, on an estimated valuation of $4,000,000,000, according to a statement made today by Andrew Russel, State auditor. This is a reduction of five cents on the $100 from the rate of last year, Russel said. Of this sum, 10 cents is for the soldiers' bonus and 40 cents for general purposes.

OLYMPIC BODY SAYS PADDOCK MUST CLEAR SELF WITH A. A. U.

Epinard Will Race In U. S. In September

Owner of French Champion Says He Has Practically Completed All Details for International Events.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Epinard, French thoroughbred champion, will race the pick of next year's American 4-year-olds in three races next September and October, two on Metropolitan tracks and one in Kentucky. M. Pierre Wertheimer, owner of Epinard, said today before sailing for France on the Berengaria.

M. Wertheimer, who has practically completed all details of the international series as a result of conferences during the past two weeks with American turfmen, said the first sweepstakes, at a mile, will be run early in September at Belmont Park. The second race will be run at Aqueduct track between Sept. 15 and 18, and the third at Latonia, Kentucky, the first week in October. The Frenchman did not disclose the distances of the last two events, but they probably will be at a mile and a quarter and a mile and a half, respectively.

Epinard, he said, will be shipped here in July. Epinard will train at Saratoga for the sweepstakes, in which he probably will meet Zev, Harry F. Sinclair's 1923 champion; In Memoriam, Kentucky crack, and Rear Admiral Carey T. Grayson's My Own, among others.

Turning from the discussion of turf events, M. Wertheimer paid tribute to the "supreme beauty" of American girls.

"There is but one type of French beauty," he asserted, "but there are 68 types of American beauty. Their final supremacy is in their variety."

WASHINGTON HUSKIES POLISHING UP FOR NEW YEAR'S GAME

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 22—With one more practice before Christmas the University of Washington football team went through a workout here today with vim, in preparation for its contest with the United States Naval Academy at Pasadena New Years' Day.

Knowledge of some of the Navy's plays has been drifting into the "Husky" camp for ten days and yesterday Coach Bagshaw gave his gridders a special workout on the offensive against the Middy defense as personified by the Washington second team.

Scrimmage was of the dummy variety with more attention paid to the technicalities of the various formations than to the rough and ready tactics that had been the rule for the preceding three practices.

BETHLEHEM OVERWHELMS PAWTUCKET; OELLERMAN HAS NO HARD TRIES

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 22.—J. & P. Coats of Pawtucket, R. I., fell heavily before the onslaught of the Bethlehem Steel eleven in an American Soccer League contest today. The score was 6 to 0.

The playing pitch was exceedingly heavy and rain fell all through the contest. Only once did the New Englanders seem dangerous, and that was at the end of the first half when "Dutch" Oellerman, former St. Louisan, made a beautiful save. Aside from this attack Bethlehem's goalie had little work to do.

The visitors had trouble in keeping their feet, while Bethlehem's players were all over the field. The first half score was 3 to 0. The lineup follows:

Bethlehem (6).	Positions.	Pawtucket (0).
Oellerman	Goal	Scholfield
P. Ferguson	R. F.	Stevenson
Young	L. F.	Lappin
McGregor	R. H.	Patterson
Carnihan	C. H.	McIntosh
Terry	L. H.	McAvoy
Turner	O. R.	Harvey
A. Jackson	I. R.	Sutherland
W. Jackson	C. F.	Adams
Maxwell	I. L.	Leavy
Goldie	O. L.	Fleming

Goals—W. Jackson (2), A. Jackson (2), Maxwell, Goldie. Referee—George Young, Philadelphia. Linesmen—Williams and Parry. Time of halves—45 minutes.

FIRST GOLF CHAPLAIN IN HISTORY CREATED

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 22.— A golf chaplain has been appointed by members of the Earlington Golf Club here to look after the spiritual welfare of the club, according to President Frank Ryan.

The Rev. Canon Ronald Hilton is the incumbent of the newly created post. He is believed to be the first golf chaplain in history.

Cards and Browns To Play Two Spring Series Games Here

THE Cardinals and Browns will meet in a two-game spring series next April. This was made certain yesterday, when Secretary Clarence F. Lloyd of the Cardinals announced that the games with the American Leaguers had been arranged for Saturday, April 12, and Sunday, April 13.

Last spring the clubs played a like number of pre-season contests, both of them in St. Louis, after the teams had returned from the South.

According to the announcement from the Cardinal office, the club will remain in the South until April 7 or 8 next spring and play only a few games on the way north. Last spring, it will be remembered, the Rickeymen broke camp at Bradentown, Fla., late in March and played games with the Athletics, Rochester and Tigers on the way North.

PHILLIES WILL OPPOSE CARDINALS IN FLORIDA

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—Plans for the spring training trip of the Philadelphia National League baseball team are virtually complete, it was announced here today. The players will depart for their training quarters at Leesburg, Fla., the latter part of February. The series of exhibition games scheduled runs from March 13 to April 13.

The Phillies will play exhibition contests with Brooklyn, Boston and St. Louis, in the National League, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago, in the American League; Newark, in the International League, and the Milwaukee and Columbus teams of the American Association.

They will play the St. Louis Nationals at Badentown, Fla., on March 20, and at Leesburg, Fla., on March 24.

HANDBALL TOURNAMENT POSTPONED TO JAN. 10

A postponement in the opening of the city championship indoor handball championship tournament at the National Athletic Association gymnasium has been announced by Leach Cohn, manager of the association. The use of the regulation handball is the cause of the postponement until Jan. 10.

Heretofore, the larger black rubber ball has been used here but in view of the fact that St. Louis players who competed in the last national tournament found themselves handicapped because of a lack of familiarity with the small, regulation ball, it has been found advisable to adopt the standard ball.

For the first time in recent years, a singles championship event will be held. Local tournaments have been confined to doubles for some years and there is a great difference of opinion respecting the merits of Kammann, Cunningham, Brown, Sandford, Murphy and others, as singles players.

Entries should be mailed to Cohn at 201 North Sixth street.

RECORD ENTRY EXPECTED FOR TENPIN TOURNEY

More than 100 teams have so far requested date reservations for the City Scratch Tenpin tournament which opens at the Congress alleys Jan. 23. Officials of the St. Louis Bowling Association say there are 663 teams enrolled in the organization, all eligible to bowl in the tournament. It is expected that the entry this year will double the number which rolled in last year's event when 100 fives competed.

Jack Heibert, secretary of the association, 718 Washington avenue, is handling the entries.

Leagues which have signified their intention of bowling are: Alhambra Grotto, K. of C., North Side Y. M. C. A., Missouri Pacific, Gambrinus, Benton Park, Western Rowing Club, Century Rowing Club, Wellston, Maplewood, East St. Louis, Collinsville, Granite City, Peterson's Scratch, Washington Alley Leagues, Congress Alley Leagues and the Hope League.

KANSAS CITY A. C. DEFEATS ATLANTA

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22.—The Kansas City Athletic Club five repeated tonight for a second victory over the Atlanta Athletic Club team, 32 to 18, with a driving style of play the Atlanta basketeers were unable to stop.

The team work of the Kansas City team was noteworthy, and their short-passing game took the ball through Atlanta's defense with little effort. The game tonight was replete with fouls.

In a game last night, Kansas City won, 39 to 21.

William and A. Browning, for Kansas City, excelled in clever work, while Reeves rolled up the high score with 13 points. Singleton proved the hardest Atlantan to stop, breaking through the Kansas City defense for six points.

The lineup:

Kansas City.	Position.	A. A. C.
Reeves (13)	R. F.	Whatley (2)
A. Browning (9)	L. F.	Singleton (6)
Williams (6)	C.	Bass (4)
Browning	R. G.	Hartney
Sanders (1)	L. G.	Slate (2)

St. Louis Awarded 1924 Title Swim

Fifty-Yard Dash and Plunge, Both for Women, to Be Held Here.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The award of 87 national swimming championship events for 1924 to 16 district associations was announced today by the Amateur Athletic Union. The program covers junior and senior title contests, indoors and outdoors, for both men and women.

The Central Association, with headquarters at Chicago, heads the list with 15 championships, all but two of which are senior men's indoor title events. The Metropolitan Association, New York, is next with 14 championships and the Southern Pacific Association, Los Angeles, is third with 10 awards.

The Western Association, with headquarters at St. Louis, will hold two events, the 50-yard dash, senior, for women, and the plunge for distance, junior, for women.

Other events on next year's program were apportioned as follows: Niagara Association, Buffalo, and Pacific Association, San Francisco, seven each; Middle Atlantic Association, Philadelphia, eight; Michigan Association, Detroit, five; Allegheny Mountain Association, Pittsburg, and New England Association, Boston, four each; Southeastern Association, Atlanta, three; Ohio Association, Cincinnati, South Atlantic Association, Baltimore, Midwestern Association, Omaha, and Connecticut Association, New Haven, two each; Western Association, St. Louis, and Indiana Kentucky Association, one each.

Dates and places for these events will be fixed by the district associations.

DRAKE BULLDOG TO PLAY U. OF UTAH AT SALT LAKE IN 1924

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 22.—A football game for next season between Drake University and the University of Utah, to be played at Salt Lake City Oct. 4, was announced today by Drake athletic authorities. The trip to Salt Lake will be the longest ever made by a Drake team.

Drake finished in third place in the Missouri Valley Conference this season and Utah was one of the strong contenders in the Rocky Mountain Conference.

WINTER BASEBALL IN CALIFORNIA BOOMING

CALEXICO, Cal., Dec. 22—Baseball fans throughout Imperial Valley will meet here tomorrow for the first game of the season of the Valley Winter League. Calexico will dedicate its new baseball park when the home team meets the Mexicali nine. Mexicali is leading the league with three victories, while Calexico with two victories and one defeat is in second place.

Scullins Meet Vespers in Challenge Cup Game Today

McCarthy's Men Have Shown Superior Ability Thus Far This Season, but Brady's Eleven Always Plays Its Best in the Pinch.

By Herman Wecke.

The Scullins, three times finalists for the United States Football Association championship and title winners once, will face their hardest test in this season's national challenge cup series, when they play the Vespers in a fourth round tilt at High School Field this afternoon. The game is scheduled to start at 2:15 o'clock.

The winning eleven in this afternoon's game will be St. Louis' representative in late round battles against out-of-town competition and is generaly favored to win the Western championship.

On this year's form, both in regular league battles and in cup contests, the Vespers have the better of the argument. Harry McCarthy's eleven is leading the St. Louis Soccer league and in three title clashes this season has counted six goals against only one for the opposition. The Scullins are tailenders in the league championship race with but one victory and in cup games have counted seven goals against three for the rival elevens.

Scullins Have Experience.

However, the Scullins, because of playing in three national challenge cup finals have more experience than the Vespers. In past games, the Bradymen also have shown great ability in coming from behind. Last year it will be remembered that the eleven got off to a bad start in all its games but won. This held true in all clashes except the final against the Paterson eleven, which ended in a 2 to 2 tie.

Brady has made few changes in the lineup of the eleven. Jimmy Burke, forward, and Hitchcock, fullback, are the only new men in the battle front of the Scullins.

Harry McCarthy, on the other hand, has introduced several new faces. Chief among these are Harris, a forward, and Scott, a fullback, who last season played with Southern Illinois elevens. Scott has proved himself a valuable asset in that he can play both fullback and halfback.

Both managers will be able to use their strongest battle fronts in today's contest. Brady expects Jimmy Burke, forward, to be back in the game. Burke was injured in the third round clash against the Gillespie team and has not played since. McCarthy also will be able to use "Eggie" Fitzgerald, the suspended fullback, President Barker having ruled that his suspension for rough play does not hold good in cup competition.

Real Battle Last Year.

These same elevens played just about the best cup tilt ever witnessed here in their meeting in the final engagement between St. Louis clubs in the 1922-23 competition. In this clash, the Vespers got off to a lead of two goals, but the Scullins kept plugging away and won out, 3 to 2. A penalty kick by Manager Brady, after a foul by Hack, gave the Scullins the winning point. In the early phases of the battle, the Vespers completely outplayed the Bradymen.

In the first round of this year's competition, the Vespers nosed out the Ben Millers, of the St. Louis League, 1 to 0. The second game was against the Hoovers and the men of McCarthy came through, 2 to 1, after a hard tussle. Then the Vespers battled the Ben Millers of the Municipal League and won, 3 to 0, after being held scoreless in the first half.

The Scullins drew a bye in the first round this year. Then came a 2—1 victory over the St. Matthews. The Municipal Leaguers protested that the time was short and the clash was ordered replayed with the Scullins winning, 3 to 1. Then came the best exhibition of soccer the Scullins have put on this season when the nosed out Gillespie (Ill.) 2 to 1 in a third round tilt that went extra time.

Phil Kavanaugh, veteran local official, will handle this afternoon's game.

The Gillespie team is scheduled to play an exhibition game here on Christmas day.

F. C. SQUIRES, POPULAR BILLIARDIST, DEAD

The game of billiards suffered a loss Friday in the death of F. C. Squires, a leader in the amateur game here for more than a score of years. He died at his new home in Los Angeles following a trip to St. Louis.

Squires, who was 82 years old, was president "for an indefinite period" of the Aristo-Cats, a club of 20 veteran players at Peterson's. He had been a conspicuous figure in local billiards both as an organizer and a player.

Sprinter May Not Be Permitted to Compete In National Tryouts

Amateur Organization Has Appointed Special Committee to Consider Case of the "Fastest Human."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Charles Paddock, America's crack sprinter, will NOT be allowed to compete for a position on the 1924 American Olympic team until he has cleared himself of charges of the American Athletic Union, it was announced late today by the American Olympic Committee. It was decided to leave Paddock's case entirely with the A. A. U. which has appointed a special committee to consider it.

The issues involved in the controversy that has raged about Paddock for several months included charges he is alleged to have made against the A. A. U. and athletes of that organization, in regard to their amateur standing; allegations that Paddock himself had sacrificed his amateur standing in going on a lecture tour; charges that he failed to reimburse the Olympic Committee for funds loaned to him in 1920 and his alleged failure to comply with a request that he account for expenses furnished him in coming to New York from Los Angeles for an athletic meet. It was charged, in this connection, that Paddock had received full expense money from two different organizations.

Paddock's case was the chief subject of debate at the Olympic Committee meeting this afternoon.

Must Explain Paris Trip.

The decision means that Paddock also must explain to the A. A. U. Committee his participation without A. A. U. sanction in the University of Paris Club meet and in exhibitions in Czecho-Slovakia.

The Olympic Committee's ruling brings to a head a series of wordy skirmishes among Paddock, officials of the A. A. U. and officials of the National Collegiate A. A., which have been going on since the latter body sanctioned Paddock's Paris trip in violation of the request of the American Olympic Committee and without the approval of the A. A. U. which is America's representative in the International Federation.

William C. Prout of Boston, president of the A. A. U., and General Palmer E Pierce, president of the N. C. A. A., were the rival floor leaders in the discussion and the executive committee's endorsement of the A. A. U.'s stand is expected to settle, for the time, the controversy as to authority which has been waging between the two organizations.

The A. A. U. president, in outlining his stand, quoted Paddock as stating his participation in the Paris meet last year was for the purpose of making a "test case" to establish whether the A. A. U. had jurisdiction over college athletes who wished to compete abroad.

Was Not College Meet.

Prout asserted that Paddock was not a student in regular standing at the University of Southern California when he made the trip, but that the faculty, after disapproving of Paddock's trip, sanctioned his going as a student "on leave."

Prout read letters indicating the Paris meet was not a college meet, but one promoted by a club, and without the sanction of the French amateur organization, or the International Federation, and that all athletes who took part had been suspended by the foreign organization.

He quoted from magazine and newspaper clippings in which Paddock was quoted as accusing A. A. U. athletes of professionalism and charging A. A. U. officials were aware of their professionalism and condoned and encouraged it.

Olympic Tryout Dates Announced; Harvard to Get Big Track Events

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The schedule of Olympic tryouts in seven branches of sport, all but rowing under the jurisdiction of the Amateur Athletic Union, has been fixed as follows:

Track and field—Harvard Stadium, Cambridge, Mass., June 13 and 14.

Rowing — Schuylkill River, Philadelphia, June 13 and 14.

Swimming—(Men) Indianapolis, early in June; (Women) Metropolitan District, week ending June 14.

Boxing—Boston, May.

Wrestling—New York, May.

Gymnastics — New York, May.

Cross Country — New York, June.

Collegiate Body to Take Final Stand on Paddock Suspension

By Walter Camp.

(Copyright, 1923.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Next Friday, at Atlanta, Ga., will be held the annual meeting of the National Collegiate Association, and that meeting promises to be full of what the man in the street calls "meat."

Dr. Angell of Yale, Dr. Savage of Oberlin and Professor Dawson of the International Young Men's Christian Association are the leading lights who will discuss faculty control of athletics. Morever, Professor Mendell of Yale furnishes a report from the first district, which should be of great interest.

President Pierce of the association announces that two vital principles must be threshed out—first, whether or not the colleges have to request authority of any superorganization to enter intercollegiate athletic competition in this or any other country, and second, whether or not all amateur athletics of good character who are citizens of the United States and have never represented another country are eligible to enter our Olympic tryouts. This will involve a tense discussion of the Paddock matter, and the standing suspension of Paddock by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Cast to be Reviewed.

President Pierce requests that judgment be suspended upon these problems until all the facts of the case are known, which would indicate that an entire resume of the case will be brought forward at this meeting.

Another interesting matter will be the report on the new organization, the National Amateur Athletic Federation. The N. C. A. already has lent its support to this, and the question which President Pierce raises is whether additional support shall be given. He states that the N. C. A. was responsible largely for the inception of this new federation, which is a wide spread holding organization of amateur athletes.

E. K. Hall of New York as chairman, will render the report of the football rules committee, and Dr. Babbitt of Haverford will report on the operation of the central board on officials during the past season. Dr. Babbitt also will report on soccer in the coleges.

Another very interesting report will be that of Dr. McKenzie on boxing rules for the colleges. Boxing has not yet become a generally accepted intercollegiate sport, and the report of Dr. McKenzie will be of much interest.

Maj. Griffiths to Report.

Maj. Griffith, the so-called "Landis of the Western Conference," will report on track rules. Maj. Griffith also will give his views on the National Track and Field Meet, which is beginning to become a decided rival to the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association. Maj. Griffith's task seems to be a pretty broad one, as he also is chairman of a subcommittee on national physical tests and will render a report on this subject.

Can Maj. Griffith show the comparative value of candidates for teams? The one thing that we have never been able to get is an apparatus to measure, or any test that can be figured in foot pounds, that indefinable something known as "spirit," "pluck," "courage" or "sand," that seems to appear and to upset all past records and produce a winner when scientifically

American Owners Have Made 46 Nominations for 142d Running of English Derby in 1925 Campaign

Horses Named for Classic Total 354 — United States Yearlings Have Also Been Nominated for St. Leger, The Oaks and Several Other British Fixtures.

By G. F. T. Ryall,
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The largest entry of American owned horses in the history of the classic, has been made for the English Derby of 1925. It is not probable that another English Derby winner will come to this country as Papyrus did. Whether a closer relation was brought about by the race at Belmont Park last October also is debatable. The liberal nominations for the blue ribbon of three-year-old racing, however, is a nice compliment. Whether any of the horses named that were bred on this side of the water ever will go over to fulfill the engagement remains to be seen. A dozen sportsmen owners have thought well enough of forty-six yearlings to name them—and if a horse is in a race, at least he can run, whereas a champion without engagements cannot.

Those who have named horses for the Derby, and also for The Oaks, the St. Leger, the 2000 Guineas and the 1000 Guineas, are August Belmont, A. K. Macomber, T. F. Ryan, Joseph E. Widener, W. R. Coe, Robert L. Gerry, Montfort Jones, Harry F. Sinclair, George D. Widener, John E. Madden, Lee Rosenberg and William Woodward. Madden named a horse once before—Sir Martin—and he was winning when he fell in the stretch in Minor's year.

Racegoers next season will see under colors the yearlings that were named last month. Among them is a half brother to Zev; a half brother to Kai-Sang, the leading three-year-old in 1922; and a full brother to St. James, the Futurity winner this year, and rated by many as the top juvenile.

Nominations Total 354.

The nominations for the 142d running of the Derby stakes total 354. King George has the place of honor at the top of the list, but his nominations only total five. Lord Lascelles, his son-in-law, has made two entries, and Pierre Wertheimer three.

August Belmont's entries are Madrigal II, a bay filley by Maintenon-Meddlesmoe II and Pastelle II, a bay filly by Limberg-Past. Both of these also are named for The Oaks and St. Leger.

A. K. Macomber, who races more extensively in France than he does in this country, is the most liberal of the American nominators with 15. Three of these, a bay colt by War Fame-Hoop Skirt, a bay colt by War Fame-War Song, a bay colt by Hand Grenade-La Sierra, were bred in this country.

T. F. Ryan has named six, all English bred: A brown colt by Swynford-Osyrna, a brown colt by Hainault-dam by Lesterlin-Cairngorm, a chestnut colt by The Boss-Eagle Queen, a chestnut colt by Bachelor's Double-Roscoble, a bay colt by Flying Orb-Lady Alex, and a bay colt by Diademimus-Document.

The yearlings Joseph E. Widener has named were all bred in France. They are a bay colt by Sardanaple-Deliverance, a roan colt by Gay Crusader-Damaris, a chestnut colt by Durbar-Maestria and a bay colt by Sardanaples-Quadrille.

Coe Has Named Five.

The others are all American bred. W. R. Coe has named five bred at his stud in Wyoming: a chestnut colt by Polymelus-Athlone, a bay colt by Polymelus-Bet, a bay colt by Polymelus-Election Bet; the Piping Rock subscription mare that interested him is racing; a chestnut filly by Polymelus-Ratify and a chestnut filly by Polymelus-Kiss Again, a Sledmare mare.

Robert L. Gerry has nominated a bay colt by Volta-Embassy, and a bay or brown colt by Ambassador IV-Temptation.

A chestnut colt by Sir Martin-Kiluna and consequently a half-brother to Kai-Sang, a chestnut colt by Sir Martin-One Star, and a chestnut colt by Sir Martin-Mallard are those entered by Montford Jones.

John E. Madden has sent five entries: A brown colt by Light Brigade-Pleasant Puss, a chestnut colt by Sir Martin-His Sister, a chestnut colt by Sir Martin-Aunt Dinah, a chestnut colt by Sir Martin-Affection, and a bay or brown colt by Sir Martin-Miss Kearney. This last-named is a half brother to Zev, the champion of the Rancocas stable and the greatest money winner in the history of racing.

Sinclair Nominates Three.

Harry F. Sinclair, owner of the Rancocas stable, has nominated three: Silver Fox II, the gray colt by Grey Fox II-Mary Queen of Scots, for which he paid $25,000 at Saratoga Springs last August; King Jimmy, a brown colt by King James-Autumn II, and a chestnut colt by Purchase-Picton's Pride.

George D. Widener has named two entries, Felix, a chestnut colt by Fair Play—Felicity and Marcellus II, a bay colt by Jim Gaffner—Messalina.

A bay colt by Ambassador IV.—Bobolink II, a brother to St. James, and a chestnut colt by Omar Khayyam-La Deliverance, are William Woodward's nominations.

Lee Rosenberg has named Highbinder, a brown colt by Trojan—Della Desmond, the Irish mare which raced for Oscar Lewisohn here some years ago.

Macomber also had made 11 nominations for the Oaks, 18 for the 2000 guineas and 11 for the 1000 guineas, while W. R. Coe has named three for the Oaks, three for the 2000 guineas and two for the 1000 guineas. Widener's entries also include two for the Oaks, four for the 2000 guineas, three for 1000 guineas and four for the St. Leger. Ryan named four for the St. Leger.

The St. Leger closed with 310 nominations; the 2000 guineas with 231 and the 1000 guineas, which is for fillies, with 181. The Oaks closed with 245 nominations.

COLLEGE BODY TO TAKE FINAL STAND IN CASE OF CHARLES PADDOCK

this man or this team should be a loser.

Some interesting reports from the various districts also will be rendered by representatives who cover a very broad scope of country. Prof. Ahern of Kansas State Agricultural College will report for the Sixth District; Dr. Pennock of the University of Texas for the Seventh District, Dean Manley of the University of Denver for the Eighth, Prof. Ayer of the University of Washington for the Ninth District, Dr. Sanford of the University of Georgia for the Fourth, so that the convention will hear from the most outlying districts as to the conditions of college athletics in their various provinces, and never before has interest in college sport been so widely extended.

In addition to the regular meeting, there will be meetings of the Council of Executive and Nominating Committees, of representatives of local conferences and the appointment of a football rules committee.

INDOOR TENNIS TOURNEY OPENS MONDAY AT N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Sixty-four players, comprising the largest entry list in the tournament's history, will participate in the ninth annual play for the National Indoor junior tennis championship, which begins here Monday

In conjunction with this tournament, 36 entrants will compete for the national indoor boy title, which Malcolm T. Hill of Loomis Academy will defend.

The junior title was won last year by John F. W. Whitney of Loomis, who passed out of the class this year. Previous to him the title was held for two years by Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., now a Davis Cup player.

KENRICK WINS SIXTH CONSECUTIVE VICTORY

Kenrick High School's basket ball team won its sixth straight victory yesterday, defeating the strong quintet from Nashville on the Kenrick court by a score of 16 to 5.

The Kenrick defense featured the play. Nashville was helpless before the wonderful guarding of the local five, being able to break through for only one field goal.

The playing of the Morris brothers, George and "Red," featured the offensive game of the Kenrick basketeers, while Donohue starred at guard.

Gorman starred for the Nashville aggregation, caging the only field goal for the team in the last minute of play from the center of the court.

CHICAGO SKATER IS BARRED AS PROFESSIONAL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Professional participation in any sport will bar an athlete from competition sanctioned for amateurs by the Western Skating Association, according to a decision of the Board of Control of the Association last night. The board held that Gus Fetz, Chicago skater who played professional football, was barred from amateur skating events.

The board awarded the Illinois championship events to the Elgin Skating Club for Jan. 12 at Elgin and rejected an application of Milwaukee to hold the Western championship event there, awarding the tournament to Chicago for Feb. 10.

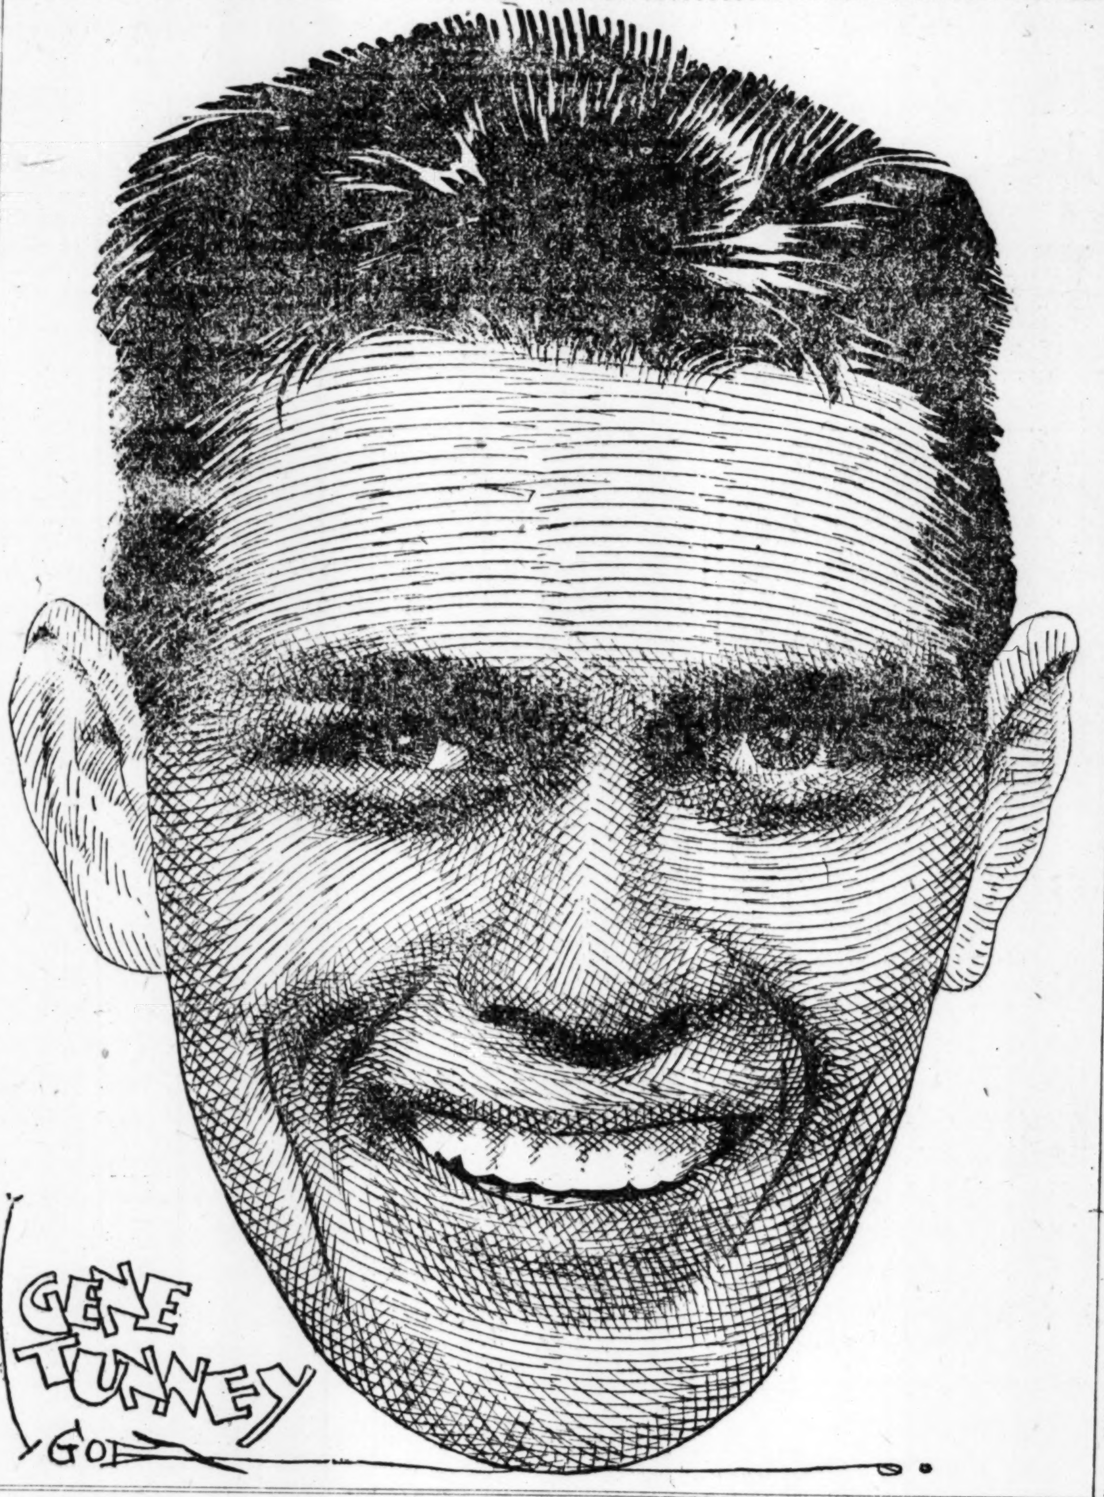
ST. PAUL MAY TRAIN AT MINERAL WELLS IN 1924

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 22.—The St. Paul baseball club of the American Association probably will train next spring at Mineral Wells, Tex., it was announced today. Negotiations are under way. Last year the Saints trained at Fort Smith, Ark.

Announcement also was made that an effort was being made to obtain Tillie 'Kid" Walker, outfielder, who has been declared a free agent by the Philadelphia Athletics.

Clean Living Is Reason for His Success



Clean Living Sure to Bring Success, Says Gene Tunney

Must Obey One Master to Be Ring Champion and That Master Is Condition, Asserts Holder of Light Heavyweight Honors.

By Bert Igoe,
Of the New York World Staff.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.

"Lead a clean life, work hard, and you'll succeed in anything you attempt in this life."

Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion, sat straight up, clean cut, bronzed by open-air life, and fairly snapped the words through two rows of white, even teeth.

"I don't care what a man's aim is, what his profession happens to be, he can't be stopped if he goes after his goal with the bright eyes that lead the way through a clean life. I lead a clean life—perhaps to the point of ridicule by some who simply can't see one succeed—and I attribute whatever success I've had in the ring to the life I've lived, the life I'm leading, the life I'm going to lead even after I retire from the ring. If I hadn't led a life of quiet, healthful daily hard work at my chosen profession, where do you suppose I'd have got off against Greb last week after my six months' layoff?" Tunney leaned forward, earnestly asking the question.

He was the picture of health, a living diploma for clean living. In many respects Gene Tunney, good-looking product of the army boxing, the most remarkable character that ever crushed resin under a fighting boot.

Here's Spirited Exclamation.

He has never smoked, drank liquor, chewed or used profane language in all his life! As he talked to me "What the heaven!" was his most spirited exclamation.

He tumbles out of bed each Sunday morning and is off to church at 6.

"I'm not a religious crank nor do I ask that a man who swears, drinks and tries to outshine the white lights after a big bout be burned at the stake. If a fighter thinks that he must celebrate with wine, women and song after winning or losing a big fight, let him do so," said Tunney.

"You can't go cabareting and climb to the top. It's against the law of nature. Besides it is only a self imposed habit. I want to be a world's champion some day and I'll have plenty of time to celebrate when I've earned my pile and retired. It will not be a much different celebration than the one I now enjoy—a quiet retreat to Harry McCormack's farm at Red Bank, New Jersey, with its great open arms, bidding you be restful, happy, healthful. I love that life and couldn't live any other if I tried. Because I do put the gay life behind me and seek the peace and rest of the farm after my bouts, perhaps they've put me down as a goody-goody boy and a woman hater. That's so silly.

Must Obey One Master.

"I'm in a business that requires all that a man has of stamina, courage and bodily forcefulness. You must obey one master if you'd be a champion of the ring and that master is CONDITION. I've felt myself fairly expand and grow powerful under that master. I wasn't a robust fellow to begin with. Clerking in a store doesn't expand the girth of either your neck or chest. When the war came I was a spindle-shanked cuss but with a great natural love for athletics and the men who triumphed in them. When army boxing was opened to me, I was in a seventh heaven. I've always loved to box and don't know a greater joy than boxing and winning. Before I leave my dressing room to go into the ring I kneel down and pray—not that I'll win but that He will step aside in the matter—that if He can't help me, not to help the other fellow—to let the best man win. I do pray that I be not injured permanently as a man might in an accidental fall. As for the physical pain in a fight—that's laughable. Pain is what the other fellows might call a cocktail. A real fighter fights hardest, fights best, perhaps, when he's stung.

"I remarked that the great Ketchel once told me that he fought best when his nose was bleeding—that the flow of blood had a cooling effect as it ran down his face and chest.

"That's perfectly true," said Tunney. "I've experienced the same feeling."

Not Ready to Get Married.

"Do you contemplate marriage?" we asked wonderingly.

"Not while I'm a fighter. A man in the ring should be a free lance, a wanderer with the right to go when and where his business pleases. He should be a nomad. But he should go clean. The right way to success in my business is clean living. I hope it will be a lesson to the youth of the land. I went 15 hard rounds against the great Greb and whipped him plenty! The answer is CLEAN LIVING."

Peak Reached in Spending Says Baseball Scout

Magnates Ready to Give Up Search for Another Babe Ruth.

By John B. Foster
(Copyright, 1923.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Charles H. Ebbets' offer to the St. Louis Nationals of $275,000 for Rogers Hornsby and St. Louis' action in refusing the offer, constitute the new baseball records.

But this new high record marks a turning point in offers for ballplayers, if the prophecy of one of the best judges of player values in organized baseball is worth anything. This man, who has scouted every part of the United States, and who has spent as much money for players as any single individual in the world—not his own money, of course—says the ballplayer hereafter will bring nothing like the high price he has in the past.

There must be a reason for such a condition if it exists, and the reason, according to this prophet, lies in the showing made in 1923 by the players who were bought for the largest sums. The 1923 crop of lemons never was surpassed in the history of baseball. Three hundred thousand dollars went to waste without raising anything but a thirst, and the baseball owners who had gambled and lost all that money felt offended. They didn't hold themselves responsible, though of course they are, because they took the gamble. They hold the players responsible because they didn't make good, and they hold the selling clubs responsible because the latter have the money.

Ruth Worth the Price.

The only player ever purchased for $100,000 or more who has made good in baseball is Babe Ruth, according to the man who values ballplayers for a living. He thinks there is no ballplayer selling for $50,000 who has made good for two years. Possibly this opinion is the result of observation during the past season. Certainly there was not enough actual profit made on the players of high cost in 1923 to warrant continuing top figures for ordinary men.

If the opinions of this man are proved to be correct it is probable that the year 1923 will be accepted as that of the high water mark in baseball valuations but the offer of the Brooklyn club must be given its proper standing with the offers of other clubs for ball players. The top price is more than a quarter of a million dollars against the few pennies which were given for the first ball player ever sold from one club to another. There is an interesting fact in connection with that first ball player who was sold. He is worth now something like one million dollars, so his friends say. Ciphers run prodigal races in baseball.

Another point to be raised in connection with this matter of ball players and their capitalization is that Ruth, the most successful investment of all, has made the most money as a single individual of any player in baseball history.

Dunn Suggests Monument.

"Ruth," said Jack Dunn, who brought the young man up in baseball, "should have a monument to himself in the American League, and the National League should co-operate in building it. Ruth made baseball when it needed help the worst kind of a way after the war.

"Someone said that Col. Ruppert values his baseball holdings at $10,000,000. If that is the case Ruth is the only ball player in the world who has made $10,000,000 for another man. By that I mean the only player to whom that sum can be directly attributed as downright earning, for what was the New York American League club worth before Ruth joined it? It seems to me that this is an instance where the ability of a player to make money is proved and if he made that much for one man, what did he make in addition for the remainder of his league and indirectly for the National League? I know that sometimes baseball men say players do not make money for them, but I'll submit my argument in this case to any court on earth."

There seems to have been but one Ruth in all baseball history and the men who let hundreds of thousands of dollars filter through their fingers without success trying to find another Ruth, are getting ready to shut down on the big gamble for the impossible. It seems that they grow only one Ruth to the century. He's the century plant of baseball.

Second-Round Game Recentl Drew More Persons Than Last Year's Final.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Whil the passing of the calendar yea comes about in the thick of th soccer season, it is not amiss t take a look backward just to se what souvenirs of his passage ol Father Time left behind him an then a look forward to prepare th field for even better things.

Looking backward, there enough in sight to mark 1923 as year of vital importance in socce The most satisfying thing in th country, is naturally the terrif rush onward the game is makin The United States Football Assoc ation celebrated its tenth birthda last spring. During those 10 year there were many discouragement but hard work and sincere effo have at last won their reward, an the association can now regard i self as an established success.

Big Increase in Attendance.

Taking the attendance test as fair one, the rapid advance of th sport is indicated by the fact th the National Challenge Competi tion of 1921-22 attracted a tota paid attendance of 95,019; the t tal for 1922-23 was 129,857; the a tendance in the first three round of the 1923-24 competition indi cates last year's total will b eclipsed. A second round cu match played at Fall River No 18 drew a paid attendance of 14 375 persons, approximately 500 more than last year's final.

The improvement in playing ski has been as marked as the im provement in attendance. Youn America has injected its instinctiv vim and speed into the game, an with a surprisingly heavy importa tion of high-class players fro Scotland and England, the youngsters have had the best kin of instruction and have profited a cordingly. The result is a far be ter balance as between the team the star teams finding it harder defeat clubs which in former yea were easy for them.

One of the most conspicuo events of the year was the a tempt by the International Boa to revise the first law of the gam in such a way as to permit su stitutions in a limited way du ing the progress of the gam From the beginning of soccer go ernment by the Football Associ tion, Limited, substitutions ha been forbidden by edict, rath than by rule. The old rule simp read, "The game shall be play by 11 players on each side." T natural interpretation would that where one player had to withdrawn, due to injury or ness, another would take his pla in order to make it possible the game to be played by 11 m on each side, but the interpret tion placed on the rule was th no substitution could be made any cause after the game h started. For many years there been fault found with this ru This country was conspicuous its advocacy of a change, but e in England itself the advocates substitutions were numerous. was in response to this that International Board has chan the rule, but the new rule is more satisfactory than the old. reads: "The game shall be pla by not more than 11 players each side. By arrangement ma before the commencement of match (but not in a match pla under the rules of a competiti substitutes may be allowed in place of injured players."

Rule Is Unsatisfactory.

The inference is that it is tended to permit substitutions o in exhibition games, but if rule is to be interpreted by plication and inference, why infer that "under the rules of competition" really means "un the rules of a competition forbids substitutions." Then th is the clause that the game be played by "not more than players." That would seem to solutely forbid substitutions any time, for the moment a stitution is made on a team w started with 11 players, that l is exceeded.

At its last meeting, the Un States Football Association Co cil appointed a special commi to devise a rule for submis to the Federation International Football to permit substituti This committee, consisting of thur Sale of Michigan, Sam G win of California and William Haddock of Western Pennsylva recommended a rule permi two substitutions for injury at time except in the last 15 min of play. The rule would have better had it been worded so the substitution period ended 75 minutes of play, for the Nat Challenge and other cup com tions, prescribe extra periods play where the score is a t the end of the usual 90 min The recommendation of this sp committee has received the un mous approval of the Nat Commission and will be forw to the F. I. F. A. It is in sense a better rule than the ing one, especially in the defi ness of its terms.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—While the passing of the calendar year comes about in the thick of the soccer season, it is not amiss to take a look backward just to see what souvenirs of his passage old Father Time left behind him and then a look forward to prepare the field for even better things.

Looking backward, there is enough in sight to mark 1923 as a year of vital importance in soccer. The most satisfying thing in this country, is naturally the terrific rush onward the game is making. The United States Football Association celebrated its tenth birthday last spring. During those 10 years there were many discouragements, but hard work and sincere effort have at last won their reward, and the association can now regard itself as an established success.

Big Increase in Attendance.

Taking the attendance test as a fair one, the rapid advance of the sport is indicated by the fact that the National Challenge Competition of 1921-22 attracted a total paid attendance of 95,019; the total for 1922-23 was 129,857; the attendance in the first three rounds of the 1923-24 competition indicates last year's total will be eclipsed. A second round cup match played at Fall River Nov. 18 drew a paid attendance of 14-875 persons, approximately 5000 more than last year's final.

The improvement in playing skill has been as marked as the improvement in attendance. Young America has injected its instintive vim and speed into the game, and with a surprisingly heavy importation of high-class players from Scotland and England, these youngsters have had the best kind of instruction and have profited accordingly. The result is a far better balance as between the teams, the star teams finding it harder to defeat clubs which in former years were easy for them.

One of the most conspicuous events of the year was the attempt by the International Board to revise the first law of the game in such a way as to permit substitutions in a limited way during the progress of the game. From the beginning of soccer government by the Football Association, Limited, substitutions have been forbidden by edict, rather than by rule. The old rule simply read, "The game shall be played by 11 players on each side." The natural interpretation would be that where one player had to be withdrawn, due to injury or illness, another would take his place in order to make it possible for the game to be played by 11 men on each side, but the interpretation placed on the rule was that no substitution could be made for any cause after the game had started. For many years there has been fault found with this rule. This country was conspicuous in its advocacy of a change, but even in England itself the advocates of substitutions were numerous. It was in response to this that the International Board has changed the rule, but the new rule is no more satisfactory than the old. It reads: "The game shall be played by not more than 11 players on each side. By arrangement made before the commencement of a match (but not in a match played under the rules of a competition) substitutes may be allowed in the place of injured players."

Rule Is Unsatisfactory.

The inference is that it is intended to permit substitutions only in exhibition games, but if the rule is to be interpreted by implication and inference, why not infer that "under the rules of a competition" really means "under the rules of a competition that forbids substitutions." Then there is the clause that the game shall be played by "not more than 11 players." That would seem to absolutely forbid substitutions at any time, for the moment a substitution is made on a team which started with 11 players, that limit is exceeded.

At its last meeting, the United States Football Association Council appointed a special committee to devise a rule for submission to the Federation Internationale de Football to permit substitutions. This committee, consisting of Arthur Sale of Michigan, Sam Goodwin of California and William S. Haddock of Western Pennsylvania, recommended a rule permitting two substitutions for injury at any time except in the last 15 minutes of play. The rule would have been better had it been worded so that the substitution period ended after 75 minutes of play, for the National Challenge and other cup competitions, prescribe extra periods of play where the score is a tie at the end of the usual 90 minutes. The recommendation of this special committee has received the unanimous approval of the National Commission and will be forwarded to the F. I. F. A. It is in every sense a better rule than the existing one, especially in the definiteness of its terms.

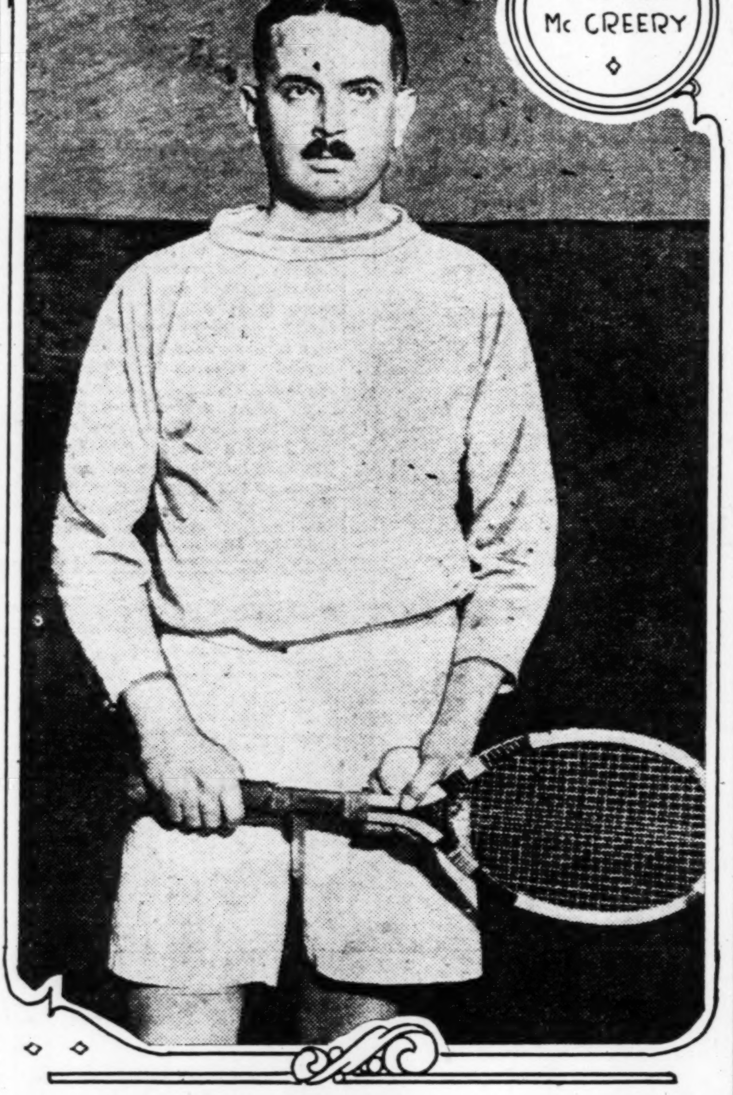
Other outstanding events of the year were the determination to send a team to France to play in the Olympic Games, to grant this honor to the winner of the Amateur Cup Competition, which is proceeding in a generally satisfactory manner, and a swing through the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain territory by National Secretary Cahill which has given tremendous impetus to soccer in those sections, especially in the school and junior grades.

Don't Ever Let Anyone Tell You That Squash Tennis Is a Game for "Sissies"

Sport Requires Quickness of Eye, Splendid Physical Condition and if You're Afraid of a Black Eye, Don't Take Up the Game —Western Tourney to Be Played at Racquet Club.

By William J. McGoogan

St. Louis Squash Tennis Champion



ANDREW McCREERY

"My goodness, George, I see the Western squash tennis tournament has been awarded to St. Louis," said a witty commuter as he looked up from his newspaper a few weeks ago.

"No, don't tell me that," replied his equally witty friend. "What's it all about? Another one of those agricultural shows?"

"No, just another silly game," explained the wise commuter. "It's something like ping pong and yet more like tiddle de winks. If those boys don't watch real smart they'll be spraining a little finger or getting their hair all mussed up."

Mr. Commuter and his friend George were about as well informed about squash tennis as the average St. Louisan. The writer heard the remark and determined to remove his ignorance of squash tennis by an investigation. Inquiries disclosed that there were squash tennis courts at the Racquet and University clubs and an appointment was made with the club professionals.

Sissy Game?—Hardly.

It's too bad the commuter could not have made a similar investigation, for it doesn't take long to learn that squash tennis is a real he-man's game, one requiring quickness of eye, a strong arm, agility of foot and no small degree of stamina. It is about as different from ping pong and tiddle de winks as college football is different from casino or pitch. So boys, if there's any sissy in you, stay away from squash tennis.

Joe Dyson, squash tennis professional at the Racquet Club, and Jack Cole, professional at the University Club, explained the game for the writer.

"Squash tennis is not a new game," said Cole. "It has been played for many years and in the eastern section of the United States has a large following. In St. Louis, however, the game is still in its infancy and there are but two organizations which foster the sport. The Racquet Club has about 75 members who play and the University Club has about 120 devotees of the sport on its roster. But it is growing and the more the public becomes familiar with the game the greater will be its interest."

About the time Cole completed his introductory remarks Andrew McCreery, golfer, lawn tennis player, hockey star, ice skater and a former member of the Yale baseball team who is the squash tennis champion of St. Louis, happened along looking for a game. Cole readily agreed to a contest with the double purpose of giving McCreery the workout he needed and presenting the game in the proper light for the writer.

This exhibition removed all doubts from the writer's mind as to the strenuousness of the sport. It is a game which requires everything a man may have in the way of physical endurance. It is full of action, quick, clean action, the kind that takes the eye and holds interest from beginning to end.

The Squash Tennis Court.

The game is played in a boxlike court 32½ feet long, 17 feet wide. The front wall must be 14 feet high while the side and rear walls may be 10 or 12 feet high. The court is divided in two, similar to the markings on a lawn tennis court, by a black line an inch wide which runs from the front to the rear wall and by another black line of the same width which runs across the court 10 feet from the rear wall.

At the base of the front wall is a strip of metal two feet high, extending the width of the court. This is called a "tell tale."

The ball used in squash tennis is similar to a lawn tennis ball except that the cover is a snugly-fitting net instead of the smooth felt used to cover lawn tennis balls. The racquet differs from a regulation lawn tennis racquet only in that its head is a little smaller, the handle a little shorter and it is a little lighter.

The game itself could be described as a combination of handball and lawn tennis. To start the game the server takes his position in one subcourt behind the line running across the court and his opponent stands in the opposite court. The server must hit the ball against the front wall above the service line, which is 6½ feet from the floor and cause it to rebound in his opponent's court in front of the back line. From that point on the game becomes fast and furious. The ball may be hit against any of the four walls or all of them with any amount of force just so it strikes the front wall once above the "tell tale." As in tennis the server can deliver a second ball, if the first is not fairly delivered.

In the exhibition match between McCreery and Cole some "rallies" lasted approximately two or three minutes, the ball bounding back and forth like a thing alive. Then there is an element of danger in the game, which adds spice to the dish. The court is not roomy for two players and the ball, struck with terrific force can painfully injure a player if it strikes him. Then the racquet is liable to slip from a player's hands and strike his opponent. This happened recently to Cole and he suffered an injury to his mouth which required three stitches. A "mollycoddle's" game? Not so you can notice it.

Score as in Handball.

Points may be scored only by the player holding the service. Should he lose a stroke, he forfeits his serve, but when he causes his opponent to miss he is credited with one point. Fifteen points constitute a game and a set is usually decided by the best two out of three but the rules permit a contest to be decided by three victories in five and that is usually the length of the finals of a championship tournament.

The ceiling and lights above the court are in the same class with the tell board. A player who hits the ceiling or lights loses a point or the serve.

There are, of course, several other rules governing the play.

Previous to this year there have been inter-club and inter-city squash tennis tournaments but this will be the first time a tournament will be held which will bring into competition players of the middle western section of the country.

The tournament will be played at the Racquet Club on Jan. 23, 24, 25 and 26. The committee handling the event is headed by J. C. McCluney, as chairman. The club has donated a cup to be competed for annually.

Play in the coming tournament will be contested by five man teams from clubs which enter in addition to the individual event. It is expected that players from Cincinnati, Omaha and possibly Chicago and Kansas City will compete with the St. Louis teams of the Racquet and University Clubs.

McCreery Is Champion.

Of the St. Louis players who are expected to compete, Andy McCreery, by virtue of his championship, is of course conceded the best chance for the title. However, Roland Hoerr is also a very good player and at the present time leads McCreery in the ranking of the University Club play. However, Hoerr recently sprained an ankle and while it is expected he will have recovered sufficiently to play it is feared his form may be affected. Eddie Limberg, too, is one of the city's outstanding stars. He played at the Racquet Club.

Jack Cole and Joe Dyson, professionals, are not eligible, of course, to play in the amateur tournament but it is expected that an exhibition match will be arranged between the two. Judging from their past encounters it should be a thriller.

Brooklyn Has Seven St. Louis Players on Roster for Next Year

WITH the announcement of the recall of Ray Schmandt by the Brooklyn club and the purchase several months ago of Johnny Jones, Robinson now has six native St. Louisans on his club.

If one were to count Jack Fournier, who now makes his home in St. Louis, Brooklyn has almost enough Mound City players to man a full team. With High on third, Jones at short, Mullen at second and Schmandt on first, the infield would be all-St. Louis. There are also Fournier, Bert Griffith and Leo Dickermann to round out the team.

M'CREERY WINS FINAL OF SQUASH TOURNEY

Andy McCreery, squash tennis champion of St. Louis, had an easy time winning the Class A final match of the handicap tournament at the University Club from A. L. Shapleigh yesterday afternoon. McCreery won in three successive games by scores of 15-10, 15-8 and 15-12.

Sarazen Tells Golfers How To Correct Hook and Slice

American Professional Champion Outlines Methods of Perfecting Straight Drive — Solid, Steady Swing Necessary.

By Gene Sarazen,
American Professional Champion.
(Copyright, 1923.)

In my next series of articles I am going to run through the various shots and to offer some tips, just as I do with my pupils, who, having learned the fundamentals of the golf swing must then proceed to polish off the rough spots and to acquire smoothness in the

We shall assume that you have learned to hit the ball pretty well and that you are beginning to play down in the nineties. Nevertheless, your game is very uncertain. You have a tendency to slice or to hook or to sky your drive.

Perhaps you meet the ball quite solidly but you fail to get the distance you think you ought to obtain or would like to get.

Whatever your fault may be, you can be sure of this: you can't score well consistently until you are quite sure of your swing and until you have learned to hit the ball in the same manner on every shot.

The commonest fault of the average player in driving, as I see it, is swaying the body. Some folks manage to connect with the ball despite this fault, but it is impossible to obtain any distance if you sway.

At the top of the swing the right shoulder and right knee should be in practically straight line; the weight of the body should be evenly balanced on the right foot and the ball of the left foot with the left knee turned in towards the ball.

The head should be in fixed position almost directly over the ball. Practice this pivoting until it becomes mechanical.

For Hooking and Slicing.

If you have a tendency to hook, play the ball more off the left foot than the right. I think the best drive can be obtained anyway if you play the ball in advance of the center line of the feet. In this position you are better able to get the right shoulder and the right side of the body into the stroke and to obtain more distance with less effort. When you play the ball off the right foot, unless you take an open stance you have to do most of the work with the arms. If, however, your fault is slicing, play the ball more off the right foot than the left and take the club back with a flater swing. That is, bring the club around the body rather than straight back. Do not, however, make the swing too flat.

To void slicing, make sure also of keeping the arms close to the body throughout the swing. You would do well, too, to cut down your swing as much as possible and to keep the left arm very straight.

If you are skying your drives, turn the hands, particularly the right, over so that both hands will be on top. You must watch out, though, that you do not turn the right hand over too far else you will find yourself slicing. With the hands well on top of the shaft you would lose some power, but this will help you to keep down the flight of the ball so that you would really obtain a longer drive.

Get Direction First.

To obtain as much distance as possible you must try to get your body into the swing as well as the arms. But one can overdo it and it is well to work up to this gradually. If you are quite sure of your direction start turning the right shoulder on the down swing.

But do not turn the body away from the ball. Think of hitting right through the ball and of following the flight of the ball with the right side of the body. It is wise, however, to be content with less distance if you are getting direction and gradually to work up the distance.

Above all strive for smoothness and accuracy. Take the club back slowly and you will be quite certain of speeding it up on the down-stroke. It is speed in the down swing which gets the distance and if you swing the club back too fast you are bound to lose some speed and the sense of timing in the down-stroke

M'Tigue Obdurate, Faces Suspension

Row With Manager Keeps Champion From Fulfilling Contract to Box Tunney.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — Prospects of a match between Mike McTigue, world's light-heavyweight champion and either Gene Tunney, the American 175-pound titleholder, or Georges Carpentier, were practically eliminated today when McTigue and his manager, Joe Jacobs, failed to patch up their differences at a conference with promotor Tex Rickard.

McTigue declared after the conference that he would not go through with the contract Jacobs signed for a fight with Tunney and also refused to accept his manager's compromise terms for a bout at Madison Square Garden with Carpentier.

McTigue added that he probably would leave in the near future for Europe in search of fights, not returning to the United States until August, when his contract with Jacobs expired. It was pointed out, however, that the light-heavyweight champion, under the State athletic commission's rules, would become automatically suspended if he failed to go through with the Tunney match by April, when the time limit for fulfilling that contract expires.

Cleveland and McKinley Basket Prospects Dull

Central Has Scoring Combination of Promise in Cristal, Cameron and Browne.

YEATMAN SUFFERS LOSS

Charlie Hannegan Out as Result of Football Injury.

The Christmas holiday season will not be a period of idleness for the candidates for the local interscholastic basketball teams. The coaches of the several units have decreed holiday practice for all the teams that are represented in the High School League and this practice includes games with the independent fives of the outside schools.

Central High, title holder of last season, is favored with a strong representation again this year. Dave Cristal, the scoring ace of the Interscholastic League in the past campaign, and Will Thomas, the spectacular running guard of the 1922-23 Red and Black five are once more available for Coach "Doc" Callan. Both of these men were selected for the all-star team last season.

An Effective Combination.

Cameron, Brown and Goldberg, substitutes of last season, are the most likely choices for regular berths on the present quintet. Cameron has been showing well at center. He is a big, strong lad and is a shooter of long and spectacular shots. Browne is also a big youth and he is a very consistent forward. With Cristal, this trio should form a heavy scoring unit. Thomas will be aided in the guarding job by Goldberg who is a greatly improved basketeer this season.

Cleveland Handicapped.

The real strength of the Cleveland High five will not be evidenced until the first half of the season has been completed. The Carondelet team will then be able to use five men of ability who at the present time are ineligible because of studies. This quintet, Reinhardt, Pate, Musgrove, Ford and Kohl will greatly increase the efficiency of the players who will bear the Carondelet colors in the opening games.

Coach Lee Carlson has been working his McKinley five in daily practice sessions at the First Regiment Armory and has now succeeded in assembling a good combination from an array of green men. The Crimson team has been showing big improvement in its last few workouts. Lorenz, Doyle and Hubell of the McKinley seconds have had some experience but the other candidates Barton, Freeman, Antrobus, Thomas, Itner and Heil are all in the recruit class.

The loss of Charley Hannegan, an all-star player of great merit will handicap the Yeatman five at the start of the race. Hannegan was injured in the final football game of the season and has not been able to attend basketball practice. He may enter the game at the opener on Jan. 5 but he will not be in top shape. Coach Lewis is building a strong five for the North Enders and expects to give the rival quintets a hard race for the title.

Harry White the director of cage destiny at Soldan is making good progress with the West Enders. White has developed Hager and Layman into centers of real value and has placed Washburn and Ritter at the forwards. Rawdon, Lawrence and Roberson will likely receive the regular positions as guards, one acting as relief man.

Billiken Basket Player Is Injured

Stanton, Running Guard, Will Be Out of Practice for 10 Days.

Tom Stanton, who has been working as running guard for the St. Louis University basketball squad suffered a fracture of a bone in his wrist during a practice session Friday. An X-ray of the injured member was made and physicians advised Stanton that he will not be able to work for at least 10 days. Stanton was a center in his high school days, but has been shifted to guard position because of the brilliance shown by Kapl and the Bradburn brothers, who constiute the attacking portion of the Blue and White cage team.

Renfro, formerly a high school star at Collinsville, will fill the guard berth in Stanton's absence. Renfro was an all-star choice during his preparatory school days.

Savage has not been able to get more than a handful of men out for the practice sessions due to faculty interference in the medical and dental schools. Several former players, who have been prevented from attending the practices, have notified Coach Savage that they will form a quintet and scrimmage the regulars if the coach can arrange to hold his workouts at night instead of in the afternoon. Savage has indicated that he will comply with the request.

Decline of Club Meets in England Reported by Critic

TRACK meets now being held at the various Oxford and Cambridge colleges and which will culminate in the Oxford-Cambridge match next spring, are arousing discussion as to what has become of the real amateur club meetings in England as distinct from athletic meetings at which gate money is taken. There are only two or three clubs in the entire country that go in for anything like old-fashioned club meetings, in the opinion of Harefoot in the Athletic News. Club spirit seems to have gone out of track athletics. It exists only in connection with cross-country events. Prizes of high value in open meets, have brought about the change, but the promotion of such meets now is becoming a great risk. Prize values may yet be reduced, not perhaps forced by A. A. A. rule, but by the necessity of making both ends meet financially. Not until then is a revival of the club spirit expected.

WILLYS-OVERLAND GOAL 300,000 CARS IN 1924

President John N. Willys Announces Firm Plans Production Worth $250,000,000—30,000 a Month.

Willys-Overland plans to produce $250,000,000 worth of automobiles during 1924, according to William H. Taylor, branch manager. President John N. Willys has announced that, according to contracts already on file with practically all of the Willys-Overland branches, distributers and dealers throughout the world, Willys-Overland production will have to exceed 300,000 cars to take care of the apparent demand.

The increase in the Willys-Overland dealer organization compared with this period last year is more than 100 per cent.

As the initial step toward the fulfillment of these orders, President Willys has further announced a curtailment of the annual inventory period, which began Dec. 17. In previous years this work has always taken until after the holidays, but this year instructions have been issued that the work must be speeded up so that the wheels of production will be turning again by Jan. 1.

During 1923 Willys-Overland's production mounted to more than 200,000 cars, doubling last year's output.

With the 1924 demand anticipated, President Willys has been in constant conference with the factory organization regarding plans that will permit a resumption of activities following the curtailed inventory period on a much greater scale than ever attempted previously.

In order to meet the demand Willys-Overland production will be stepped up to more than 30,000 cars a month in the early months of the year. It is stated that if the materials required for this output were put into one solid trainload the train would reach from Toledo to New York City.

Inasmuch as 12,000 have been employed at the factory during the fall months there will be no difficulty in expanding the organization to meet the increased requirements.

DETAILS OF ROLLIN CAR ARE ANNOUNCED

Word has just been received from the executive offices of the Rollin Motors Co. at Cleveland, giving full description of models, specifications and prices of the new line of Rollin cars.

It is stated by the factory officials that the initial dealer demand for this product approaches the great record established by Dodge Brothers when they first announced their new car.

The new Rollin with European type, small displacement, high speed motor, four-wheel brakes and balloon tires comes in three models: Five-passenger touring phaeton, $975; three-passenger sport coupe, $1175; five-passenger sedan, $1275. The touring car also comes with wood wheels, cord tires, four-wheel brakes, but without de luxe equipment, $895.

It is interesting to note that the most important unit of this car, the motor, has many brand-new features developed by Rollin White. The motor itself is of the light weight European type. It is extremely light, simple and compact.

In connection with this motor is incorporated a new type of force feed lubrication to all rotating motor bearings—new in that this type of lubrication has never before been worked out for a popular priced car. There is also a new manifold and carburetor development. The motor is also designed with a very sturdy four-bearing crankshaft.

The new Rollin is the first popular priced car to be equipped with the internal type of four-wheel brakes. Rollin is also the first popular priced car to incorporate Firestone balloon tires.

BUICK DEALERS TO HAVE SALES CONTEST

F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., and officials of the company, entertained the presidents, sales managers and salesmen of the nine retail Buick distributors in St. Louis at a dinner Saturday evening, Dec. 15, at the Melbourne Hotel roof garden.

The purpose was to announce a five months' sales contest for the nine Buick dealer organizations beginning Dec. 16 and ending May 15, 1924. The contest will be decided on points.

To the organization winning will be presented a beautiful hammered silver loving cup which will be known as the "Vesper-Buick cup," and which will be the permanent possession of the dealer who wins it.

The salesmen on the winning team are each to be presented with a gold watch fob or emblem which will be suitably engraved to designate its purpose. In addition to the grand prize contest, the period of time is also divided into five monthly prize contests, the winner of these monthly contests to be the dealer organization scoring the greatest number of points each month.

In order to graphically picture the contest, the points of each team in the race will be shown on a race track which encircles the entire United States, beginning at St. Louis.

Rule details of the contest were outlined in talks by F. W. A. Vesper, president, W. H. Vesper, vice president, and J. F. Dawson, advertising manager of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co.

PACKARD PRODUCTION 55 PCT. ENCLOSED TYPES

Automobile manufacturers found in 1923 that the big tendency in demand was for a great increase in the sale of enclosed cars. Curious to know just how great this increase has been, G. M. Berry, president of the Berry Motor Car Co., Packard distributors, asked for figures showing the percentage of enclosed cars to open cars, from the Packard factory at Detroit.

He learned that 54.68 per cent of all the cars now being produced by the Packard company are enclosed. Still more illuminating were the percentages for the last five years. In 1918, 8 per cent of all Packard cars produced were enclosed coaches. In 1919, the ratio of enclosed to open cars leaped to 14 per cent. Demand fell off somewhat in 1920 when only 13.5 per cent were enclosed cars but in 1921 it was 31.2 per cent and in 1922 31.9 per cent. Officers of the Packard company expect that 58 per cent of its cars in 1924 will be enclosed.

"The increase in the sale of enclosed cars," said Berry, "has brought about a volume of production that has made it possible for the manufacturers to build coaches of even the most luxurious type at far lower cost than ever before was possible. This, I think, in turn has increased sales.

"The wide difference in price between the enclosed car and the open touring car has lessened to the point where more people now can afford the comfort of the enclosed car which has had more than anything else to do with the big increase in enclosed cars now being turned out by the factories."

LEWIS NOW MANAGER OF CADILLAC ADVERTISING

Announcement has been made by the Cadillac Motor Car Co. of Detroit of the appointment of William W. Lewis, former central district manager, to the position of advertising manager, succeeding Verne E. Burnett, who has been transferred to the secretaryship of the General Motors Institutional Advertising Committee.

Lewis' previous experience has been wholly as a sales executive. He has covered the Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky territory for the Cadillac company during the past 18 months.

In his former automotive connection which continued for 12 years, he covered every district in United States and Canada as district manager, and also served for a period of six years as assistant sales manager.

FORMER ST. LOUISAN LEADS TEMPLAR CO.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 22.—Reorganization of the Templar Motor Car Co. of Cleveland has just been completed with T. L. Hausmann as president and $5,000,000 new capital, it is announced.

The plant in Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland, occupies 19 acres and is capable of turning out 50,000 passenger cars annually. Manufacture has begun on the 1924 schedule of production.

Hausmann was formerly head of the Mercer Motor Sales Co. in New York controlling the distribution of the entire output of the Mercer car. Later in St. Louis in connection with the Willys-Overland car, he was known, it is said, as the largest independent distributor of automobiles in the world.

Other officials of the new Templar organization include: C. L. Welch, general sales manager; Thomas O. Gibbs, treasurer; Louis Wickham, secretary; Fred Nehrbas, works manager, and Ralph Chesnutt, chief engineer.

RICKENBACKER STOCK TAKEN OFF MARKET

President B. F. Everitt of the Rickenbacker Motor Co. has just notified the Diesing Motor Sales Co., Rickenbacker distributers, that Rickenbacker Motor stock has been oversubscribed by several hundred thousand dollars and its sale has been discontinued.

Some time since the company decided to withdraw from the market $1,000,000 of its authorized issue and retain the stock in the treasury. This decision was due to the fact that the directors considered that there was plenty of finances for operation and the company was operating on a profitable basis.

"We have over 10,000 shareholders," says Everitt, in his letter, "and the only large blocks of stock are held by the active executive heads of the company. Every director is at his desk at the factory every day—we have no 'dummy' directors nor absentee control. That, in our opinion, is the chief reason for Rickenbacker success.

"Our 1923 production was 125 per cent greater than 1922 and prospects for the coming year are greater than ever before!"

IRA FLAGSTEAD MAKES LONG TRIP IN BUICK

Ira Flagstead, hard-hitting outfielder of the Boston American League baseball club, has arrived at his home at Olympia, Wash., with his 24 Buick six-cylinder sedan, which was delivered to him at the factory at Flint, Mich., and driven across the continent. Regarding his trip Mr. Flagstead reports as follows:

"I received delivery of my new sport touring on Oct. 1. Seven days later with only 515 miles registered on the speedometer, I left for home, a distance of just 3210 miles, and the only pavement I saw on the trip was on the main streets of the cities we passed through and from Hood River, Ore., to Olympia. Even between Portland and Olympia I was just one day too early for the new pavement. On this 3210 miles I used 198 gallons of gas, an average of 16 and one-third miles to the gallon. I averaged 356 miles a day and my best day's run was 416 miles. We were just eight and one-half days' running time as we stopped a half day in Chicago and two days in Iowa. We put in no oil during the trip excepting the complete change of oil that we made in the motor every 500 or 600 miles.

"I feel a special interest in this car of mine from the fact that it was in the course of construction when I arrived at the factory and I stood and watched them tighten the last nuts and bolts and start the car for the first time. Having only driven the car one week and the speedometer only registered 515 miles before I started on this trip gives me even more confidence in the car."

The Champion Body Co., 3147 Locust street, have during the past week, put on display the new Chevrolet coach body. The new body is very roomy and holds four passengers.

Quality of Tire Not Judged by Looks.

The "looks" of a tire certainly do not determine its quality. Motorists are turning more and more to the purchase of standard makes of tires. They are coming to realize that the standard tire makers, producing their products in far greater quantities than the "no-name" or "gyp" brands, have been able to reduce their manufacturing costs to a minimum. Consequently, any tire that is sold for less than a standard make must be of inferior quality. Initial cost of a tire is not the proper means for determining tire value. The cost per mile is what actually counts.

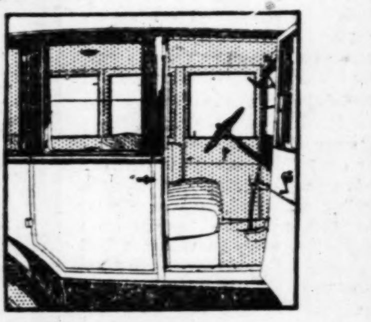
Fordor Sedan
$685
F. O. B. Detroit



—for Christmas

IT IS not at all surprising that the new Fordor Sedan is proving extremely popular as a Christmas gift. For this handsome closed type body is a truly exceptional value at its present low price.

Important improvements in outward design and interior appointments have made it a much more attractive car—more gracefully proportioned, more richly furnished.

Notable among the changes introduced are a higher radiator, larger hood and cowl, water-tight windshield, more sturdy steering column, broadcloth upholstery, revolving type window regulators and bar type door handles.

Inspect this new Fordor Sedan at your first opportunity and arrange for its delivery on Christmas morning. It will be a pleasant surprise for every member of your family.

DODGE BROTHERS
MOTOR CAR

Value so pronounced that you are justified in looking upon the purchase of a Dodge Brothers Motor Car as the soundest possible investment in transportation.

Not a dollar is added to the purchase price to support a free service policy; nor to cover the costliness of numerous body or chassis types; nor to pay interest on borrowed money; nor to maintain a multiple organization of middlemen.

Dodge Brothers finance themselves. They sell directly through a single organization of dealers to you. They do not believe in charging in advance for service you may never need. They have developed remarkable economies, and a time-seasoned product, by concentrating on standard types.

These facts are reflected, not only in the price of the Car, but in the quality of workmanship and materials that enter into its construction.

ESSEX SIX KEEPS ON DRAWING CROWDS

"WE believe that during the past two weeks," said R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Co., yesterday, "that St. Louis has seen the greatest reception accorded the new Essex Six that has ever been given a new car coming into the local market.

"The crowds have been tremendous and our sales have been even beyond our expectations," continued Frampton.

"We consider the manner in which this car has been received as a tribute to the engineers of the Hudson Motor Car Co., who designed the new automobile."

The crowds at Hudson-Frampton during the past week were large, though not so numerous as the previous week, which was the first, during which the new car was shown here. The decorations at the Hudson-Frampton showroom were changed somewhat to tie-up with the Christmas spirit.

The new Essex, around which has circulated so many rumors, is a six and offers in the coach what is said to be the only six cylinder enclosed car on the market at less than $1000, listing at $975, f. o. b. the factory. The new coach has 6½ inches more leg room than the original Essex coach, and 2 inches more head room above the front seat.

The touring car body is trimmed with genuine hand buffed leather, such as is used in the present Essex and Hudson open body. The top is made from the same material as Hudson tops. Both Essex models are painted blue, with red wheels. The power plant is new throughout. The engine is of an L-head type. One of the principal factors in its smoothness and power is a crankshaft built under the Super-Six patents.

NASH MANAGER FINDS CONDITIONS SOUND

Indications pointing to even greater advance of the automobile industry in 1924, so far as standard makes of cars are concerned, are seen by E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the Nash Motors Co., who has returned to the factory after a business trip that took him through the Northwest, into Canada, down the West coast, through California, through the Southwest to New Orleans, and as far southeast as Charlotte, N. C.

"On every hand," said McCarty in a letter to F. C. MacDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co., "business men generally are looking forward with confidence to a period of continued sound prosperity during the coming year. In practically all of the sections visited business was apparently satisfactory; in some places conditions were more favorable than in others, but even at points where slow progress had prevailed for several years past, improvement was apparent and optimism over the coming year was seemingly unanimous.

"Throughout the territory west of the Rocky Mountains, sales of Nash cars have shown a gain of 55 per cent this year over 1922 and there is every reason to believe that a further gain of almost similar proportions may be expected in this same territory in 1924. In visiting the small towns through these sections the dealers who represent a good line of cars feel confident they will show greater increase in business during the year to come than was enjoyed in 1923, and there is a decided feeling of confidence on the part of Nash dealers in the advancement of their business during the coming year."

ZONE SALES MANAGERS APPOINTED BY HAYNES

Six zone sales managers have been appointed to be in charge of Haynes sales in as many zones in the United States, according to an announcement from the administration offices of the Haynes Automobile Co., Kokomo, Ind.

The appointments are as follows: Harry S. Erd, for the northeastern section; Don F. Whittaker, for the central east; W. R. Simpson, for the central south; Fred J. Zimmer, for the Middle states, including the St. Louis territory; William A. Peck, for the states of Washington, Oregon and California; and C. F. Partridge for the states of North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

HEARNE WINS TITLE WITH CHAMPION PLUGS

By finishing second in both the Kansas City and Beverly Hills races, Eddie Hearne, veteran racing wizard, succeeded in winning the speedway championship for 1923 on points scored. In commenting on his success immediately after the final race, Hearne said:

"By winning second place at the Beverly Hills race Thanksgiving day I am the national speedway champion for the 1923 season. I used Champion spark plugs in this race, also when I won second place at the Kansas City race."

Christmas and Home

Head Your List—
A Home for Christmas

To a man of mature years Christmas is a composite celebration.

When he lights the candles on his children's Christmas tree, he lights the memory candles on a long succession of Christmas trees that burned when he was a child in his father's home.

Home! That's the beloved association with Christmas as he sees it in retrospect. His parents' home—his own home during all the years of boyhood and adolescence.

The Christmas memory is richer because it centers about one home, and his heart is grateful for the steadying influence which the fixed associations, the lasting friendships, and the substantial position of his parents in the community had upon his life.

Some day, kind father, your boy and your girl will light Christmas trees in their own homes. What memories will they awaken?

You think you know how to give good gifts to your family. Your only thought in selecting them is to give to each the thing that will create the greatest happiness.

In the light of all experience, that gift is a Home of their Own.

Give it to them this Christmas; it will be dearer to them next Christmas and it will be the best gift in the world for all succeeding Christmases—even as a memory. Today in the Post-Dispatch the reliable real estate dealers of St. Louis have listed many ideal homes and home sites from which you may make your choice of a Christmas gift.

The present and future values which they represent, the advantageous terms upon which they may be purchased, will be a happy surprise for you.

Investigate now. Buy a home now.

Let a Christmas tree grow in your own yard; let a Christmas hearth glow in your own living room; let the Christmas spirit of peace pervade your heart as you face the future—unafraid, because you have provided your family with the best of all gifts—a Home.

N. DAKOTA AMATEUR RELAYS LONG MESSAGE FROM M'MILLAN

Story of Interview With Santa Claus Is Picked Up and Relayed for Boys and Girls.

An unusual example of the value of amateur radio to the country was shown recently when Len Weeks, operating station 9DKB, at Minot, N. D., "copied" a long account of how MacMillan interviewed Santa Claus near the North Pole. The story was received direct, being transmitted from the Bowdoin, which is frozen in the ice near Etah, North Greenland. Other amateurs who heard the message being transmitted from the Bowdoin, are J. E. Brickett of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, and Gordon L. Davy of Minot, N. D.

Jack Bamsley, an amateur operator at Prince Rupert, B. C., who has been the connecting link receiving and relaying messages from the MacMillan expedition to the outer world, was on vacation, and Weeks took the message to be forwarded.

Weeks has a regular schedule with the Bowdoin every morning at 2 o'clock to relay messages from members of the expedition to relatives and friends in the United States.

Method of Calculation.

For approximate calculation, to obtain kilocycles, divide 300,000 by the number of meters; to obtain meters, divide 300,000 by the number of kilocycles. For example, 100 meters equals approximately 3000 kilocycles, 300 meters equals 1000 kilocycles, 1000 meters equals 300 kilocycles, 3000 meters equals 100 kilocycles.

RADIO ESSENTIAL IN LIGHTHOUSE SERVICE

Valuable Aid to Navigation as Well as Providing Entertainment for Keepers.

Radio has come to form so vital a part in the work of the United States lighthouse service that the aid of a radio engineer has just been secured to apply the best means of radio communication and position finding in this coastwise service. John L. Preston, a radio engineer, who has been active in the radio laboratory of the Bureau of Standards for the past five years has been transferred to the lighthouse service, where he will shortly take up his new duties.

Radio has been employed in the lighthouse service for several years, handled through the efforts of the engineers on duty there with the co-operation of the Bureau of Standards, but, with the extension of the work in radio direction finding as well as communication, a specialist has been found necessary.

Of the vessels used in the coast wise safety service, 57 are now equipped for communication by radio; of this number, 30 are steamers and 27 lightships anchored off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Ten radio beacons, or fog signal stations, are now in operation afloat and ashore. These stations, situated at dangerous or important points on the sea or lakes, transmit by automatic apparatus radio signals during fog or thick weather by which vessels provided with radio compasses may take definite bearings to guide them en route or toward harbors. Although invisible and perhaps 100 or more miles distant, these beacons become "visible" by virtue of distinctive radio signals and their bearings may be readily reckoned. Five other beacons are now under construction and 32 more are proposed as soon as funds are available for their equipment.

The Lighthouse Service advocates the use of a radio compass aboard ships and not on the shore as in the Navy Department system. Most of the vessels employed by the service are now equipped with radio compasses, by virtue of which they can not only locate stations and beacons but find the bearings of other vessels transmitting or in need of aid.

Part of Mr. Preston's work will be to determine what type of apparatus now on the market is suitable for the service; he will investigate the four or five types of radio compasses, for example, and may recommend a standard type for the ships in the service, to which the Lighthouse officials are as yet not committed. All radio phenomena will be investigated as well as all forms of transmitting and receiving apparatus, suitable for off-shore signaling. In a word, the duties of the new engineer will be to correlate pure and applied science of radio.

Besides the purely official use of radio throughout the service, its application has been found very beneficial as a means of emergency communication and for entertainment. So much interest has developed among lighthouse personnel, that a radio club with a periodic publication has been in existence for some time. Transmitting and receiving sets, built by the keepers of lights themselves, where no standard equipment was installed, in many instances have brought them into touch with the world, saved lives in emergencies and enabled the keepers to send or receive important information. All of this has added to the efficiency of the service.

A case in point took place at Tree Point Light Station, off Alaska, where no regular transmitting station exists; the enterprise of the Second Assistant Keeper, however, in having built a homemade transmitting set, probably saved the life of his wife. When she was suddenly taken ill, he was able to radio to a neighboring radio station for aid. The Tender Fern, coming from Ketchikan, Alaska, took his wife back to a hospital for treatment.

An emergency radio-telephone transmitter constructed from spare parts aboard the Tender Mandrono by Aperator George Owens, enabled the engineers to test out a radio-telephone set at the light station they were installing at St. George Reef, Cal., as soon as it was finished, saving time and expense.

Means of radio communication has enabled the service to replace lights extinguished in record time, warn vessels of dangerous positions, call for aid, in some cases to render aid to ships, and generally expedite the life-saving work as well as to furnish entertainment through receiving sets alone at many smaller outlying ships and stations not supplied with radio operators, and where mail is irregular and no other means of communication exists.

JOHANNESBURG BROADCASTER

Completion of a large broadcasting station at Johannesburg, South Africa, will be accomplished about Jan. 1, 1924, according to Consul G. K. Donald. An increasing demand for radio sets is expected to follow.

Proper Mounting of Tubes.

Mount the sockets of the dry cell tubes on a soft piece of rubber or on a piece of wood suspended by flexible springs, and much of the noise due to slight or heavy shocks and jars will be eliminated. The tubes should always be mounted in a vertical position. The filament wires have a tendency to sag when heated and if brought in contact with the other elements may cause serious injury to the tube.

Concerning Battery Connections.

Solid wire is best for "A" battery and "B" battery connections, as battery current flows through the entire wire. Radio current which flows in the antennae and through the instruments ahead of the detector remains on the surface of the wire, so that stranded wire gives the best path.

RADIO SETS IN DENMARK

Denmark now has officially licensed 3109 private radio receiving sets, Charge d'Affaires Harriman at Copenhagen, reports. School pupils rank first with 473 sets, commerce, shipping and industry second with 448; office and store employes have 354; artisans, 341; electrical contractors, 334, and laborers, 324, etc.

Radiograms.

Traveling at a speed of 4,500,000 miles in 25 seconds, a radio signal was recently sent from New York City to Warsaw, Poland, and back without the assistance of an operator at either end.

The New Pennsylvania Hotel, one of the largest in Philadelphia, Pa., is equipped with one of the most modern and comprehensive systems in the world. Among its many features is the paging system for guests.

For the Notebook.

The "ground" connection of a receiving set is equally as important as the aerial.

To be absolutely certain of a good "ground," use two or three connections made to the surface of different water pipes.

The filament of a vacuum tube is much more likely to break if the tube is jarred or knocked while hot. The tube should be handled with care at all times, as even a slight jar is often enough to cause the delicate wire to snap.

During a thunderstorm, both the aerial and the ground wire should be disconnected from the set, and then connected together in such a way that any atmospheric electricity collecting in the aerial will pass off harmlessly into the ground.

About Aerials.

A flat-top aerial is an aerial that has one or more wires in it arranged so that it is parallel to the earth. The T aerial is the same type with the lead incoming from the center. In the inverted L aerial the lean-in comes from one end. The cage aerial is the type that has several wires arranged on hooks forming sort of a cage. The single-wire aerial is as efficient as any when used for receiving only.

Antenna and Ground Wires.

The wire from the antenna and ground, where they approach the receiver, should be separated as much as possible, and the receiver should be placed as near as possible to the point where the antenna wire enters the building. The ground connection should be made to the nearest part of the conducting system which is to form the ground, and it is often an advantage to connect to more than one conductor, such as the heating and water pipes.

SHORTAGE OF RADIO MEN

Navy Needs Approximately 500 Operators for Sea and Land Service.

Recent orders of the Naval Bureau of Navigation promoted 67 radiomen and established 210 men as radiomen third class. Despite the appointments and promotions, there is still a shortage of approximately 500 operators in the naval sea and land service. The new orders promote 17 second-class petty officers to first class, and 50 third to second. The advancement of the non-rated men to radiomen third class was as follows: Battle fleet, 105; scouting fleet, 45; Asiatic fleet, 21; control force, 21, and naval forces in Europe, 18.

Advantages of the Crystal.

While a crystal set has a limited range for reception and is unable to amplify or regenerate, it has its advantages. The initial cost is small, and it requires nothing for maintenance.

Radiograms.

Station KPO, San Fancisco, has a record of radio distance transmission. Messages have been heard 6200 miles from this station.

Approximately $30,000,000 is spent annually by broadcasting stations in the United States to send out nationwide entertainments.

A high-powered broadcasting station is being planned by the Rotary Club of Grand Rapids, Mich. Offers to house the station have been made by a church and two hotels.

In Australia a license is necessary before a radio set or parts can be purchased. Licenses are not transferable and sets cannot be sold or loaned to anyone without a license.

All ships in American ports are inspected by the Bureau of Navigation. Their radio equipment is checked, apparatus examined and an inspection of certificate issued showing that the ship is fully prepared to communicate by radio in the event disaster is encountered at sea.

9EKY COMMUNICATES DIRECT WITH HAWAII

Two-Way Communication Established by St. Louisan Makes Distance Record.

What is believed to be the record for long distance two-way amateur transmission was established on the morning of Dec. 19, when station 9EKY owned and operated by Kendrick Rohan, located at 5005 Gittenville avenue, St. Louis, was in direct communication with an amateur at Hilo, Hawaii, an airline distance of more than 4000 miles.

This achievement is even more remarkable when it is considered that it was accomplished on a wave length of 200 meters and with 100 watts power. The "Reyn Fask" circuit was employed, using two 50-watt tubes. The antenna is of the inverted "L" type and consists of four wires, 56 feet high. A counterpoise underneath, composed of 6 wires, is 15 feet above the ground. The receiving set is a Grebe Type CR-8, with one stage of audio frequency amplification.

At 3 a. m. Rohan called a station in California. There came an answer, but not from the station he had called. He listened carefully, clamping the receivers more tightly to his ears. "9EKY 9EKY 9EKY de 6ZE" pinged the transmitter in Hilo, Hawaii, operated by Roland Smith. There was very little static and the distant signals were quite clear. Hurriedly scores of amateur listeners who were "in the air" and had heard the Hilo station request ... from their transmitters in order that the two-way communication which had been established might be carried on. There were no telegrams to exchange and after each told how the signals "came in," the "conversation" (in code and feebler) was terminated.

So far as is known, only one other amateur station in the has "worked" Hawaii. It was a 500-watt station located in Kansas.

The Rohan transmitter is operated by three brothers, Kendrick J., Roland and Walter, who are all ardent radio fans. The station has been in operation 16 months and during this time has been heard in Australia, New Zealand, Alaska, by WNP, the MacMillan expedition in the polar region, and frequently in California. On one occasion, a ship 1200 miles east of New York reported having heard signals from the Rohan station.

SHIP MESSAGES SPOIL BROADCAST RECEPTION

Amateurs Blamed for Interference Caused by Ship-to-Shore Radio Traffic.

With the elimination of amateur interference with broadcast reception through the Government regulation providing for evening "quiet hours" the Department of Commerce is now faced with a serious situation that threatens the pleasure of many thousands of listeners—namely the interference which is being caused nightly by scores of ship telegraph stations.

It was comparatively an easy matter to obtain the co-operation of the amateur through the organization, the American Radio Relay League, but the problem to bring about ship radio stations that are handling life and death messages is another matter. Ship communication is vital to safety at sea and to commerce.

On the one hand are thousands of listeners clamoring for relief from interference that is spoiling their concerts and on the other the positively essential ship and commercial air traffic. Commercial stations, both ship and shore, use from 600 meters and between 300 and 2000 meters. The navy employs waves from 600 upwards, while the army, which causes very little interference, follows the navy.

Among the national organizations which have announced their intention of bringing this matter before the Department of Commerce officials the National Association of Broadcasters, the executive chairman of which, Paul B. Klugh, says: "We agree that ship-to-shore and commercial stations of radiophone [illegible] with the highly popular broadcasting hours, and the real disturbance to uninterrupted reception. We hope to bring some regulation of this at Washington.

"The uninformed broadcast listener, enraged by interference, feels that he must blame someone, and the amateur seems to be the inevitable target. This condition can be much relieved."

RADIOS IN SPITE OF LANDLORDS

As a result of a recent ruling, tenant houses in Cincinnati, O., are permitted to erect aerials on roofs despite the objections of landlords.

Post-Dispatch Radio Station KSD

Daily Schedule

550 Kilocycles
546 Meters

At 9:40, 10:40, 11:40, 12:40, 1:40, 2:40, 4:40, Central Standard Time

Broadcasting of the opening prices, midsession and closing quotations of the St. Louis grain markets, livestock quotations supplied by Market News Service, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture; Liverpool and New York stocks, bonds and money markets; hay and clover, poultry and butter markets; metal markets; U. S. forecast and news bulletins.

8 P. M.

Special programs of music, short addresses and other features. Details announced daily in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Monday, Dec. 24

7:00 P. M.—Vocal and instrumental specialties, orchestra and organ music broadcast direct from the Grand Central Theater.

8:30 P. M.—Program of Christmas Carols given by members of Children's Aid Society of St. Louis.

11:45 P. M.—Broadcasting the Midnight Mass celebrated at the Old St. Louis Cathedral.

Tuesday, Dec. 25

Silent.

Wednesday, Dec. 26

7:00 P. M.—Program by Aeolian Concert Ensemble, Artie Aeleman, violinist. Broadcast direct from Hotel Statler.

9:00 P. M.—Recital by Celine Nash, pianist.

10:00 P. M.—Broadcasting direct from Hotel Statler dance music played by Rodemich's Orchestra.

Thursday, Dec. 27

8:00 P. M.—Studio Artists Recital by Ruth Kelm-Benbow, reader, and Ruth Sounders, pianist.

Friday, Dec. 28

Silent.

Saturday, Dec. 29

8:00 P. M.—Broadcasting "Drake's Drum," the annual play given by the Princeton Triangle Club of Princeton University, at the Odeon.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer.

Q. My aerial is approximately 100 feet long. One end is 40 feet high and the other end is 25 feet high, with lead-in attached to the upper end. If the lower end is raised to the level of the higher, would the results be much improved? W. E. W.

A. It is unlikely that raising the lower end 25 feet would make any difference in the intensity of signals or number of stations heard.

Q. (1) How is a wave-trap made? (2) Is a long lead-in better than a short one? (3) Is a water pipe the best "ground"? J. H.

A. (1) By winding 30 turns of insulated No. 18 wire on a 3½-inch tube and shunting it with a 43-plate variable condenser. (2) No, a short lead-in is to be preferred—the shorter the better, unless the aerial is not long enough to respond to signals of desired broadcasting stations. (3) It is the best, considering the small amount of trouble involved in making it. Copper plates buried in moist earth would probably be somewhat better.

Q. Please advise which pole of the "A" battery should be connected to the negative of the "B" battery? V. P. S.

A. Negative "A" to negative "B" is the usual connection, but before soldering the leads, try negative "B" to positive "A."

Q. How can I legally build and sell radio receiving sets? I understand that a license is necessary. E. W.

A. A license is only necessary for manufacturing and selling receivers which are wired with a patented circuit. Crystal detector sets and some vacuum tube hookups are not patented.

Q. (1) Do "peanut" tubes bring in signals as loud as the C-300 tube? (2) Can "peanut" tubes be used with the improved Armstrong regenerative circuit without making any changes? C. E.

A. (1) No. Not in the opinion of some experienced radio operators. (2) If you mean changes in wiring—yes. A 25-ohm rheostat and a different "A" battery will be required.

Q. My "peanut" tube set came equipped with a three-plate condenser. Would I get better results to change it to a 23-plate type? E. M.

A. Perhaps — depending on where it is connected. As a variable grid condenser, either a condenser of three, or 11 plates may be employed, but for use across the secondary, or as an antenna (series or parallel) condenser, either the 23 or 43 plate size is recommended.

Rules for Efficiency.

Cheap parts with poor electrical qualities and sloppy workmanship which add resistance and cause leaks in the circuit are responsible for virtually every failure in radio. An amateur should exercise every effort in hooking up a set so as to make a good job of it. Use good parts, arrange them neatly and efficiently in the cabinet, keep all wires well separated and exercise great care in soldering connections. If these rules are followed, success is almost sure to follow.

DUPLEX OPERATION ON U.S.S. "COLORADO"

Signals Transmitted Across Continent While Five Stations Were Being Copied.

The battleship "Colorado" has just accomplished what radio engineers said a few years ago was impossible—her radio personnel has succeeded in receiving messages on five different wave lengths while her transmitter was sending dispatches across the continent on another wave length.

This was accomplished by means of a special high-power tube transmitter designed and built for the navy, and the use of special aerials for the receiving sets. Naturally the transmitter is an exceptional one, which emits a pure wave, free from harmonics and "mush," and the receivers were most carefully designed as to selectivity. The difficulty of receiving several messages at a time on a ship, especially if a single aerial is used, is to keep from interfering with the other receiving sets tuned to various waves. This is difficult with an ordinary apparatus, if possible at all, due to the fact that in tuning up and down the scale to waves to which other sets are tuned are interfered with and the messages interrupted.

This system of sending and receiving was effectively tried out by the "Colorado" while lying off the Virginia Capes recently. She transmitted messages to San Diego and San Francisco on a wave of 1430 meters and at the same time copied five stations on 600, 1300, 2300, 4300 and 4600 meters during both day and night watches. The transmitting antenna, with about a 45 ampere input, was only a few feet away from the receiving antenna, a vertical affair of three or four strands suspended from the yard arm, which picked up the messages for the five receiving sets—itself a surprising feat. Two ten-KW capacity water-cooled tubes were used for transmitting the transcontinental messages over a distance of about 3000 miles on the wave of 1430, incidentally a low wave for this work compared with the 17,120-meter wave ordinarily employed by Annapolis for long distance work on the 500KW arc set.

Standard naval receiving sets with amplifiers developed by the U. S. Naval Research Laboratory, Bellevue, D. C., were used in the tests.

To Eliminate "Howling."

"Howling" set can probably be overcome by separating the plate and grid leads, and running them at right angles. If this fails to stop the noise, shield the back of the panel by covering it with a thin sheet of tin foil and connecting the foil to the ground. Care should be taken, however, to see that no metal part of an instrument touches the grounded foil.

To Get Best Results From Tubes.

While the vacuum tube is the most important part of a set, no two of them, even of the same make, give exactly the same results. By this is meant that it is frequently necessary to change the "B" battery voltage to get results from tubes that are apparently exactly alike.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

Something new and of especial interest to variometer enthusiasts is what might be called a vernier-variometer. The outstanding features of this instrument are: Fine tuning, quick adjustment and great selectivity. It consists of the usual stator coil within which are two rotating coils, one with 40 turns (which corresponds to the rotor of the ordinary variometer) and the other a still smaller coil of 10 turns connected in series with the larger and revolving concentrically within. It is so proportioned that a 30-degree movement of the smaller coil gives the effect of but one degree of the larger, thus multiplying the selectivity over the usual variometer 30 times. The position of the smaller coil is controlled by a shaft revolving inside the hollow shaft of the rotor proper, passing through the dial and terminating in a small knob.

The "All-American" vacuum tube socket is a genuine molded one-piece bakelite socket of sturdy construction and possessing several exclusive mechanical and electrical features. A felt gasket supplied with every socket reduces microphonic noises, while double-leaf springs riveted to terminal studs make contact with tube terminals absolutely sure. Slotted nuts are of especial advantage when sockets are mounted close together, as they may easily be tightened with a screwdriver. They are designed for either base or panel mounting.

"Where I Go by Radio" is the title of a station record book just issued by the Progress Press. It is ruled for stations, time, weather conditions, kind of program, number of listeners and tuner settings.

The Autostat is a new departure in the line of rheostats. The Automatic Electrical Devices Co., manufacturers of this device, call it the "super" radio rheostat. Two parallel, mounted, wire-wound, resistance tubes are connected in series by a "micrometer-operated" slider—the length of wire in circuit depending upon the location of this slider. Forty turns of the Autostat knob are required to complete the variation from minimum to maximum resistance, giving a uniform change with each turn of the knob. At "full on" position practically "zero" resistance is obtained. It is compact in size, "requiring less space than any other," and carries an unqualified guarantee by the makers.

The Electrad Corporation of America are producing a lead-in designed to take the place of a porcelain tube, making unnecessary the drilling of a hole in the window frame. It consists of a flat nickel-plated strip of metal 18 in. long by one-half inch wide, with binding posts at either end. A moisture-proof, fire-proof material covers the strip to within three inches of the binding posts insulting it from the window when closed down tightly upon it. The exceedingly low price will make it popular.

The "tri-coil" is a radio frequency transformer with a compensating coil designed to make possible high amplification over a broad band of wave lengths. This is accomplished by shifting the phase of any energy passing from the plate to the grid circuit of the amplifier, thus tending to eliminate the regenerative howling so common in radio frequency transformers. It tends to neutralize the effects of changes in load or capacity in the primary part of the circuit on the secondary part of the circuit. Those technically inclined will appreciate the value of this new product of the Brooklyn metal stamping company.

Cabinets for radio fans who construct their own sets are to be had in sizes for panels varying from 7 inches by 14 inches to 8½ inches by 25¾ inches. They are well made, have rounded corners and are beautifully finished.

The "Rainbow Multi-Plug" and eight-foot cable will supply a long-felt want for a means of doing away with unsightly battery wires. It consists of a 6½-foot braided cable terminating in a plug with eight contact pins. The plug makes contact with another similar plug which is supplied with 18 inches of wire for attaching to the different binding-posts of a receiver. The numerous advantages in using this contrivance are obvious. It makes possible the placing of batteries out of sight, provides a means to quickly connect and disconnect receiver from batteries, assures proper sized battery leads being used, (as the conductors are of the proper capacity) and when not in use the entire set may be readily disconnected and placed under lock and key. Assures positive connection and safeguards against burning out filaments as the plug and socket are so constructed that connection cannot be made except in the proper position.

FLORENCE MACBETH TO SING FROM BROADCASTING STATION

Rare Sunday Night Treat Will Be Featured on WJAZ Program.

One of the season's most notable treats will be offered tonight by Station WJAZ, Chicago, beginning at 9 p. m., when Florence Macbeth, coloratura soprano of the Chicago Opera Company, will sing at that station.

Miss Macbeth has been widely acclaimed as the greatest soprano America has ever produced. She made her debut at Queen's Hall, London, in 1913. Her success was instantaneous and the following season she was engaged by the Chicago Opera Company. Her performances with this organization have made her fame secure.

The numbers which will be sung by Miss Macbeth are Caro Nome (Dear Name), from "Rigoletto"; Kum Ba, Thrush; Last Rose of Summer, and Je suis Titania, from "Mignon."

NEW LOUD SPEAKER WORKS BY FRICTION

Varying Pressure Between Discs of Glass and Cork Said to Give Fine Results.

A new type of loud speaker sound amplifier which depends upon varying friction between two revolving discs to greatly increase incoming sound waves has recently been exhibited to scientists in Liverpool. It is the invention of S. G. Brown, a noted British telephone expert, and it is called the Frenephone.

Its chief feature, as described in a recent issue of Nature, is the amplification of weak signals to great loudness without loss of purity in the rendering. It is thus of especial value in wireless telephony, such as broadcasting, where singing and orchestral music must be faithfully reproduced without distortion.

This novel "loud speaker" depends for its operation upon the high degree of friction existing between a moving surface of optical glass and a pad of cork or similar substance. The coefficient of friction, especially when the glass surface has been lightly treated with a tacky compound, is so high that very slight changes in a constantly applied pressure between the pad and glass produce enormous fluctuations in the tangential drag between them.

In practice, the glass surface is made in the form of a disk revolved slowly by a phonograph motor. The pad consists of a small steel disk faced with thin cork. The pad is laid upon the glass, its back being pressed upon by a light, flexible pin which, in turn, is fastened to the reed of a telephone headpiece receiver. The pad is linked by "reins" to the diaphragm, which is of the usual loud-speaker type, and is fixed at the base of a trumpet.

NEW LOUD SPEAKER WORKS BY FRICTION

Varying Pressure Between Discs of Glass and Cork Said to Give Fine Results.

A new type of loud speaker sound amplifier which depends upon varying friction between two revolving discs to greatly increase incoming sound waves has recently been exhibited to scientists in Liverpool. It is the invention of S. G. Brown, a noted British telephone expert, and it is called the Frenephone.

Its chief feature, as described in a recent issue of Nature, is the amplification of weak signals to great loudness without loss of purity in the rendering. It is thus of especial value in wireless telephony, such as broadcasting, where singing and orchestral music must be faithfully reproduced without distortion.

This novel "loud speaker" depends for its operation upon the high degree of friction existing between a moving surface of optical glass and a pad of cork or similar substance. The coefficient of friction, especially when the glass surface has been lightly treated with a tacky compound, is so high that very slight changes in a constantly applied pressure between the pad and glass produce enormous fluctuations in the tangential drag between them.

In practice, the glass surface is made in the form of a disk revolved slowly by a phonograph motor. The pad consists of a small steel disk faced with thin cork. The pad is laid upon the glass, its back being pressed upon by a light, flexible pin which, in turn, is fastened to the reed of a telephone headpiece receiver. The pad is linked by "reins" to the diaphragm, which is of the usual loud-speaker type, and is fixed at the base of a trumpet.

Speech currents in the receiver coils actuate the reed, setting it in vibration. These vibrations, imparted to the pad, appear as oscillatory changes of the steady pressure of the pad on the glass disk. Corresponding large changes of the pull of the pad, by its reins, upon the diaphragm result in great amplification of the speech emitted from the trumpet. The great merit of the instrument, as compared with other forms of loud speaker, is the combination of loudness with purity; the sounds of the various musical instruments are individualized with absolute fidelity to the original.

Wire for Coils.

Double silk covered wire is preferable for winding spider web and bank wound coils, as it affords very satisfactory insulation, and also a saving in space. Double cotton covered wire is satisfactory, but it requires slightly more space.

ELECTRIC SHOW IN MELBOURNE

Radio will be featured at the electrical exposition in the Australian capital next September.

The electrical exhibition, under the auspices of the Victoria Electrical Federation will be held in Melbourne. It is planned to cover every phase of the electrical industry, showing actual working models of the various types of apparatus from toys to machinery. Both wireless telegraphy and telephony will have prominent places in the exhibition.

NEW REGULATIONS SOON TO BE ENACTED

White to Introduce a Simplified Bill During This Session of Congress.

Radio, which for the first time carried to the Continent at large and perhaps Europe and Central America, the President's message, also carried his recommendations for remedial legislation on radio. Echoing Secretary Hoovers request that the laws affecting radio administration enacted in 1912 be revised, the President personally told Congress that new legislation regulating radio interference is needed. At present, Secretary Hoover is operating under a sort of "gentlemens agreement between commercial, governmental, private and amateur interests, reached last spring during the second national radio conference.

Secretary Hoover stated recently that Representtive White, who fathered the bill which bore his name last session, will introduce a simplified radio bill this session. The old bill, it is understood, has been reduced to first terms so as to permit of proper interpretation with the development of the art and to give the Secretary of Commerce and his advisory committee liberal and more or less elastic authority over the control of national radio problems. A recent conference between representatives of the Government departments was successful in eliminating such points of disagreement as existed heretofore, and the resultant bill will be introduced in the House before the end of this month.

According to Secretary Hoover, the radio interference situation today is far better than it was at the time the original White bill passed the House last year, due chiefly to the elimination of interference through the voluntary co-operation of the several interests. There is now little interference between the existing broadcasting stations, which are decreasing in numbers.

In general, the President also indorsed the enactment into law of the approved plan of the Joint Committee on the reorganization of the Government Departments, which places radio under the direction of an Assistant Secretary of Communications, who would have charge of telephone and telegraphs. The postoffice and the radio section of the Bureau of Navigation of the Department of Commerce, would become a part of the Department of Communications, according to the present plan of the Joint Committee.

Before the reorganization is effected, however, all phases of the radio question will probably have been threshed out, and its administration may or may not be taken away from the Department of Commerce. The proposed bill, it is understood, carries no suggestion of a transfer of radio to the new Communication Department.

There are so many radio bodies now listed as governmental agencies that it seems necessary to point out for those concerned which of Uncle Sam's offices controls the administration of radio.

All matters pertaining to the enforcement of the laws regulating commercial, radio transmission on land and sea, including broadcasting, and private transmission, including amateur operation, is under the supervision of the Bureau of Navigation of the Department of Commerce.

The Bureau of Navigation has no jurisdiction over radio projects operated by other governmental departments, such as the Naval Communication Service, the Army Signal Corps, or the Coast Guard and Postoffice Radio Service.

Matters affecting commercial or private transmission by radio may be referred to the nine District Supervisors or the Commissioner of Navigation, Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Worth Remembering.

Taking off the lead-in from the middle of an aerial results in only half the aerial being used. The rest of the wire is simply holding up the aerial and offering any other assistance.

The Height of the Aerial.

A very high aerial will pick up more radio frequency energy than a low one, but besides being able to pick up fainter signals, will also collect more static, which may seriously interfere with receptions. It is the effective height of an antenna that counts; not always the height above the ground, but 10 feet above a grounded tin roof would have an effective height of 10 feet, not 50 feet.

To obtain the longest life from them, "B" batteries should be kept flat on their backs at all times.

A. R. R. L. ANNUAL TRANS-OCEANIC TESTS BEGIN

American Amateurs to Listen Nightly for European Transmitters.

The American Radio Relay League, in co-operation with the leading amateur societies of England, France and Holland, will conduct the fourth amateur Trans-Atlantic Tests from Dec. 22, 1923 to Jan. 10, 1924.

No schedules of transmission have been arranged by either American or Canadian amateurs, but the A. R. R. L. is appealing to all amateurs to observe a quiet period each night bteween 8 p. m. night during the two weeks.

European amateurs will transmit very slowly on wavelengths between 180 and 220 meters every night during the two weeks.

The prizes, totalling over $3500 in radio apparatus, being offered for the best reception records, are not confined to amateurs and it is believed that many broadcast listeners who have taken some interest in copying code messages will be able to hear European amateur signals.

Reports of transoceanic reception must be at A. R. R. L. headquarters Hartford, Conn., not later than Jan. 25, 1924.

ADDITIONS TO STANDARD FREQUENCY STATION LIST

Six Broadcasters Eexactly on Assigned Frequency, According to Department of Commerce.

Besides broadcasting stations WGY and KDKA, announced some time ago as standard frequency stations, four new ones have been designated by the Department of Commerce as reliable stations for calibrating radio sets and apparatus.

These stations have been tested as to accuracy of assigned frequencies transmitted, and found to be sufficiency constant to serve as standards for the calibrating of receiving apparatus and wave meters.

STEADIER MARKET AFTER REACTIONS ON N. Y. EXCHANGE

Factors in Decline Said to Include Apprehension Over Some Washington News and Selling to Record Losses.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Reactions in the market which were in part natural consequences of previous advances have been followed by a distinct steadying and a settling down into preholiday quietness. Other factors in the declines were apprehensions caused by the difficulties in organizing the new Congress, the attempt to give precedence to consideration of a bonus and the deadlock over the selection of a chairman of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. Selling to record losses for income tax purposes also has been an influence, the temptation to do so being particularly strong because of Secretary Mellon's proposed limitation of the proportion of such losses which may be written off. It has been apparent, however, that the markets have not been particularly vulnerable. The speculative position seems moderate, money continues plentiful, and the business outlook, while not clearly defined, is encouraging.

Ease in Money.

"The failure of the Congressional attempt to sidetrack the tax reduction programme and to substitute the bonus should provide a wholesome tonic for those who became unduly alarmed over the first few days of the Sixty-eighth Congress. Meanwhile the conviction grows that this will be a talking rather than an acting Congress. The radicals have unlimited power to talk and to propose legislation; they also have a certain ability to block legislation. They have very little power, however, actually to pass their own measures, and in the improbable event of an unsound bill going through, the presidential veto would remain. In addition and with reference to any radical railroad legislation, it must be remembered that the regulation of rates remains with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that the Constitution and the courts stand between the carriers and confiscatory rates.

"Continued ease in money despite holiday demands and the approach of year-end is one of the outstanding features of the situation. Call money lends for about 4¾ per cent and the rate on commercial paper is lower than at any time since late in the previous winter. Rediscounts at the Reserve Banks have been falling off in a remarkable fashion. The manner in which the large volume of current business is being financed is, in fact, a source of wonder to many. The explanation of the situation lies in a number of factors. Industrial activity has, of course, been slackening slightly since last spring. This has diminished the demands for credit from this source and has, as unfilled orders have fallen, liquefied a good deal of the credit which was employed earlier in the year. In addition, a good many companies which were still in debt to the banks on account of loans made in the previous year to carry impaired positions have made profits sufficient to pay off their obligations. Lower prices also have prevailed and heavy gold imports meanwhile have added an amount of fresh money which, when combined with the volume of released funds, amply explains the current ease.

French Exchange Situation.

"A peculiar decline in French francs has been the feature of the foreign exchange market. The reaction, which carried the franc down to a new low for all time of about 5.02 cents, was not accompanied by any important volume of selling. It seemed, rather, to be due to a sudden contraction of demand. Additional evidence is needed to form a definite conclusion; but it appears that the discussion of the French Government's obligation to the Bank of France and of the French budget position, is chiefly responsible for the disinclination to purchase the currency. It will be recalled that after the war the Government undertook to reduce its borrowings at the bank by two billion francs a year. A year ago the [illegible] for the current year [illegible] reduced to one billion as emergency measure. The Finance Minister lately has expressed a desire to reduce the repayment further or to suspend it entirely. Just what will be done in the matter is not entirely clear, but the discussion has served to call attention afresh to the difficult budget problem which confronts the republic and to the probability that additional domestic loans will be floated. Meanwhile, it is reasonably clear that progress is steadily being made towards a reparations settlement.

"The market for commodities, securities and the foreign exchanges were all dull this morning, the approaching holiday tending to restrict business to a minimum. In the stock market, quotations for the leading issues showed little change although there was considerable irregularity among some of the specialties, with one or two sharp declines in which stop loss orders were said to have figured. Bonds were quiet and generally steady, even the French Government issues holding well in the face of another break in exchange quotations.

"The foreign exchange market was no more than a nominal affair, the only point of interest being the action of French francs, which in early transactions were again quoted at a new low of 5.02 cents. Later in the day they rallied to 5.05 cents but no more definite explanation of the rally appeared to be available among leaders than has been advanced for the recent drop in quotations. The early break here followed a decline in the London market.

"Trading in the cotton market was decidedly quiet and although covering of shorts in Liverpool had produced some advances in that market, the gains registered here were moderate. December cotton at a late price of 36.15 was up 5 points and May at 35.33 showed a similar advance.

"There was even less interest in the grain markets. Some further liquidation of December wheat brought that contract fractionally below yesterday's closing at $1.01⅝. December corn failed to gain from the low of 70 cents reached yesterday.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House shows a decrease of $2,547,880 in surplus reserve, the total standing at $14,618,660. Loans and discounts increased $9,257,000 and demand deposits fell off $43,137,000. Circulation decreased moderately.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"The approach of the end of the year was marked by a declining tendency in the foreign exchange market generally all through the past week, buying being restricted to small volume, while in some documents there was pressure at various intervals that could only be placed at lower levels. French exchange naturally demanded most attention because of its fall to the new low record of 5.02, a movement that indicated an adjustment of the market level to conditions which are generally understood to prevail in France as the result of large military expenses and various phases in the political situation. It was suggested in connection with this collapse in the market for French exchange that its position was weakened by the absence of prospects for obtaining payments on reparation account of a long time into the future.

"Sterling exchange started with a firm tone and made a fractional advance at the beginning of the week, but steadily declined from that time, showing a loss of over 4 cents from the high level of Monday and declining to below $4.34. Many other European exchanges followed sterling on its downward movement, but movements in those exchanges were slow and a firmer tone developed after recessions.

"There was a special movement in exchange on Holland, which was in large supply around the middle of the week, a decline which then occurred being attributed by exchange dealers to sales of guilders by Germany in order to buy dollars in this market. As Amsterdam has recently been a moderate buyer of our securities, it is probable that guilders were also sold on this account. A feature of the trading was a fall in Polish marks to the new low record of 15 cents to the million. Greek exchange was not influenced by the establishment of the new Government, but there was little actual trading in drachmas, the quotations quoted being purely nominal.

"Silver exchanges showed strength in the first half of the week, but reacted in the last few days. Japan continued heavy at around its low record of the year, while exchange on India was strong and made a substantial advance. South American exchanges were generally steady."

COTTON ENDS LOWER IN QUIET SESSION

Market Is Rather Quiet and Largely of a Pre-Holiday Character.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The cotton market was very quiet today and the little business reported seemed to be chiefly of a pre-holiday character. Fluctuations were correspondingly narrow, with January selling off from 34.97c to 34.72c and closing at 34.77c. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 3 to 9 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 6 to 11 points and sold about 10 to 15 points net higher during the early trading on very bullish spot advices and firm Liverpool cables. December touched 36.25c at the opening and March sold up to 35.36c on the early advance, but these figures evidently attracted realizing or scattering liquidation and prices sagged off to 35.96c for December and 35.09c for March later in the morning. There was no change in the news which was connected with this decline, but the bullish features emphasized on the early advance failed to create much buying power and the market yielded to small orders in the later trading. Private cables reported a healthy tone in Liverpool owing to a moderate trade demand and small offerings.

Reports of a steady or firm spot situation continued to reach here from the South, and December contracts here maintained a premium of about 125 points over January compared with 128 points at the close of Friday. There was talk of probable large notices on January contracts next week, but there was also gossip to the effect thta two or three of the larger shippers were preparing to take up cotton next month, presumably for export.

Reports from the cotton goods trade showed little or no change in the situation and a continued small volume of business as usual during the holiday season.

The amount of cotton on ship board awaiting clearance at the end of the week was 124,000 bales, compared with 150,000 at this time last year. Cable advices received in the trade here today stated that the Indian crop was estimated at 4,813,000 bales of 400 pounds gross.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Spot, quiet; middling, 36.30.

$15,000,000 Illinois Bonus Bonds Sold.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 22.—Six minutes were required to sell $15,000,000 in Illinois bonus bonds this morning in the office of Gov. Small. The bonds were sold to the Continental Commercial group at par $3 for $15,124,500, principal and accrued interest.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 22.—Six million dollars' worth of State Highway bonds were sold to the Federal Securities Co. of Chicago at $94.46 here this morning. Only three bids were made for the bonds, the next to highest being $94.45. At this figure the bonds will yield approximately 4½ per cent.

Decline in Egg Prices.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—An outstanding feature of pre-Christmas week in the produce market has been the severe decline in the price of fresh eggs which are from six to eight cents lower than a week ago and 14c under the price of two weeks ago. Eggs, firsts, sold yesterday at 35 to 36 cents. Storage eggs also are down six to eight cents a dozen, selling yesterday at 24 cents.

Eggs, designated as firsts, sold in the Chicago market today at a range of 36c to 37c, compared with 46c to 48c on Dec. 3.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The market for coffee futures was very quiet today and after opening at a decline of 4 to 7 points ruled within a point or two of the initial quotations. The close was 3 to 8 points net lower. Sales were estimated at about 5000 bags. December, 10.36c; March, 9.54c; May, 8.90c; July, 8.66c; September, 8.45c; October, 8.45c; December, 1924, 8.30c.

Spot coffee was nominally unchanged at 10⅞c to 10¾c for Rio 7s and at 14¾c to 15¼c for Santos 4s.

TWO COTTON REPORTS EACH MONTH IN SEASON FAVORED

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—After a two-day conference on the scope and methods of collection and distributing reports relating to the cotton crop, a committee representing planters, exchanges and other interests recommended to the Department of Agriculture today that two reports be issued each month from July to November, instead of one, as at present.

The committee also recommended that there be appointed three regional or supervisory statisticians, one each for the southeastern states, south central states and southwestern states, who should be made members of the crop reporting board.

The committee recommended continuance of the issuance of reports before the close of the cotton exchanges as at present, but that the reports be issued later in the day, to give adequate time for consideration by the crop reporting board.

The department's plans for reports on intentions to plant were favorably recommended, with the suggestion that the report be made not later than about March 15.

Establishment of a more frequent and complete price reporting service on cottonseed was recommended.

HOGS SELL LOWER ON HEAVY RECEIPTS

CAMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	18,525	30,749	24,590
Hogs	115,734	96,137	91,355
Sheep	7,887	9,971	6,168
Horses and mules	1,159	1,688	1,468
Totals	143,305	138,545	123,581

Under pressure of heavy receipts, the hog market ruled off sharply at the St. Louis National Stockyards the past week. Fat lambs also closed lower, sheep finished steady and cattle registered an irregular close. Receipts and demand were both light in the cattle department and trading in most departments was on a slow, indifferent basis during a larger part of the period. Demand was materially curtailed, a usual condition at this time of the year when poultry and game offers serious competition to the beef trade. The close found beef steers about steady with the sharp decline the previous week. Quality was mostly plain and sales were largely from $7 to $9 per cwt. Common steers registered in the $6 column or under, while some attractive droves, on the other hand, scored $9.90 and $10. Butcher yearlings, quality of which was generally plain, were particularly hard to move and values closed steady to 25c lower. While some of the better kinds made $9 to $9.50, a spread of $3 to $6.50, caught the rank and file of the supply which comprised plain grassers. Canner offerings sold from $2 to $3. Butcher cows ruled steady to strong, most cashing at $3.50 to $5.50, low end $3.25 and top $7. Canners and cutters moved up 25c or 50c, cutters varying from $2.50 to $3 and canners from $2 to $2.50. Beef bulls at $4.25 to $4.75 were not materially changed, although bolognas at $3.50 to $4.25 ended 25c higher. Canner bulls were valued at $2.50 to $3. Stocker and feeder steers reflected no material price change out of first hands, although dealers, because of a slow country demand due to muddy feed lots, granted price concessions in many cases in order to move supplies. At that, however, clearance is not so good. Most of the steers cashed at $4 to $6, low end $3 and tops $7. Stock cows, heifers and bulls about steady. Veal calves at $8.75 closed 25c to 75c lower for week. Southern canner yearlings late were valued at $2.15 to $2.25.

Hog Supplies Heavy.

Swine offerings for the past week were heavy, the total supply for the six-day period being 115,734 head. This is an increase of 19,597 over the previous week's supply of of 96,137 head and an increase of 24,399 over the run of 91,355 for the corresponding period a year ago. Quality of the hogs received has been good, a large percentage arriving from Iowa and Northern territory. The week started out with promises of another record weekly supply, but light runs the latter part of the week, due largely to declining prices dispelled this idea. Compared with a week ago, hog prices are approximately 30c to 50c lower, lighter grades bearing the brunt of the decline. Butcher hogs averaging from 190 to 230 pounds show a loss of 30c to 35c from last Saturday's quotations on this class, offerings today selling from $6.90 to $7 largely. For the lighter kinds buyers paid from $6.75 to $6.90 largely, 160 to 180 pound averages selling in this spread. These prices are 40c to 50c lower than a week ago. The pig market too has suffered, most of the declines on this class forced during the latter part of the week. Strong weight offerings averaging from 130 to 150 pounds at $6 to $6.35 are from 65c to 75c lower, the medium weight kinds averaging from 110 to 130 pounds, showing a loss of 75c, offerings changing hands at $5.50 to $6 mostly. Light pigs and pee wees averaging from 110 pounds and down are 75c to $1 lower than a week ago with sales ranging from $5 to $5.50, according to the weight and quality of the offerings. Sows are 25c lower with sales at $6 mainly. Stags show a loss of 25c to 50c at $4.75 to $5.25. The week's close finds the different classes of swine selling in the following spread. Strong weights, 190 to 230 pounds, $6.90 to $7.10; lighter hogs, 160 to 180 pounds, $6.75 to $6.90; strong weight pigs from 130 to 150 pounds, $6 to $6.35; medium weight kinds, 110 to 130 pounds, $5.50 to $6, and light pigs and pee wees at $5 to $5.50. Sows at $6 mainly and stags at $4.75 to $5.25.

Lamb Top $12.75

Sheep and lamb offerings today were too light to create a market, prices remaining on a nominally steady basis with Friday. Receipts for the week were modest. Top on lambs for the current week was $12.75, some Colorado lambs establishing this top late in the week. Prices compared with the previous week's close are lower, sales indicating a decline of 25c on the best lambs. Good to choice offerings are quotable at $12.25 to $12.75, medium to good kinds at $11.75 to $12.25, and the plain to medium grades at $11.25 to $11.75. Culls show practically no change at $8 to $9, largely according to the weight and quality of the offerings. Unchanged values rule for sheep, this class under a light supply and a fair demand selling in identically the same range as the previous week. Good to choice offerings of killing ewes are quotable at $5.50 to $6.50, with the medium to good grades selling from $4.50 to $5.50 and the plain to medium kinds clearing at $3.50 to $4.50. Chopper and buck sheep are quotable at $3.50 to $3.50, canners selling at $1 to $2, according to quality.

Horses and Mules.

The week preceding Christmas is always a light one for the horse and mule business. Arrivals for the six-day period comprised 1159 head, about one-half of which were on commission. With receipts and demand both small, the average trade was about steady for the period and a good clearance was made. Southern horses as well as big work stock found outlet. Local dealers were poor contenders in the mule department, already having ample supplies on hand. The outlet was thus confined largely to auctions.

SEE FAIRLY GOOD CLOSE TO LONDON BANKING YEAR

Steadiness of Sterling Said to Be Partly Due to Heavy Shipments of Gold to United States.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of London Morning Post, in review today, says:

"Home politics are dampening the stock exchange Christmas. The first period after the reassembling of Parliament probably will be mainly occupied with manoeuvering for positions. In the meantime, however, the markets necessarily are unsettled and, expressed bluntly, the danger is lest apprehensions in advance of actual events should occasion a small flight of capital, which might even develop seriously. It is more likely, however, that sober common sense will prevail.

The Reparations Problem.

"Apart from a very few instances, the position at present is limited to inquiries by individuals of their bankers concerning the course which should be pursued. This country contains great numbers of its population who are living on private fixed incomes from investments. War taxation and the rise in commodity prices already have severely strained those resources, and the threat of any serious further strain might even occasion actual migrations. I am not suggesting that these apprehensions are justified, or even that they are widespread; but I should not be giving a faithful report of the situation if I failed to record them.

"It is conceivable that the general atmosphere will be improved shortly by better developments in the reparation crisis, the appointments of the British representatives to the reparations committee being satisfactory, while it is believed that France will be inclined to give greater co-operation.

"But while a real improvement in the continental situation undoubtedly would be helpful generally, especially in trade, securities might be affected by the possibilities in the way of dearer money.

"It is feared also that no great improvement in the exchanges is possible until international debt questions have been arranged, and it is difficult to see how Britain ever can return to a free gold market until gold supplies and the trade balance are more evenly distributed.

"Unless there is a slump in securities during the next 10 days, the banking year is likely to close fairly well, profits have been maintained, bad debts are smaller and balance sheets reveal liquid positions.

Sterling Is Steady.

"Settlement of the Ruhr crisis probably will occasion a temporary improvement in continental currencys including the franc, which temporarily is adversely affected by reports that the Bank of France will make a request for repayment of some portion of the state indebtedness. No great improvement is likely in the franc, however, until the French budget is nearer an equilibrium. The steadiness of sterling in view of our political situation occasions some surprise, but is partly due to our heavy shipments of gold to you. Seasonal requirements suggest the maintenance of moderate steadiness in sterling, but much depends on our political developments. The sound common sense of the nation, and the strength of combined liberal and conservative elements, if it becomes necessary to suppress the labor extremists, suggests that present alarms are slightly overdone."

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Today's two-hour session was of much the same character as the day before. Railway shares were neglected, the more representative industrials scarcely varied at all, and attention was absorbed in comparatively few special movements, most of them upward.

Motor shares came into prominence in the final trading, Willys-Overland preferred jumping forward sharply and Studebaker advancing a point or more on large transactions. Continental Can was the leading specialty at the end. The close was steady for the general market and strong for the favorites of the day.

The Bond Market.

French bonds were heavy again in today's market accompanying the new record low in franc exchange. Up to late Friday the decline in the exchanges had failed to show in the market for the bonds. The selling today was on a small scale and losses were not large.

Evidently no considerable number of the holders of French dollar securities regard the fall in the franc as of any more than sentimental importance. Generally the French cities 6s move over a wider range than other French bonds. That has been the case this week. They lost between one and two points today.

Department of the Seine 7s also respond readily to changes in sentiment regarding the situation abroad, and on the week these bonds had the largest decline. Outside the French issues the only notable feature in the foreign group was a stronger tone in Czecho-Slovak 8s.

St. Paul bonds were the most active among the speculative rails today as has been the case for most of the week. Today's prices were little changed over yesterday's. The recovery which followed the extreme low of Wednesday and Thursday was fairly well sustained and the explanation largely accepted for the sharp drop in the quotations for all the St. Paul junior liens was selling to record tax losses. Erie bonds were higher again today, the convertible D 4s touching 60 on large transactions. All of this road's obligations are higher on the week and even when other rails were unsteady the Eries have held firm.

Changes were small in the high-grade investment list. On the week Liberties are slightly lower while the rails and industrials are irregular.

The week's new issues totaled $63,051,000 of which public utilities contributed the largest amount.

PRICES ARE MIXED ON GRAIN MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Dec. 22.—Wheat closed slightly lower and corn mixed but generally higher on the local market.

In the local cash grain market Saturday shippers were moderate buyers and local mills also took a few cars, but the market on whole was slow and red winter wheat was 1c lower. There was fair clearance, however, finally, at the decline. There was narrow accumulative demand for hard wheat and prices were 1c lower. Offerings were light. Offerings of corn were moderate and nearly all was cleaned up, white being steady and other kinds ½c to 1c lower. The demand was good on the decline. About half of offerings was taken by local elevators. Shippers and industries took the rest. Oats ruled steady to ¾c lower, the widest decline being shown by No. 4 white. Offerings were cleaned up on outside orders and buying by accumulators.

Wheat sold fractionally lower in the trade after opening, but corn steadied and on more distant deliveries was unchanged to higher. The weather probably exerted influence on corn prices. Liverpool wheat closed ¼d up on more distant delivery months.

May wheat opened at $1.07⅛, July wheat $1.03¾, December corn 73⅛c, May corn 73¼c and July corn 74¼c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 1586 cars of wheat, compared with 1918 a week ago and 1305 last year, Minneapolis receiving 324 cars, Duluth 95 and Winnipeg 1167.

Local wheat receipts, which were 65,000 bushels, compared with 57,200 a week ago and 146,400 last year, included 42 cars local and 8 through. Corn receipts, which were 191,800 bushels, compared with 84,000 a week ago and 127,400 last year, included 118 cars local and 19 through. Oats receipts, which were 74,000 bushels, compared with 160,000 a week ago and 106,000 last year, included 25 cars local and 12 through. Hay receipts were 28 cars local and 2 through.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators were 1,671,274 bushels of wheat, 255,498 bushels of corn, 633,253 bushels of oats. Grain stocks comprised 212,003 bushels of No. 1 red winter wheat, 750,034 bushels of No. 2 red winter wheat, 136,635 bushels of No. 1 hard winter wheat, 249,091 bushels of No. 2 hard winter wheat, 36,789 bushels of No. 2 corn, 23,303 bushels of No. 2 yellow corn, 4443 bushels of No. 2 white corn, 5606 bushels of No. 2 oats, 1,780,993 bushels of No. 3 white oats, 313,024 bushels of No. 3 white oats, 13,609 bushels of No. 2 rye.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago, and lighter than a year ago, being 1,571,000 bushels. Corn receipts were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 1,358,000 bushels. Oats receipts were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 779,000 bushels.

Primary shipments of wheat were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 482,000 bushels. Corn shipments were lighter than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 694,000 bushels. Oats shipments were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 698,000 bushels.

WHEAT AT NEW LOW FOR MOVEMENT BEFORE REACTION

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Wheat today dropped to new low on the movement early, but had a fair recovery late on short covering. December lagged, however, at one time sold within 2c of the season's low point. Liquidation was renewed in the early trade and there were further hedging sales from the Northwest evident. The firmness at Liverpool was offset by the weakness in exchange. The seaboard told of a slow export call. The primary movement was light and advices said that the Northwestern movement was likely to show a steady decrease from now on. Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜c lower. December sold at $1.00¾ to $1.02, May $1.05⅞ to $1.06¾, and July $1.04⅜@1.04½ to $1.05¼@1.05¼.

Corn was heavy most of the session and showed little rallying faculty. The December was relatively weak. Liquidation was on in this grain. Cash corn was in fair demand at lower levels. Receipts were not large, but proved ample for the inquiry. Corn closed ¼c to ½c lower. December sold from 69¾c to 70⅜c, May from 72⅝@73⅜c and July 73⅞c to 74⅝c.

Oats were fairly steady most of the session and closed irregularly. Cash interests bought December and sold May at 3½ difference and commission houses bought. May oats closed ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower. December sold from 41c to 41¼@41¼c, May from 44½c to 44¾c and July from 42⅛c to 42¼c.

Provisions closed irregularly. Cash interest bought late in the session and caused a recovery. Lard closed 2½c higher to 5c lower and ribs unchanged to 2½c higher.

GOLDEN AGE OF HAPPINESS IS AT HAND, SAYS HEAD OF SUFIC ORDER OF WORLD

Inzyat Khan Pir-O-Murshid, of India, Says Western Civilization Soon Will End Inequalities.

By Ernest Brennecke,
Of the New York World Staff.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.

THE golden age of happiness is at hand. The world is soon to forget its strife and is about to enter into a new period of prosperity and tolerance. Individuals, families and nations are going to break down the barriers of selfishness, greed and hate that now separate them from one another. All peoples will mingle together in one human brotherhood. There will be no more slavery, no castes, no bitterness between master and servant or between labor and capital, no sex inequality, no war, no bloodshed, all mankind will form one nation and practice one religion.

This is the confident prophecy that was delivered to me recently in a beautiful shaded garden at Suresnes, a suburb of Paris, where I just sat and conversed with Inzat Khan Pir-O-Murshid, head of the Sufic order of the world.

He had just finished his afternoon discourse to his disciples—a score or so of men and women—who were wandering about under the trees and drinking tea. He leaned back in his chair, a large, powerfully built man in a flowing black Oriental robe. The only ornament he wore was the gleaming winged Sufi emblem hanging on his breast. Kindly, meditative dark eyes shone out from a swarthy countenance crowned with long grayish hair, as he spoke to me in a slow, mellow voice, choosing his words with great care.

World Awakening to Message.

This was the modest almost shy personality from the mysterious interior of India whose ever increasing band of followers is beginning to spread his gentle gospel designed to bring joy and peace into a civilization torn by war and distress. And the world seems gradually to be awakening to the importance of his message, the need for combining the calm, ancient wisdom of the Hindu with the thoughtless driving energy of the Western world. This faith the Pir-O-Murshid first brought from the East in 1910, spreading it through discourses to his pupils, through lectures and through a series of beautiful little volumes of verse and prose which, according to some competent critics, may be rated far higher than the similar work of the far more "popular" Sir Rabindranath Tagore.

Inzyat Khan was in New York a few months ago. He told me at that time that he considered the United States as the best field in the world for the sowing of his gospel. His visit, however, unheralded as it was, created no startling "sensation" at the time. A few people had their curiosity aroused, perhaps, by the sight of a Hindu priest walking along upper Riverside drive on a fine morning, and a few earnest audiences listened with care to his address on "the solution to the problems of the day," but now that he has returned to France, these latter are beginning to realize more and more keenly the large significance of his gently propounded proposals, and to discuss the new prophet from Baroda and Suresnes with increasing eagerness.

"And in England you have found restlessness and poverty." (He was commenting on my impressions of a summer of travel.) "And in Germany starvation both spiritual and physical. And in France, hatred and discontent. Yes, the world may well, indeed, seem hopeless to you." An undertone of infinite pity made itself felt through his soft accents. "We are in a woeful state. The nations are flying at each others' throats, and will not be reconciled. One religion fights another, as if each had a different God. In business there is savage, merciless rivalry, and every individual is out to get the better of his neighbor. Your civilization is quite, quite helpless."

"Pity" of Our Civilization.

"That is a bold statement," I remarked. "Do you see nothing good in our Western culture? Think of our scientific progress, for instance."

He nodded and folded his arms, then replied: "Quite so. I do admire your tremendous advance in the mere mechanics of living; your buildings, steamships, railroads, airplanes, telephones, and all manner of comforts and conveniences. With all these things at your command, you practical people should be living in a true earthly paradise in infinite happiness.

"But you are not! Your advances are the advances of a blind man, and do not bring you any nearer to the light of happiness.

"What has your 'progress' brought you? I look into your world. What do I see? I see war, and always preparations for new and more frightful wars, and famine and pestilence, poverty and misery and discontent all around. Your inventions, which might have been wonderful blessings, have really been curses. It is a pity."

"But how can it be helped? What do you propose to do about it," I insisted. "You can't tell people to shut themselves up and live a life of Hindu meditation. We are too active for that. We must get out and be doing and accomplishing things—and then there are clashes and friction with other people—one group interferes with another and hate and war follow. How can you remedy that?"

"I do not believe in isolated meditation," he explained, patiently. "I believe in work and improvement. That is why I came out of India, instead of spending the rest of my life in a Thibetan monastery. I saw that you had such wonderful things, and were not happy, that your world was a hopeless world—while our wise men had the secret of happiness and were keeping it to themselves. You have all the instruments, the amazing methods of communication; we, not having them, have had to keep our secrets of right living to ourselves. Therefore, I am quietly urging America and Europe, war-torn, impatient and miserable, to take the best that the wisdom of the East has to offer. Combine your practical progress and movement with our idealism, sympathy and calm, and the world will again become a good place to live in."

The Eastern Attitude.

I urged him to tell me just what this Eastern attitude implied, and just how it could bring our distresses to an end.

"Let us see where the root of all our trouble lies," he said. "As individuals, in the first place, you are striving for practical, not for spiritual goals, for what you term 'success in life.' Others strive for the same material things. You hate these others, and do your best to defeat them. When all are greedy, there is never enough in the world to satisfy all. The more there is, indeed, the more bitter becomes the struggle.

"Next, you have observed that small groups working together for material ends are more powerful than individuals. And so you have them contending against one another, one business organization fighting another. The group has no mercy for the weak in this contest. Your nations, likewise, are sick with jealousy and fly at

Dominion Land of Promise to Homeseeker

"Where We Are Apt to Niggle in Thousands, Over There They Plan in Millions," Former British Premier Writes in Giving Impressions of His Visit to America; "Canadian Cities Full of Gigantic Schemes for Development."

He Found That American Farmers Felt Chances of Competing in Neutral Markets With Canadian Grain Exporters Diminishing; Canada Missing Opportunity in Not Drawing Heavily on Homeland for a Greater Population.

BY DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
Former British Prime Minister.

LONDON, Dec. 22.

I HAVE been asked to give some of the impressions formed during my short stay on the American continent. I hesitate to do so for the very best of all reasons. I did not stay long enough in any state or city to make even a superficial study of the country or the people.

I have one dominant recollection, and that is of the boundless hospitality and real kindness shown my wife and daughter as well as myself. From that point of view, the journey will be to me one of those memories that sweeten life. But when you come to observations on the country itself, its citizens or its institutions, I was not there long enough to acquire the material. When you dash through a continent on an express train and view its land through the railway windows and its people either in masses on the streets along which you pass or in assembly rooms from public platforms, you can only form cinematic impressions at the best. Still, I acquired certain definite ideas from fleeting glimpses of North America which I obtained.

Any traveler from this crowded island is bound to be struck by the vastness of Canada and the United States. After rushing along for days and nights at express speed in a westward direction, I was informed, at the town where I alighted, that I was making a great mistake not to arrange to visit the great West! After days and nights of hurrying southward I was told that I was missing something fundamentally different from anything I had yet seen by my neglect to proceed to Southern States! Cities and villages everywhere give one the idea of endless affluence. Vast stores and shops, sumptuous hotels, streets in cities and roads leading to cities are alive with automobiles of every size and description; a single state in America has on its register more motor cars than the whole of the United Kingdom.

America's Infinite Resources

But perhaps more than all, one has a sense of the infinite resources of these gigantic territories. The vast grain belt stretching for a thousand miles from north to south and for hundreds from east to west; the cotton area of the South; the garden land of California, Florida and Southern Canada; mineral resources unequaled in any continent for richness and variety. Coal deposits in such abundance that the bulk are untouched; navigable waterways, rivers and lakes; water power available for industry where most needed; immense forests with everywhere the suggestion of unexplored treasure which, when revealed, will exceed the vision of the Golden City of man's dreams.

As you think of all this, you reckon up on a piece of paper what the population of the United States will be when it equals that of England per square mile and what the population of Canada will be when that great dominion is peopled as Scotland is today. The United States, on the English scale, ought to maintain a population of 1,500,000,000, and Canada, on the Scottish scale, a population of 600,000,000. When you think of all this you cannot help feeling that, in visiting these regions, you are making the acquaintance of the future. This was the dominant feeling that possessed me as I passed through Canada and the United States.

And first as to Canada. I visited Canada 24 years ago and was able, therefore, to note the progress made since that period. I could see it in the enormous strides made by Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg. During that interval of years, they have leaped forward in population, in wealth and importance. Impressive streets, made wide and lined with attractive shops and immense offices; noble public buildings—provincial, municipal, educational and ecclesiastical—the miles of comfortable and commodious residences, all betoken a well-established and confident prosperity.

What struck me most of all in Canada and in the United States was the number, and even more the dimensions, of projects for change and improvement around these cities. Where we are apt here to niggle in thousands, over there they plan in millions. Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg were full of gigantic schemes for the development of trade equipment and amenity.

Amongst others, a thousand-million-dollar canal to carry the grain of the West from the lakes to the sea was the subject of constant discussion on 'change and in club. These fine cities are dependent, of course, on the bounty of the Canadian soil in grain, timber and materials.

When I got to the grain centers of the States I was struck by the feeling that existed there of the formidable character of Canadian competition in wheat growing. Generations of cultivation had exhausted the unreplenished fertility of their own lands, whereas Canada had unlimited fields of virgin soil of finest quality which still yield rich harvests without artificial fertilization. The American farmers felt their chances of competing in neutral markets against Canadian exporters were diminishing. Although a home population which is well over 100,000,000 provided them with a ready market at their own doors, I was nevertheless told at Minneapolis by farmers' representatives there that American farming suffers considerably from the loss of the European market, partly through Canadian competition and partly through European unsettlement. Nowhere are the possibilities of Canada more thoroughly realized and appreciated than across the frontier.

Canadians' Stock Appreciated

In this connection, I was very gratified to find how Canadian stock had appreciated in the States in consequence of the war. The valor and progress of the Canadian troops on the bloody battlefields of Europe had clearly made an ineffacable impression on the American mind. Americans talk of Canadians in a totally different strain to that which I recall in 1899. There is a note of admiration and respect which was not conspicuous in those days.

On the other hand, strange as it may seem, I was surprised to discover that Canadians themselves did not seem to realize fully the magnitude of their achievement in the great war. Had they been disposed to exaggerate their contribution to the victory, that would not have surprised me so much. Every nation naturally dwells on its own triumphs, often to the exclusion of those achieved by other nations. The fault of Canada is in the opposite direction. It errs from excessive modesty. What the Second Battle of Ypres—the storming of Vimy Ridge—the hurling back of Germans on Aug. 8, 1918, and breaking through of the Hindenburg line meant to the allies—and to the world—is not fully comprehended by the people whose gallant sons won those decisive and epochal victories. It may be that political or racial reasons may have had something to do with damping down the enthusiasm of an honorable pride. Whatever the reason, that is what I found.

Growth of Canadian Population

With all this remarkable advance in Canadian prosperity and national prestige and with all the infinite undeveloped resources of Canada, I had a feeling that the growth of population was not what it might have been. In 1901, the population was 5,371,315. Today it is between eight and nine millions. The growth in wealth would have justified a much larger growth in population. What is the reason? Has real effort been made and sustained to attract people from Europe to this land of infinite promise? I think it will be conceded that more might have been done had there been no cross-currents to impede a policy of encouraging immigration. For two or three years, the Motherland has had an unemployed list ranging between 1,300,000 and 2,000,000. With the dependents this represents a population of 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 in all. These include some of the best, most skillful and efficient workers in the world. With a little mobilization and training they could apply their hands to any industry that promised a livelihood.

The doors of the United States of America are now only partially opened to emigrants. Would it not have been well for Canada to have taken prompt and full advantage of these exceptional conditions to fill up her vacant lands? She has endless reserves of undeveloped wealth. She needs men and women to open them up and exploit them for the greater enrichment of the great dominion and the happiness of its people. There is a lag somewhere. Where is it?

Canada is unquestionably missing one of the greatest opportunities ever presented to it of advancing its real power. It might now acquire an accession of strength which it needs by attracting to its soil a proportion of this fine population. They are men and women of the same race and tradition as the majority of the people of Canada. A few years hence the chance may have gone.

The ordinary methods of attracting emigrants are worthless. A bolder and more enterprising policy is needed on both sides of the Atlantic. But with co-operation results could be secured that, whilst giving Canada a spurt forward, would at the same time strengthen the British Empire as a whole.

WHAT FIGHT FOR CHANGES IN HOUSE RULES MEANS, AND AIMS OF MEN BEHIND IT

Demand for Restoration of Control of Committees by House Planned Through Abolition of Oligarchy of Power.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.

WHAT are the Republican insurgents of the House trying to gain in their fight for modification of the House rules? Their proclaimed object is to restore representative government to the House. What, precisely, does that mean?

First, it ought to be said that the movement for revision headed by John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, cannot be dismissed as a "wild-eyed" radical drive. There are conservative members on both sides who are convinced that an unnatural development of the rules, artfully brought about by men seeking power over legislation, has produced a situation comparable to that which led, 12 years ago, to the revolt against Cannonism.

A movement which has among its chief sponsors such men as Hamilton Fish Jr. of New York, Republican, and Robert Walton Moore of Virginia, Democrat, is more than a mere bid for power on the part of the La Follette progressives.

Men Working for Changes.

Fish, one of the younger men from New York, cannot be classed as a radical. He is a regular Republican of an independent turn of mind. His experience in the House has brought him the conviction, in his own words, that "the House under the present rules has about as much real power as the French Legislature had under Napoleon," and to change the rules he is willing to accept aid, wherever he can find it.

Fish's grandfather was Secretary of State under President Grant. His father was Speaker of the New York State Legislature and later a member of the insurgent group in the anti-Cannon fight in Congress. Hamilton Fish Jr. has thrown himself into the battle against the present House oligarchy with all the energy that he displayed when captaining the Harvard football team some 10 or 15 years ago.

Robert Walton Moore comes from one of the oldest families of Virginia. He is a former president of the Bar Association of that State. His ancestors, like those of Fish, fought in the Revolution. Moore's only connection with the La Follette insurgents is their common desire to amend the House rules.

Opponents of revision have charged that Nelson and his group, in demanding revision, are tilting at a straw man, for advertising purposes. They desire publicity, of course, for it is only through publicity that they can hope for results, but the evil they assail is not imaginary.

Control With Three Men.

Legislation in the House under the present rules is virtually under the control of three men—the Speaker, the majority floor leader and the chairman of the Rules Committee.

Before the successful rebellion against Cannonism—a rebellion in which the present insurgent leader, Nelson, played a conspicuous part—the Speaker had a threefold autocratic power. He had the sole power of recognition of a member, and if he pleased could leave a member standing all day without permitting him to speak. He was ex-officio chairman of the Rules Committee—in effect the chairman of the Board of Directors of the House. Finally, he had the appointment of all committees. He was, indeed, the czar of the House.

The Speaker has been shorn of all but the power of recognition, but that alone gives him large authority. He remains a member of the oligarchy ruling the House.

The second member of this oligarchy is the majority floor leader, who is also the chairman of the steering committee of the Republican party. The steering committee works in secret and is responsible to nobody.

Third, there is the chairman of the rules committee. The extent of his power was shown during the last Congress, when Campbell of Kansas had the sceptre. He could call the committee together or not, as he pleased; he could report out "gag" rules, which, upon adoption by a majority vote of the House, would operate to prevent a pending measure from being amended on the floor; he could pocket resolutions of his committee and bring them to the attention of the House or not as he saw fit.

Campbell could, and did, use his powers to control legislation in the interest of the Old Guard Republicans. The Progressives of the party were helpless. This was especially true near the end of the session, when Campbell, in the illness of Speaker Gillette, was the acting Speaker of the House. The Progressives had to sit by and watch legislation run by two men, Campbell and Floor Leader Mondell, both of whom had been defeated at the polls in the elections of the previous November. Two "lame ducks," in other words, controlled the legislative program last spring.

Aims of Progressives.

The Progressives in their present fight are aiming at three main objectives. Most of all, they want to bring the committees of the House under the control of the House. At present a bill may be smothered in committee and never brought before the House. There is a rule now, which makes it theoretically possible to get a committee discharged from further consideration of a bill, but in practice the rule is unworkable. The revisionists seek to give the House the power to take a bill away from a committee after a reasonable length of time—30 days has been suggested in a proposal by Representative Fish and approved by the Wisconsin group.

"With possibly two exceptions," said Representative Nelson, "every State Legislature has the power to discharge its committees. In consequence of the lack of this power in Congress, committees can sit indefinitely on bills and resolutions and defy the House. This is a common practice. For instance, proposed changes in the Esch-Cummins law were sat upon in the last Congress by the Interstate Commerce Committee, which was stacked in favor of that law.

"We Progressives have some legislation that we want a chance to vote on; we don't want it killed in hostile committees."

The second change proposed by the Progressives is one designed to prevent the chairman of a committee from defying the other committee members, by refusing to report to the House a measure on which they have acted.

Safeguards Against Surprises.

Third, the Progressives demand safeguards against "surprise" legislation. During the last Congress, Leader Mondell, in response to pressure, voluntarily put out a bulletin on coming business. The Progressives are asking for a rule making it mandatory upon the speaker to issue such a bulletin for a week ahead. Moreover, they want the Congressional Record each day to carry a notice of the next day's business.

"It is a well-recognized fact," said Nelson, "that measures desired by special interests are often held back and then rushed through at the end of the session, when there is no chance for de-

Pre-Natal Influences.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A VERY instructive article is the one in your last Sunday Magazine, which serves to explain the origination of Jesse Pomeroy's murderous acts when a child. The article states that some months before Jesse's birth his mother daily witnessed the slaughter of lambs, steers, pigs and calves in a packing house, to which she went daily with her husband's lunch. The sights of the killing of the animals affected her so profoundly that often she would be awakened out of nightmare dreams in which she saw little lambs and pigs being killed in a horrible manner. Jesse delighted to torment his innocent victims in the same manner, as well as to murder them. This was one instance of birth-marks being inflicted upon children through the mental and physical acts of the prospective mother, although some medicine doctors, and other people, may pooh-pooh the idea. There is no doubt but that Jesse's vicious career was caused by sights which his mother witnessed in the slaughter house.

Another instance of murderous birth-mark's having been placed upon children by the unintentional thoughts of the mother is that of Napoleon Bonaparte. Some writers state that for some months prior to Napoleon's birth his mother spent her time in the camps with her husband, an officer in the army, and she also continuously read Roman history, with all of its recital of the bloody horrors of war, for history is usually only a recital of battles and murders accompanying same. The result was that she gave birth to an evil genius, who in after years drenched all of Europe with blood. He was a person who caused the deaths of more people than Jesse had even thought of killing, although the murders committed by Napoleon's armies were legalized under the name of "war." With all of his hideousness, Napoleon is held aloft for the admiration of those who wish to worship a certain kind of genius.

These two instances, as well as many others of similar character, should teach prospective mothers the importance of performing the proper mental and physical acts, and also concerning the baneful effects apt to be produced by witnessing the pictures of highway robberies, murders, hold-ups and other evil and pernicious acts, which are so graphically portrayed in the "movies."

If the prospective mothers may produce monsters of wickedness through the unintentional witnessing of evil actions and by entertaining wrong ideas, it certainly follows, as the night the day, that people of greatness and goodness may be brought into the world by the prospective mothers intentionally filling their mentalities with the opposite kinds of thoughts.

What Hurts the Farmer.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT'S not the big one, but the average farmer, that is now needing help; and there is not very much in all this talk about reduction of "freight rates," so far as he is concerned, as but few of this class have anything to ship. Neither have the "reserve banks" done much for him, for he finds when all the "red tape" work is paid for, his money costs him just about as much as from the loan companies. When he didn't need it very badly he could get it at from 5 to 5½ per cent, and now, when he must have it he's being charged about as much as the statute will permit, and half the farmers can't get it at that; and as a result many are losing their farms. They were forced to buy bonds and had to sell at what they could get, losing millions of dollars, and when theirs were all sold, bonds advanced to par, as their farm products declined.

And that isn't all. Fifty per cent of this class of farmers have mortgages on every foot of land they own for half its present value, and though taxes are high and growing higher, they are assessed for its full amount of taxes, and really own but one-half interest. Why not deduct the "mortgage debt" from the assessed valuation and let the farmer pay on what he owns instead of "double taxes?" Other states do this. Why not Missouri?

Cheaper farm labor, cheaper farm machinery, higher prices for his products, lower taxes and lower interest are what the average farmer needs most just at this time.

WILL NAME A JUDGE.

President Coolidge has informed Senator Reed that he expects shortly to solve the long drawn controversy over the appointment of a Federal Judge for the Eastern Missouri District and to send a nomination to the Senate when that body convenes after the holiday recess.

Mr. Coolidge is to be commended for his decision to terminate a situation that has become a reproach. The vacancy should be filled without further delay and the appointee should be a man of such ability and standing as to merit the public's approval as well as the Senate's.

The controversy over this appointment, as is well known, is of Senator Spencer's own creating. He alone is responsible for the fact that the people of St. Louis and Eastern Missouri have been deprived of an urgently needed court for more than a year. In the interest of his personal political machine he has persisted in demanding the appointment of a personal friend. His importunity embarrassed President Harding, has annoyed President Coolidge and has defrauded the public of an important, necessary public service.

The only reparation Senator Spencer can now make is to join in the Senate's confirmation of the President's nominee for this place. It is assumed he will do so. It does not seem possible that he will still flout public sentiment and sacrifice the public welfare by trying to hold up the appointment. As the Post-Dispatch has pointed out, Mr. Spencer's appointment activities have been singularly unfortunate. Newberry, Goldstein and the judgeship deadlock constitute an unenviable record. He should not add to the total of his offense by further fighting the lost battle for his friend.

Senator Spencer should awake to the dignity of the Senatorship and to his obligations to the public and redeem himself in the slight degree remaining to him by accepting the President's selection for Federal Judge.

SOCIAL AND MORAL SENSE.

The social sense of our House of Lords was violently jarred when Magnus Johnson and Hendrik Shipstead, the two Senators of the very plain people of Minnesota, withheld their indorsement of the appointment of a predecessor, Frank Kellogg, as Ambassador to the Court of St. James. Kellogg was not, in their opinion, a worthy representative of the American people in so prominent a post. The voters of his own State had repudiated him. His appointment was the kind of a reward which awaits lame ducks who have done faithful party service, but which is denied to the kind of members who break the rules of the Senate club.

The Senate's moral sense is not shocked by such rewards for partisan service. Its moral sense was not in the least aroused the other day when the urbane and socially correct Lodge blocked unanimous consent to immediate consideration on the floor of a resolution to alleviate the cruelties of the immigration laws to wives and children. There is no record of a shock to the moral sense of the Senate when world peace was made a football of politics. But when Johnson and Shipstead throw mud on the time-honored social traditions of the Senate there is a cry as of murder.

Social clubs have their place even in a democracy. But we need in Washington a Senate whose moral sense is as reachable at least as its social sense.

MR. WELLS ON THE RIGHT ROAD.

John Stuart Mill confessed gravely in his autobiography that at about the age of 20 his consuming passion was to "reform the world," and at that callow period in his life he dedicated himself to the prodigious task. But when he grew more mature he became less confident. Mill has a successor, of a sort, in Herbert George Wells.

Mr. Wells started out as a socialistic theorizer. Though his methods have changed, he remains much the same in the general aspect of his theorizing. If, like Mill, he was confident of being able to reform the world, he did not put himself upon record in those early days. But since the close of the World War he seems to have arrogated to himself the task envisioned and virtually abandoned by his predecessor. Mr. Wells aspires to a complete reshaping of the human ensemble.

In the recent election campaign lost by Premier Baldwin and his party, the Premier quoted one Wellsian utterance with which, he admitted, he agreed profoundly: "Free trade must be mutual." "Now, that is a very great saying," remarked the statesman who at that moment was on the edge of his downfall because he was advocating, for Great Britain, the thing called protection.

John Stuart Mill, were he living, probably would approve the Wells pronouncement in milder terms; he would say as to the necessity for free trade being mutual, "That is self-evident." Now, if Mr. Wells will but hammer away along the line of universal free trade he will be helping to bring about the reformation of the world.

CHURCHES IN POLITICS.

Two New York courts have held that the New York Antisaloon League, within the meaning of the State election law, is a political combination and under obligation to file with the Secretary of State a statement of its receipts and expenditures. But why is the New York Antisaloon League fighting so hard against being compelled to make public its campaign receipts and disbursements, as every other political organization must do?

What is the Antisaloon League? The Christian Science Monitor believes it is solely a church organization and that its annual expenditure of $2,500,000 represents the contributions of congregations of 60,000 churches, mostly in country districts. Says the Monitor: "It was started by a Methodist clergyman in 1893, and the 60,000 churches that adhere to it are evangelical in doctrine and practice. In bone and sinew it is the product of the Methodist church.". And again: "It cannot be too strongly said that the league is the churches, and the churches constitute the league."

This, however, ignores the well-known fact that Big Business, represented by the Rockefeller and other interests, has for years subscribed hundreds of thousands of dollars to the league's funds. For all practical, political purposes there is a coalition between a small minority of church organizations and Big Business, which supports the league in its own interest, as a helpful political tool. There are, according to the World Almanac, 230,000 churches of all denominations in the United States. So the combination of churches working with Big Business in the political field in behalf of prohibition does not include 170,572 churches—a majority.

Certain churches, a minority, have broken into politics. Aided by huge contributions from Big Business they have succeeded in imposing prohibition upon the United States. The two together constitute an invisible government, refusing to make public the sources of its political campaign fund.

An organization that has for its chief object the election of its favorite candidates to political office, and which expends a huge campaign fund in the effort to have them elected, is obviously a political organization, whatever its professions and whatever its other activities. Churches in politics are contrary to the principles of American government, which was founded with the object of representing all the people and with a Constitution which, by forbidding the passage of laws "respecting an establishment of religion," was framed to keep church and state forever separate.

The Antisaloon League should be compelled to comply with the law as to publishing campaign funds that governs all other political organizations.

A WALL STREET STORY'S MORAL.

A Wall Street thaumaturg who was retained by Harry Sinclair of Teapot Dome renown to market the stock of the Mammoth Oil Company has told the story of his operations to a Senate committee. The narrative, it is reported, was as clear as Einstein to the mystified Senators.

During the recital, however, a statement was made which the public might well ponder. That was that, in the purchase of this oil stock, Mr. Sinclair lost considerable money.

A little pondering on that statement precipitates this question: If Harry loses money when buying oil stock, how can Tom or Dick hope to win?

ON A WASHINGTON RUBBER NECK WAGON.

"OH, DADDY, look at those poor men. They are shaking like they had a fit. Are they from the earthquake zone?"

"No, son, they are the members of the Russian division of the State Department."

"What is the matter with them, daddy?"

"They are filled with terrible fears for our safety."

"But we are all right, daddy. What are they afraid of?"

"They are afraid the Fourth of July means nothing to us, and our pride and faith in our institutions founded on over a hundred years of glorious history, and sealed with the blood of martyrs and heroes, is a thing that a breath of wind can destroy."

"They must be silly, daddy. They ought to be locked up and placarded if their trouble is catching. Is it catching, daddy?"

"It seems to be only as far as the Secretary himself is concerned. The rest of us are perfectly immune."

"Do you think there is danger of the Secretary giving it to the President, daddy?"

"Not much, son. There are certain malarial conditions in every Foreign Office developed by the feeling of power and mystery, and a sort of bureaucratic in breeding that are dangerous, but we wisely protect ourselves by changing the responsible officials frequently. This more or less saves every President from the contagion: some are just naturally safe. President Coolidge is one of these, I think. He showed his Americanism was not a surface decoration, but in his very bones, when he freed the political prisoners."

"Look at those poor men again, daddy. It's terrible. Can nothing be done to help them?"

"Why yes, son, I think if they fired them from the department, and sent them home to make a living among their fellows they would soon get over it."

"How awful serious they look, daddy."

"Yes, son. That is their trouble—they lack the perception of proportion which we call the sense of humor. What the Russian division of the State Department particularly needs now is Will Rogers."

"But even he couldn't make Mr. Hughes smile, daddy."

"Perhaps not, son. But he might make the President laugh, which just now is the important thing."

TO THE BABE OF BETHLEHEM.

O HALLOWED morn of ancient birth
That gave to us a King,
That peace on earth, good will to men
Through all the world could ring.

Sweet babe of Bethlehem, you lay
Wrapped in your swaddling clothes,
And in a manger on this morn
Your sweet life did disclose.

The brightest star of all the earth
Shone high in heaven's array,
While on the fields the shepherds sang
At break of Christmas day.

A Savior to us has been born
That we might live and grow,
To find the path of love and peace
And in His steps to go.

O let us on this day of days
Join the celestial throng,
And down the ages yet to come
Intone the grateful song.

That God in heaven did send to us,
The ages to adorn,
A Savior who is God to us
On this sweet Christmas morn.

ELIZABETH M. NEWELL.

Human beings in their present condition may be likened to bees in the act of swarming, as we see them clinging in a mass to a single bough. Their position is a temporary one, and must inevitably be changed. They must rise and find themselves a new abode. Every bee knows this, and is eager to shift his own position as well as that of the others, but not one of them will do so until the whole swarm rises. The swarm cannot rise, because one bee clings to the other and prevents it from separating itself from the swarm, and so they all continue to hang. It might seem as if there were no deliverance from this position, precisely as it seems with the men of this world who have become entangled in the social net. Indeed, there would be no outlet for the bees if each one were not a living creature possessed of a pair of wings.—Tolstoi.

Mussolini has wisely concluded that his dictatorship cannot go on indefinitely, and he has taken steps to end it. He would have done this last summer but for the kindly intervention of the Greek incident, which enabled him to make a show of bravado at the expense of the League of Nations. The closed season on Italians since that time leaves him only where he was before, and he has decided to have representative government. This even isn't the success it might be, but the mere form lasts longer than a dictatorship.

THE PERSONALITY OF JESU

ALFRED E. ZIMMERN in the De Century.

GEORGES BERGUER, a French Protestant clergyman, holds a p in a suburb of Geneva, and his bo written from a series of lectures de at that university between 1917 and 1 is modestly entitled: "Some Aspects of Life of Jesus From the Psychological a Psychoanalytical Point of View." In it is a boldly pioneering work which p the discussion of Jesus' personality on wholly new plane and is certain to ex cise an important influence on all sub quent inquiry into the subject. Bergu special contribution is to have attemp for the first time, to apply to the stud Jesus the categories and methods of psy analysis. Psychoanalysis, as is not al remembered by lovers of the latest fash able shibboleth, is not a new phil still less a new religion. It is simply a method of exploring human nature, a and an approved and successful mean Berguer's own words, "of discovering revealing to men what is in them and they can make use of their hidden e gies." The result of Berguer's searching twofold. He finds that the distinctive ture of Jesus' personality, from the ps analytical point of view, is that he was c pletely normal, immune from the crises repressions from which the ordinary m suffers so much; and he finds, also, that his attitude to others Jesus adopted, by ticipation, spontaneously, and naturally approved methods and attitude of m psychoanalysis.

TOLERANCE IN COLLEGE.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Union.

WITH a liberality uncommon in colle circles, President Hopkins of Dartm has declined to oppose William Z. Fos speaking before a body of students a under their own auspices. This decision tolerance is based not only upon his fa in the ultimately triumphant common s of his undergraduates, but upon the be that intolerance defeats its own objects

When a young man reaches college seems somehow to shake off the imita sense that has ruled him thus far, and adopt in its stead a very considerable of critical opposition. Again, despite very considerable accumulation of opi and evidence to the contrary, the und graduate is habitually the possessor of very good fund of common sense. For the fuss that has been made over him is really able to swallow very strong d of radical and unbalanced opinions w being very seriously affected thereby. —and here the trouble arises—unless radical himself is opposed and pun Then things take on an altogether diff aspect. Once the radical has been st with the cachet of "martyr," he will all but the most astute of the student before him. There is little reason wh undergraduate should be prevented coming into contact with even the mo treme views. He may be captured by novelty at first, but if more conv ideas are sounder, it will take him no length of time to discover the fact an cast aside the hocus-pocus which he erstwhile favored.

WHAT FIGHT FOR CHANGES IN HOUSE RULES MEANS

bate. We want to know each day what is coming, so we can be prepared.

"Other changes are needed," said Nelson, "but these are the most important at present, and if adopted they will go a long way toward restoring Government to the people."

In addition to his proposal relating to discharge of committees, Representative Fish is urging the creation of a special committee of nine to revise the rules and the creation of a special committee to handle all veteran relief measures.

"Members of all factions and parties who believe in restoring representative government in the House are welcome in this fight to liberalize the rules," said the New York Congressman. "No member need fear for his party regularity, as the rules obviously and unquestionably are reforming on a nonpartisan basis. The present rules are archaic, antiquated and confusing, and deprive the majority of any control over the committees.

The Invisible Government.

"The professional private lobby, otherwise known as the invisible government, has more influence in getting bills reported or in having them chloroformed than individual members. The lobby is paid to work day and night to either defeat or pass certain bills, whereas the individual House member has other duties to perform, and he is impotent to secure favorable action without the power to discharge a committee."

Under the agreement obtained from the House leadership by the progressives as the price of permitting the House to be organized, the present rules are to be made the subject of full discussion in the House, with each member having the right to offer amendments from the floor. The Rules Committee, of which Nelson was made a member—another important concession to progressive sentiment—is now working on suggested changes and will report to the House next month.

Nelson expresses confidence that the insurgents will win their fight.

It is questionable whether they will reach all their objectives, but there s reason to believe that a material liberalization of the rules is in store.

GOLDEN AGE SOON COMING SAYS HEAD OF INDIA SOCIETY

each others' throats, because each one is surrounded by barriers of ambition, selfishness, pride, greed and hate.

"The ugly barriers between individuals, between groups and families and nations, must be broken down. They must give way before understanding, sympathy, tolerance and love. First, man must serve not only himself and those from whom he derives benefit, but all other men on earth as well, no matter of what family, social caste, nation or religion they may be.

Greatest Enemy Is "Fear."

"Now the Eastern thinker, the Sufi, the searcher after truth, finds himself completely free from the greatest enemy of the Western peoples. That enemy is fear. For it is fear, fear of the other fellow's getting the things you want, that makes you hate him and try to throttle him. And he in turn hates you and tries to choke you. Likewise it is really fear that makes one nation hate another. But the greatest Hindu philosophers have found the plans for overcoming this fear. They realize that their fellow creatures are not their natural enemies. There is only one real enemy, and that is fear or delusion. If all men sought for the true way of living, they would all be moving in the same direction and there would be no friction or clashes, no tugging in contrary directions.

"The Sufi can feel no jealousy for he knows that jealousy is the most unreasonable of all vices, preventing him from getting any pleasure out of the society of his fellow men. He shaes his happiness with others, and thereby multiplies its good effects. He looks upon every man, no matter how different he may be, as his brother and treats him accordingly.

"One nation differs from another. I know they talk different languages, because their forefathers talked different languages. They wear different clothes, because they live in different climates. They have different ideas and customs. How unreasonable, then, for one nation to regard itself proudly as the only possible nation for any one to live in, and to despise and make war on other nations. If nations would only try to understand the inevitable differences between themselves, and also to recognize their common humanity, there could be no international jealousies and wars. Why will they not develop tolerance? Tolerance is the very keynote of my message. A tolerant world is a world at peace.

"Time for Wave of Tolerance."

"It is, indeed, high time for a wave of tolerance to sweep away the misery of the world. Color prejudice, class distinctions, sex inequality, are all on the increase. Your education is qualifying your students to become selfish to the best of their ability, to get the best of each other all ways. Your constant striving after material inventions, in the absence of any higher ideals, has led to such works as have set the world on fire. You are steadily going from bad to worse. In fact, the world is now almost as bad as it can possibly become."

"And what do you imagine the result will be if you succeed in inoculating the world with the tolerant principles of the Sufi?" I asked.

Here the prophet came into his own. "The coming era will be an era of regeneration, of new joy, sympathy and hope. It must be a good one," he explained, "for when the worst has already happened, the only possible development is toward the good.

"The races in the coming era will mingle together more and more, forgetting their differences and hates, and will develop finally into one single world-wide race. The nations will develop in the direction of democracy and will remove every element which embitters one against the other. There will be alliances of nations until there is a real world alliance, so as no nation may be oppressed by another, all work in harmony and freedom for the common peace.

"Religions will draw closer together and their workers will be tolerant of one another.

'Labor and Capital, Hand in Hand.'

"Labor will work hand in hand with capital.

"It will have little importance. Woman will become freer, married women will be called by their own names. Children will be called by the name of their town, city or nation, instead of by the names of their parents and families. No work will be considered menial; nothing in life will be humiliating; everybody will mind his own business, and people will converse freely with each other without securing the formality of introductions. Husband and wife will be companions, independent, not detached. Servant and master will be so only during working hours. Medicine will take away the need for surgery. Grudges about relations, complaints against servants and all fault-finding will cease to exist. The reign of a new and altogether delightful way of life will be inaugurated."

Here I ventured to point out that all this was a rather large task for one man, or for any single order to accomplish.

"But I am only modestly pointing the way," explained the Pir-O-Murshid. "I am merely trying to spread these ideas among my pupils and among such educators and persons of importance as I am able to reach. It is not even necessary to join the Sufi order or to call one's self a Sufi in order to assist in the work of tolerance and the search for truth. Everyone who adheres to the principles I have been outlining to you may do his share to hasten the opening of the golden age."

The talk which I have rather crudely reported above can give only the vaguest idea of the charm of Inzyat Khan's conversation and of the picturesqueness and winning quality of his personality.

Writings Show Personality.

These things become manifest when one reads his literary work; when one, for instance, comes across aphorisms like the following from his "notes from the unstruck music":

"Heaven and hell are the material manifestation of agreeable and disagreeable thoughts.

"A tender-hearted sinner is better than a saint hardened by piety.

"When the miser shows any generosity, he celebrates it with trumpets.

"To offend a low person is like throwing a stone in the mud and getting splashed.

"Self pity is the cause of all the grief of life.

"Endurance makes things precious and men great.

"Right and wrong depend upon attitude and situation, not upon the action.

"Simplicity of nature is the sign of saints.

"Failure in life does not matter; the greatest misfortune is standing still.

"Happiness alone is natural and is attained by living naturally.

"It is easy to become a teacher, but difficult to become a pupil.

"The present spirit of humanity has commercialism as its crown and materialism as its throne.

"You must never joke with a fool; if you throw a flower at him he will throw back a stone.

"Man wonders about his past and future; how wonderful would life become to him if he only realized the present."

Fog Halts River Traffic.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAIRO, Ill., Dec. 22.—All navigation on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers with the exception of local harbor service has been at a standstill for 48 hours as the result of one of the heaviest fogs in recent years. Ferry and transfer boats are creeping at reduced speed within the Cairo harbor.

ROBBERS FOOLED BY BIG BUNDLE OF DOLLAR BILLS

In Searching Saloon Man They Take $455 and Overlook $1845 in Larger Denominations.

MACHINE SHOP PAYROLL STOLEN

Three Men Obtain $893 in Envelopes From Girl Stenographer at 4356 Maffitt Avenue.

Two payroll robbers who searched William Langeloth, a saloonkeeper of 800 South Seventh street, at noon yesterday, were nervous and inexperienced. A package of 455 dollar bills looked so big they thought they had a small fortune, stopped their search and hastened away, overlooking $1845 in bills of large demonination.

Other robbers, a few minutes earlier, took $895 in pay envelopes from Miss Mary Eva Sanders of 5177 Maple avenue, stenographer for the Francis M. Stambaugh Machine Shop, 4356 Maffitt avenue.

Langeloth, when accosted by the robbers, had just stepped from his automobile at the rear of his saloon after a trip to a downtown bank, where he had obtained $2300 to cash checks of employes of the Terminal Railroad Association and the Columbia Terminal Co. The $455 in $1 bills was in a pocket of his overcoat. The remainder of the money was in a package beneath his coat, which was buttoned. One robber had a revolver pointed at Langeloth, while two others searched him.

Fooled by Big Bundle.

Finding the $455, which made a bundle of considerable size, the two searchers said to the other, "Let's get away from here." They ordered Langloth to go into the saloon, leaped into his automobile and drove away.

The robbery of the Stambaugh firm was soon after the payroll money had been placed in the individual envelopes for employes. It was in a drawer on top of the desk of the stenographer.

Two men entered the office, while a third remained at the wheel of a Cadillac touring car, of maroon color, which was kept waiting about 15 feet from the entrance to the office. Stambaugh's automobile, with negro chauffeur waiting, was in front of the office.

When the robbers entered, one pointed a revolver at Miss Sanders, while the other poked the barrel of a revolver at Stambaugh's side as he sat at his desk using the telephone. Stambaugh was told "I'll blow your ribs in if you move." Stambaugh dropped the telephone receiver and sat still.

Chauffeur Also Lined Up.

Miss Sanders was obeying the command of the other robber to hand over the pay envelopes when the negro chauffeur entered. He was cursed and commanded to back into a corner, which he did.

Seizing the money, the robbers ran out and drove away in the car. Stambaugh called two machinists and gave chase in his car. The robbers drove west on Maffitt avenue, Stambaugh losing sight of them at Marcus avenue.

RADIO CAMPAIGN FOR CONSTITUTION AMENDMENTS

Arrangements Made With Five Broadcasting Stations for Sending Out Pleas for Their Adoption.

Through arrangement with five of the leading radio broadcasting stations of the State, the Association for Constitution Amendments will conduct a portion of its campaign for the adoption of the 21 amendments by radio.

Branch organizations have been completed in Kansas City, St. Joseph, Hannibal, Joplin, Springfield and other large voting centers. As soon as the holidays are over, organization in the smaller cities and in every county of the State will be pushed rapidly, as the special election on the proposed amendments will be held on Feb. 26.

Officers of the association are to have the use of one powerful radio station every afternoon, and as it is thought every county or city chairman can get the use of a receiving set, they all can "listen in" at a stated hour each day for the latest instructions from headquarters.

CHRISTMAS CAROL SINGERS AT HOSPITALS TOMORROW

The Children's Aid Society of St. Louis has issued a warning that the Christmas carol singers who will move through St. Louis tomorrow evening, visiting hospitals and other institutions, are moved purely by a desire to continue a beautiful Christmas eve custom of many years' standing in St. Louis.

The authorized groups of singers understand that, under no circumstances, are they to accept any contributions, as they formerly did, because the society now depends entirely on its membership in the Community Fund of St. Louis for support. They fear, however, that some unauthorized groups may accept such gifts and spoil the spirit to which the evening is devoted.

Episcopal Christmas Services.

Special services will be held Christmas day in all Episcopal churches in St. Louis, and in several there will be midnight celebrations of the holy communion, preceded by musical programs. Bishop Johnson will speak at the Christmas morning service in Christ Church Cathedral and at the Monday evening service in St. Luke's Hospital. The candle light carol service of the choir and church school of Christ Church Cathedral will be Monday at 5:15 p. m.

284 Births and 213 Deaths.

There were 284 births and 213 deaths reported in St. Louis last week. Thirty-nine persons died of organic heart trouble, 23 of cancer, 21 of Bright's disease, 15 of broncho and 11 of lobar pneumonia, 9 of diseases of the arteries, 8 of cerebral hemorrhage and 9 of tuberculosis. There were 4 homicides, one suicide and 6 accidental deaths.

J. E. HUTCHINSON PROMOTED TO VICE-PRESIDENT OF FRISCO

Present General Manager on Jan. 1 Will Take Charge of Operation of Railway.

J. E. Hutchinson, general manager of the Frisco Railroad, with headquarters in Springfield, will be advanced Jan. 1 to vice president in charge of operation, with headquarters in St. Louis. He will be succeeded as general manager by J. H. Fraser, assistant general manager, in charge of the second district at Springfield.

The duties of Hutchinson's new position have been performed from the president's office for the past year, there having been a vacancy in the position since the retirement of T. A. Hamilton from the Frisco service a year ago.

Hutchinson has come up through 20 years of minor executive positions with the Frisco, his first service with the road being that of trainmaster in Texas and later in Southern Missouri. Successively he has been superintendent of terminals in Kansas City, superintendent of the northern division at Fort Scott, Kan., general superintendent at Springfield and for the past four years general manager.

He will have as assistant A. H. Jones, who has been an assistant to the president. M. M. Sisson, assistant general manager of the first district in Springfield, will take over Fraser's duties, serving as assistant general manager in the first and second districts.

DYER SAYS COOLIDGE WILL RENAME CURRY

Congressman Reports Assurance That District Attorney at St. Louis Will Retain Place.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—That the nomination of Allen Curry, recess appointee of President Harding for the District Attorneyship of the Eastern district of Missouri, would be sent to the Senate by President Coolidge as soon as it reconvenes, was the prediction today of Representative L. C. Dyer of St. Louis following a conversation with Department of Justice officials.

Dyer saw the President Thursday, when he says he was assured that Curry would get the nomination.

Senator Spencer has indicated that he is not favorable to the nomination of Curry, although Curry had his recommendation to be First Assistant Attorney. He could not be reached today, but recently he stated that, while Curry had his approval for the subordinate position, he was waiting for the report of the Department of Justice before he made up his mind regarding support.

Dyer said that Department of Justice officials had prepared a report to Attorney-General Daugherty, stating that Curry had conducted the office efficiently. This report, Dyer said, would be forwarded with Daugherty's approval to the President Monday when he returns from New York.

Dancer's $1,000,000 Suit Dismissed.

By the Associated Press

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 22.—Justice Ellis J. Staley today dismissed the $1,000,000 breach of promise action brought by Evan Burrows Fontaine, dancer, in Supreme Court in Saratoga County, against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney. The dismissal was made in special term of Supreme Court here on motion of Harold Firestone, counsel for Miss Fontaine. Mr. Firestone announced that he would immediately bring another similar action in West Chester County, where his client now resides.

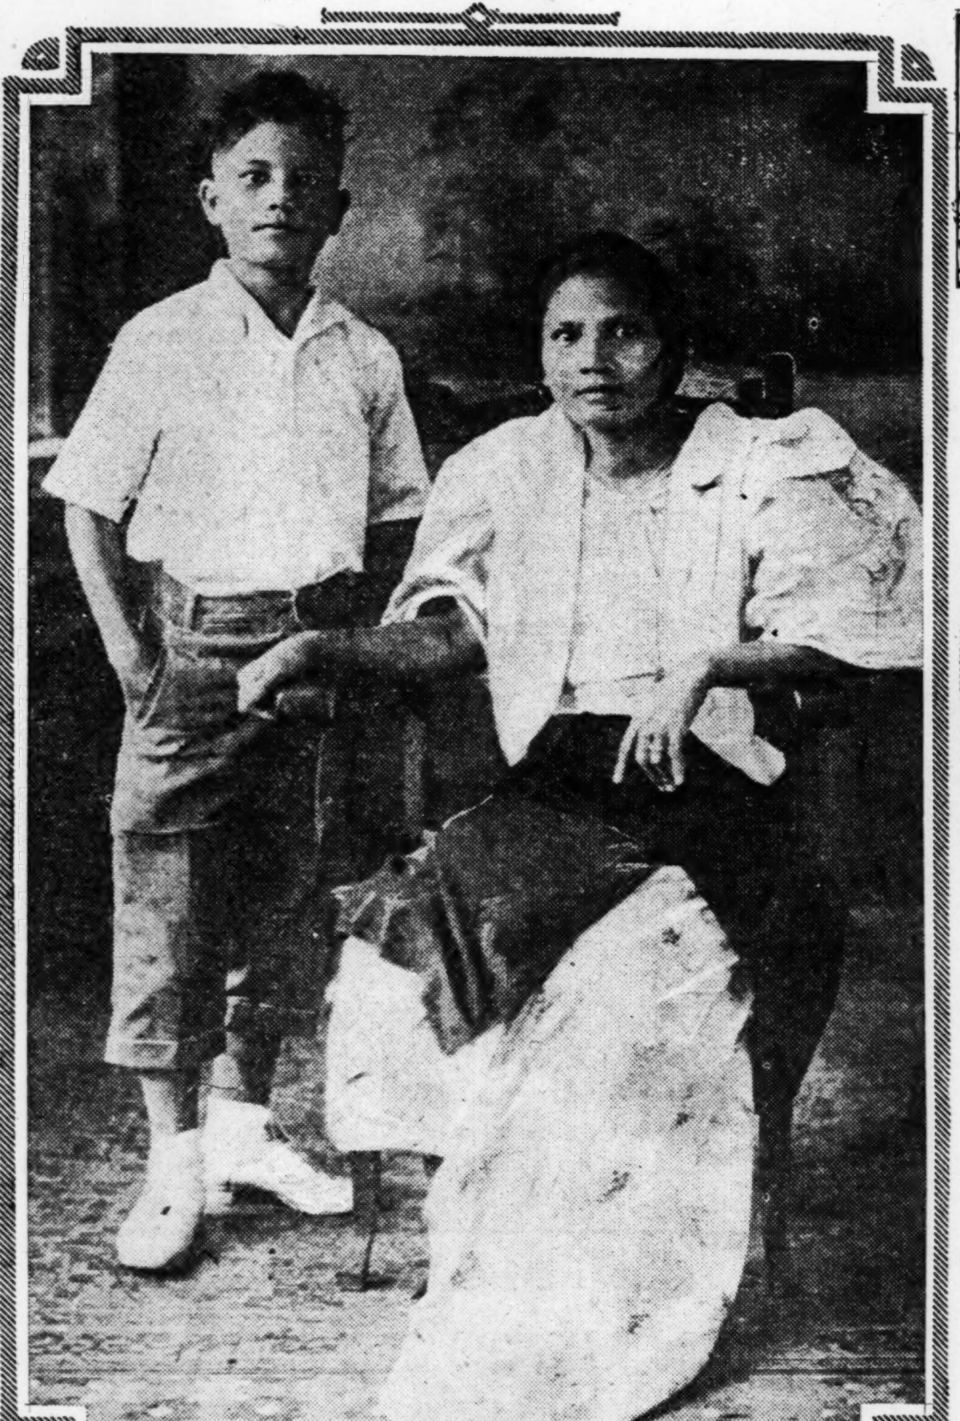
FROM FILIPINO BUFFALO HERDER TO MASTER OF MILLIONS IN OKLAHOMA

Story of Successful Search in Island Possessions for Half-Caste Boy of 14, Son of American Soldier



Gregorio Carmichael, the Filipino lad, and his mother have come to America to lay claim to some of the millions that are flowing from the oil wells on the Oklahoma tract left by the boy's grandfather.

Aunt of Youth, Who Has Accepted His Sister as Heir, Says Cryptically, "There Is No Son" and Admits She Is Greatly Distressed by This Development—He Arrives at Scene of His Fortune With a Number of Native Witnesses to Back Up Proof Offered From Documents.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
PONCA CITY, Ok., Dec. 22.

GREGORIO played at the door of the nipa hut he called home. It was play well earned, for he had toiled that day in the rice and sugar cane and in herding his carabous as the water buffalo are called in the Philippines. His only possession was the sarong that he wore, scant one-piece covering for his brown body, but he had not a care in the world except to keep clear of the heels of the carabou which once had caught him unawares and left a scar on his cheek to teach him caution.

That day came a member of the constabulary to the village of Arayat, province of Pampanga, Luzon, Philippine Islands, and made his way through the cane to the nipa hut and asked Gregorio's mother many questions. He brought glad tidings. The half-bare boy playing at the door was a millionaire, over and over. And, for the woman, better than wealth, a daughter who had been as dead was living, across the sea.

So these two journeyed, by canoe and native cart and ship and train, and came at last to this land flowing with oil, the boy to be the central figure in a battle for millions which are claimed to be his, and his mother to be near the daughter who was lost and is found.

This true life story of Gregorio Valasquez Carmichael begins where began the true life story of Eusebia Dorothy Carmichael, which was told in these pages last April, but it goes on from where the story of Eusebia left off. For the poignant note in that other story, as you will remember, was the lost brother in the Philippines, still a child of poverty as she had been once, unaware of the wealth pouring from the oil wells to which he was heir.

Their Father Very Poor in Youth

Dugal Carmichael's youth was hard. He had been born to the poor life of pioneer days on the plains of Oklahoma. He went away to Montana. The Spanish-American War came on and he enlisted and went to the Philippines with F Company of the Thirty-fifth Regiment. He was honorably discharged there on Aug. 17, 1899, but elected to remain. He was employed at different times in various branches of the Government service.

Justa Valasquez was born in a tenant hut on the estate of Salvadore Alcala, far-spread about the village of Arayat. She was little more than a child when she went to Manila to visit and there met Carmichael. He wooed her and they were married in 1906 and went to live on the Alcala estate. Eusebia was born, and then Gregorio. Carmichael's health failed. The doctors told him he would have to go back to the States. He would take the tiny Eusebia with him and later he would send for Justa and the baby. It was all very uncertain, but such things come to the lot of a Filipino wife, when her husband is an Americano, and Justa did not complain.

Carmichael took Eusebia and went away to Manila. But both he and the child were taken sick there and were sent to the General Hospital. The man died there. It was in 1911. He was 33 years old. Eusebia was 3. After his death she was cared for by Michael Keoghan, an American with a Filipino wife. Three years later Keoghan brought her to her grandfather, John Carmichael, and her aunt, Mrs. Sarah Pettit, at Tonkawa, this county.

John Carmichael won a homestead when the Cherokee strip was opened and by toil and stint acquired another quarter section. One was in Kay County and one in Noble County. When he died, in April, 1917, that was the estate he left. Mrs. Pettit administered the estate, which was appraised at $8000. She set forth that the heirs were herself and Eusebia; whose name had been changed to Dorothy, and —— Carmichael, a grandson, who would be 7 years old if living, but whether he was living she was not advised. For Keoghan had told her about the infant Carmichael had left at Arayat. But when the estate was settled she told the Court she had made diligent inquiry through Government channels without finding the boy and she had become convinced that he was dead. And so, there being no objections, Mrs. Pettit and Dorothy were declared to be the sole and only heirs at law.

Then came the oil strike in the Tonkawa field and the Carmichael quarter-section in Noble County, with the richest wells in the field, reaching a peak production of 12,500 barrels a day, poured wealth into the laps of Mrs. Pettit and Dorothy.

New Inquiry Started by Lawyers

Nobody remembered that when John Carmichael's poor little $8000 estate was administered there had been talk about a grandson in the Philippines. But with the coming of oil there were leases and abstracts of title to be prepared and Carl F. Truitt, a lawyer and title examiner of Newkirk, came upon the record of the missing grandson. He was not convinced that the boy was dead. He wrote to the Bureau of Insular Affairs at Washington and a new inquiry was begun through Governor-General Wood of the Philippines.

MRS. MICHAEL KEOGHAN,

CARL F. TRUITT,

It was at that juncture that the true life story of Dorothy Carmichael was told in the Sunday Post-Dispatch. It gave Truitt material information which was obtained by the Post-Dispatch in Washington and it brought him additional information from many comrades of Carmichael, including the Captain and 35 members of F Company.

All this time Justa and her baby had been at Arayat. The woman waited for the letter that never came. She did not know that her husband had died and that her daughter had been cared for by the Keoghans, and after three years had been taken to America. They might both be dead for all that she knew. Or they had gone to America and forgotten her and the boy. The Filipino woman who has an Americano for a husband must expect such things.

It is a long and uninteresting story of how Truitt's emissary found Gregorio in the Philippines. It was almost a house-to-house canvas but he finally located Justa and her boy at Arayat. The lad's good fortune was explained to him and the mother and he were told to prepare for the trip to America.

A man in the secret service at Manila had as roommate an American named Cummings. He told Cummings about the boy at Arayat who was heir to millions in America. Cummings slipped away to Arayat. He told Justa it was all wrong about her having to take the boy to America. All that she had to do was go to Manila and claim it. What she needed was an American husband to look after things for her. If she would marry him he would take her to Manila and they could get the money and live happy ever after. Justa was confiding. She married the American and he had himself appointed guardian for the boy.

Leaves New American Husband

That was the situation when Attorney J. E. Curran of Blackwell, who had become associated with Truitt, arrived at Manila in October. Justa, disillusioned, left her new American husband and the Court revoked his appointment as guardian. Vincent Fabelle, a public accountant, graduate of the University of Chicago, was appointed guardian for the boy in the Philippines.

On this side of the water Attorney H. S. Gurley of Blackwell went to Newkirk and asked County Judge Roberson to appoint P. S. Mason, a Newkirk banker, as guardian here. Notice was given to Mrs. Pettit and Dorothy to show cause, if they chose, on a named date, why Mason should not be appointed. They did not appear and the appointment was made.

The guardian prepared to bring suit for one-fourth of the value of all the oil that had flown from the land of the boy's father since it was opened up, he not being a party to the lease that was executed by his aunt and sister.

The fight, then, is on for a quarter of all the wealth that has come from the Carmichael wells, with the power and resources of the Comar Oil Co., lessee of the oil rights, expected to be arrayed against the boy.

The lease is the usual one, with one-eighth of all the oil produced going to Mrs. Pettit and Dorothy as royalty. But the lease takes no account of the existence of Gregorio, nor his rights as an heir. He is not a party to the lease and has not surrendered his right to demand a full one-fourth of John Carmichael's estate, as the son of Dugal Carmichael.

It is the Noble County acreage that is oil-producing. It is fully proven ground and has been fully developed so far as two sands are concerned, the lowest at a depth of 2600 feet. A still deeper sand at 4400 feet has not been developed. The production to date has been about $5,000,000, of which $1,250,000 is claimed by the boy. The value of the holding, on the basis of past and prospective production, is placed at $10,000,000, with the boy claiming a quarter of that.

DOROTHY CARMICHAEL,
The daughter who was lost and has been found by her mother.

GREGORIO CARMICHAEL,
Who was a half-naked brown little islander a few weeks ago and is now well on his way to becoming a millionaire.

Wells Turn 3100 Barrels Daily

Flush production has passed. The present settled production is about 3100 barrels a day. Both production and price are low now, but both are expected to increase. When production was strong last spring, Dorothy's royalty was about $1500 a day, her aunt receiving the same, as the one-eighth royalty was divided equally between them. The boy's income for that period, if his claim is sustained, will be $6000 a day.

The mother of Dorothy and Gregorio cannot inherit any part of the Carmichael estate because the death of her husband was prior to that of his father. Under the law the property descends to his children and his children's children, that is, to his daughter, Mrs. Pettit, and the children of his son, Dorothy, whose heirship is recognized, and Gregorio, the claimant.

From Mrs. Pettit has come only one gesture of opposition to the boy's claim. On Nov. 20 she asked Judge Roberson for authorization to employ Attorneys W. M. Bowles of Perry and H. S. Burke of Newkirk to resist the claim, which, the petition stated, "she believes to be wholly without merit."

But this is no more than the caution that is due to protect Dorothy, her ward, and is only the action that it was expected she would take.

Mrs. Pettit opened the door of her bungalow at Tonkawa just a little way when I went there to inquire whether she would take Gregorio into her heart as she had taken Dorothy.

Aunt Insists on Proofs

"There is no son," she said. "The Government made an investigation for me and it found there was no son."

"Do you mean no son was born or that he died?"

"There is no son."

"But if the proof is complete?"

"The proof will have to be very strong."

"But if you are convinced that the boy is you brother's son will you accept him?"

Mrs. Pettit was in a flutter of distress.

"I cannot say," she said. "Just say that I refuse to make a statement."

Around Tonkawa they recall that it was a long time before Mrs. Pettit was convinced that Dorothy was her niece, but when she was convinced, she had the child brought to her and has been as a mother to her since. They say she is Scotch and obstinate, but a just woman, and they say that when she becomes convinced that the boy is her brother's son she will not resist his claim.

Dorothy is at the Women's College at Chickasha, in the southern part of the State, and is not encouraged to speak her mind, but her friends say she is more excited over the prospect of finding her mother and brother than ever she has been over the wealth that oil has brought to her. Mostly, they say, she has valued her fortune because it would enable her, when she finished school, to go to the Philippines and look for her mother.

When the President Madison sailed the middle of November from Manilla, Gregorio and his mother stood on the deck and saw their homeland sink below the horizon and turned their faces to the new world from which had come the husband and father and to which had gone daughter and sister and in which, in such strange fashion, fortune had come to a little family that had known only poverty and hardship.

They were not alone. With them, besides Attorney Curran, were seven Filipinos who are relied upon to help substantiate the boy's claim. For her own companion the woman had the widow of Michael Keoghan, a keen-eyed, kind-faced woman much older than Justa, who held in her arms Dorothy and Gregoria when they were born and cared for Dorothy after her father died. Cared for her so devotedly that when Keoghan, 10 years ago, was leaving to bring the child to America, Dorothy clung to her and was heart-broken over the separation.

She and others are expected to supplement the documentary proof of the marriage and the births of the children and the identity of the boy and his mother. And in charge of them, and acting as interpreter, is Fabelle, the guardian appointed at Manila.

The train was due at Newkirk at 8:13 Tuesday night and it was on time. In a cold, driving rain, the boy and his mother and the others stepped shivering from the train, at their journey's end. A little crowd had gathered to stare as the islanders were loaded into the four automobiles which Attorney Gurley had taken from Blackwell.

When, after breakfast, next morning, I handed the Filipino woman a photograph of Dorothy Carmichael she seized it eagerly and scanned it hungrily. Her fingers crept caressingly over the pictured face, pointing to features that were like the features of the baby she lost 13 years ago. She lingered longest about the smiling lips.

"The smile," she said, "is the smile of my Eusebia."

So this little mother who has come from the Nipa hut of Arayat rejoices that there is fortune beyond her power of comprehension for her son, whose fourteenth birthday is tomorrow, but she rejoices more that the daughter who was lost has been found.

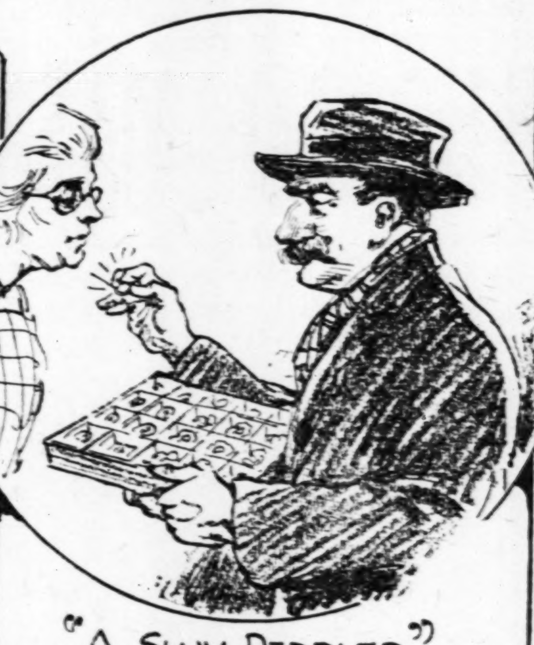
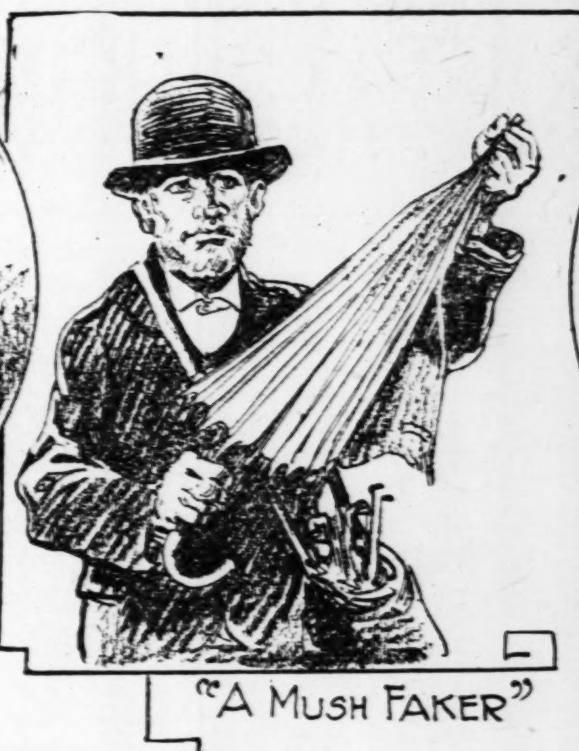
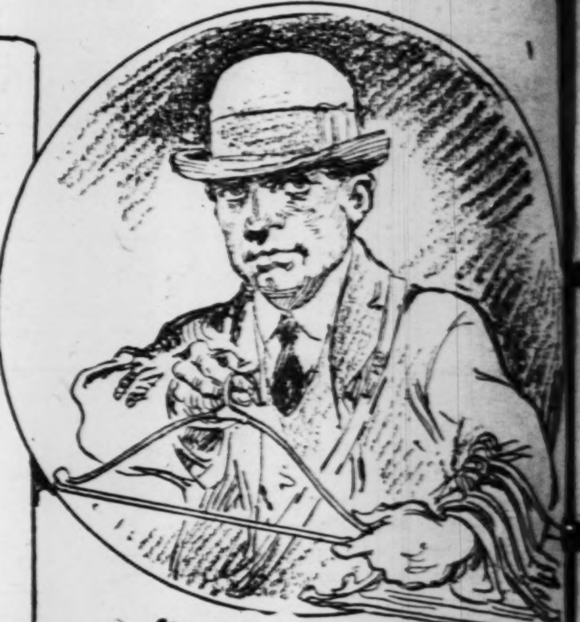
"RATS"



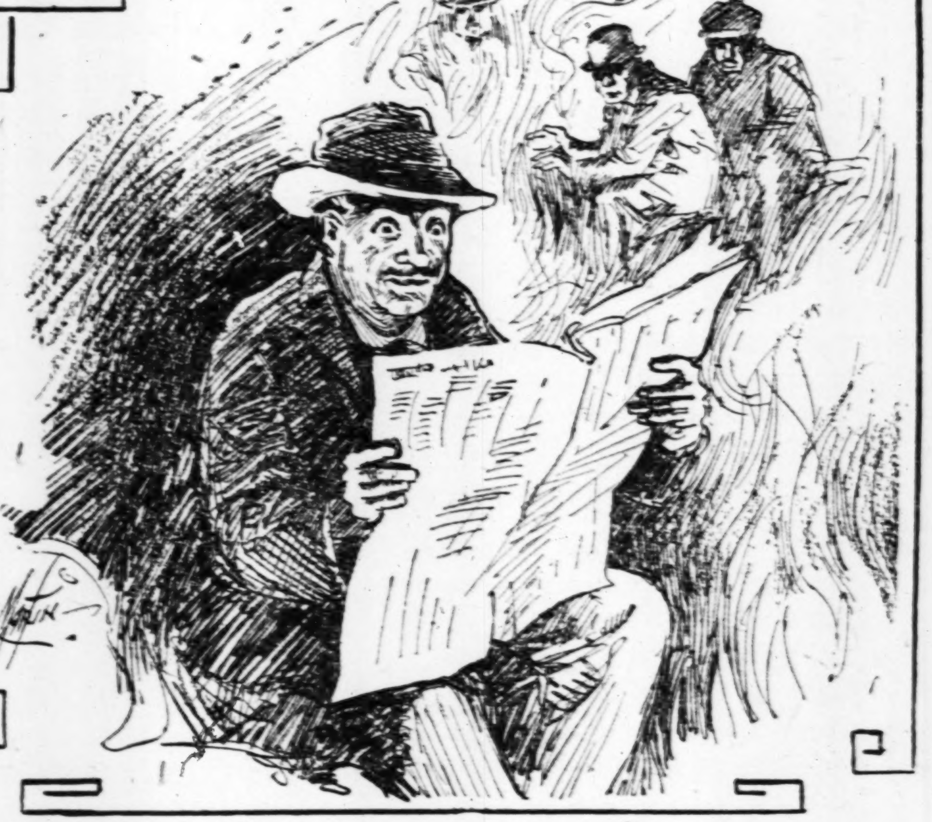
"A SLUM PEDDLER"



"A MUSH FAKER"



"A WIREMAN"



"A REGULAR GUY"

Not All "Yeggs" Are Bad but Some of Them Are the Worst of Criminals and, for Their Depredations Against Banks, Payrolls, Postoffices and Other Sources of Loot and Profit, They Maintain an Elaborate Organization Which Is Analyzed Here.

POSTOFFICE Inspector Ray Hitchcock of St. Louis headquarters, was able while investigating a series of postoffice safe blowings in Eastern Illinois to do a harmless personal favor for a convict with whom he came in contact and who was serving a "10-year stretch" for "activities" in that line. The convict had supplied him with valuable information in his quest and he was very glad to oblige him. Great was his surprise to receive through the mail shortly afterward a bulky manuscript, containing a complete study of the "yeggmen" together with a dictionary of their speech. The convict had reciprocated the favor in this way.

Numerous dictionaries of "thieves' argot" have been printed but Hitchcock says he knows of none so complete and illuminating as this one, in its revelations on manners and customs of these "higher up" or big game crooks. Because of this fact and the study of the yeggman in all his varieties it contains, Inspectator Hitchcock has turned the manuscript over to the Post-Dispatch so that its readers may know the yeggman and his ways, and, knowing him, may guard against him.

The manuscript does not go into detail concerning the classification of ordinary "stick up" men. Most of these, however, are not members of the higher orders of crookdom and are unacquainted with its argot. Many of them are negroes and negroes are never admitted to the more "select" crook organizations nor trusted with their secrets. Of the payroll robbers who in the last three years have taken nearly half a million dollars in 67 holdups in St. Louis and vicinity, are believed to have been engineered and carried out by "heavy men" or "peat men" temporarily diversifying their operations.

Lingo Peculiar to All Avocations

It is well known that virtually all professions, honorable or dishonorable, have their peculiar phrases of "shop talk" which as a rule can be used intelligently only by one thoroughly familiar with the profession they represent.

So it is among crooks who have their little expressions which are not intended for the prying ears of the uninitiated.

For instance, if "Milwaukee Brownie" in process of getting in the good graces of "Panhandle Charley" wishes to tip the latter off to some of the locality's disadvantages, he might discourse as follows:

"It's tough lamming on weeders in this burg. The gingers on the main drag have got brasses instead of hogeyes and screws are all to the punk. It takes a bozey with a Dutchman's weed stick to make a turnoff."

And if "Panhandle Charley" is all that Brownie thinks he ought to be in crookdom and has not been four flushing, he will understand that Brownie is telling him that it's hard running for thieves in this town as the storekeepers in the business district are using Yale locks instead of old-fashioned bolt locks, that skeleton keys are worthless and that it takes a yegg with a crowbar to get through a door.

Charley then will express, in profanity understood by all, his feelings about the "gingers" and possibly suggest that he and Brownie might "take a james and gap at the fakes in the hoopskirts if there are not too many harness bulls on the drill." Brownie, thereupon, having understood him to propose that they look over the residences in the suburbs with a view to using a "jimmy" unless there are too many policemen walking beats, will rest assured that Charles knows his stuff and is a full-fledged member of the brotherhood. He might then take under advisement the latter's proposal for the tour of exploration, or they might go down to the "bum dump" (saloon hangout) and talk the matter over in more detail.

Distinction Between Crooks

To begin with, crooks have their own ways of classifying themselves into groups of bad and worse crooks. Some are not even bad, as underworld standards go, but are just bluffers who like to talk and haven't the nerve to "pull a job." These latter do not enjoy the full confidence of their more desperate brothers and are not accepted on equal terms.

The first distinction, then, is drawn between "tramps" and "liners." "Tramps" embrace the more advanced stages of the affliction and "liners" merely first symptom cases. Under each heading follow numerous subdivisions, and each subdivision, in turn, has its various branches, each with peculiarities of its own.

Under "Tramps" come "Bozeys," "Bums," "Movers" and "People." All of these terms mean virtually the same thing, namely, "yeggs," but criminals, we are told, are sensitive about the term "yegg." It is in disrepute in all classes and is never used by a crook in the presence of other crooks except by the uninitiated. "Liners" include several types of "harmless" criminals but they will be considered later. The words, "bozeys," "movers" and "people" are guarded with the greatest secrecy and used only on matters of utmost importance. They are rarely spoken, but are understood by crooks to indicate that the user is a full-fledged "yegg." The term "bum" is used openly and means "tramp" or "yegg" but is understood by "liners" and ordinary citizens, or "yaps," to mean merely "hobo."

All criminals coming under these classifications, of course, are not engaged in the same style of marauding and as a rule each type sticks to his particular brand of crime. They are classified again as "Heavy Men," "Peat Men," "Jug Men," "Box Men," "Weeders," "Prowlers," "Panhandlers," "Rats," "Lump Bums," "Slum Peddlers," "Mush Fakers" and "Wire Men."

"Heavy men," or "heavy people," refers to those yeggs who are adept at blowing safes with nitroglycerine and who are usually to be found sticking close to their trade when liberty permits them to do so. They are held in deep respect by other men of their habits of life.

A "jug man" is about the same thing as a "heavy man," except that "jug men" make bank safes their specialty. They are the "heaviest" of the "heavy men," if magnitude of operations has anything to do with weight.

How the "Heavy Men" Work

The procedure usually is for a "heavy man" to send somebody else into a store or bank to scout for him and learn the location of the safe. Often the scout is a "mush faker" or a "panhandler." They look the situation over, or in crook argot "take gapins" and report to the "heavy man." The "getaway" is planned and after dark the "tribe" steals into town and pulls off the job. Some "marks" such as banks and store safes, are scouted and watched for years before they are actually robbed.

The "peat man," sometimes known as a "mechanic," is somewhat below the station in crookdom, of the "heavy man." He generally works as the "inside man" on safe jobs and rarely tackles banks, confining his activities to stores and postoffices where the hazards are not so great.

"Box man" is a term which in meaning overlaps that of "heavy man" and "peat man." He is supposed to be skilled both with the mechanical and explosive phases of safe opening.

"Weeders" are men engaged in systematically robbing stores which they enter by means of skeleton keys. These keys, or "screws," are carried by almost every man in the "profession." They will enable a thief to open any kind of lock except two kinds of Yale manufacture and are almost invariably found in complete sets. The "weeder" enters a store and carefully selects a few articles from each type of merchandise so that the loot is unlikely to be missed immediately and locks the door upon leaving, so as to leave no trace. He sells the spoils to some second-hand dealer, usually for a sum not exceeding $50, and goes to another "dump" to do the same thing over. It is a regular business with him.

"Prowlers" are house burglars, great and small, and include the ordinary garden variety of porch climber. However, the term refers particularly to the thief who doesn't resort to haphazard methods, but walks through the residence districts early each evening and picks out homes which are likely to be "marks" and then learns the habits of the occupants. When they go out to church or the theater he pays them a visit.

Lowest Order of Crookdom

"Panhandlers" and "lump bums" are crooks who will steal if they get a "cinch" opportunity, but haven't the nerve to take chances, and consequently are held in profound contempt by their more desperate associates. They spend their time begging on the streets or visiting back doors for "handouts."

"Rats" are box car thieves. The rat is described by other crooks as a "low-minded" fellow and usually a coward.

"Slum" peddlers are men engaged in selling phoney jewelry to suckers for genuine.

"Mush fakers" are itinerant umbrella repairers who use their craft as a means of gaining admittance to houses. Sometimes the umbrella fixer is a good "heavy man" looking for a "mark."

"Wire" men employ similar tactics, but usually peddle articles which they make of wire, such as coat hangers, for a stall.

All these types of criminals work together and keep each other informed of operations. Those who are not adept at stealing or safe blowing do the scouting and tip the others off to good prospects. All understand the crook lingo and guard its secrets.

Any citizen is termed a "yap" or "hoozier."

A banker is a "jugger."

A postmaster is an "obie man" and a postoffice an "obie."

Storekeepers are known as "gingers," and uniformed police as "harness bulls," while a plain clothesman is a "mug" or "dick." These are universal crook terms, known to petty thieves and yeggmen alike.

A safe is a "box" or a "peat" and a lock is a "clout."

All keys are termed "screws," while a tool such as a chisel or bar is a "jig" and a blacksmith shop is a "jig shop."

The disreputable implement known in police circles as a "jimmy" is dignified in crookdom by the more formal name of "james."

A pistol or gun is variably called a "rod," a "roscoe," a "betsy" or a "factory."

Suburbs Are Known as Hoopskirts

Nitroglycerine, that devastating concomitant of every "heavy man," is termed "grease," "midnight oil," "juice" or "soup," and dynamite is shortened to "dine" or "dino," while dynamite caps are "bonnets." Fuse is "string" and cartridges are "slugs." A flashlight is a "bug."

Even a schoolhouse has its place in the underworld dialect and is designated as a "knowley," a "box" or a "knowley box."

Clothes are "rags," a clothing store is a "raggery," or simply indicated by that ever ready word "dump." Shoes are "kicks" and trousers "strides," and "general" means general store.

The word "dump" comes in again with various prefixes to cover a multitude of sins. A "big dump" is a penitentiary which crooks do not enjoy talking about. A "chuck dump" is a grocery and a "bum dump" a saloon hangout, while an ordinary saloon which figures no farther in crime circles than violating the prohibition law is a "scatter."

Suburbs are "hoopskirts," streets are "stems" and a business street or district is "the drag." A calaboose is "the can."

A "turnoff" is a lock which can be unlocked and is also understood to indicate the act of gaining entrance to a locked house. "Slowed" means locked and "unslowed" unlocked. "Kipped" means slept in, as a store that is "kipped."

"Hack" is night watchman or simply the verb to watch. "Hacked" is watched. To "neck" or "gap" or "gander" or "take gapins" is to look, and to look with any eye for business.

"Bugged" means equipped with a wired burglar alarm. A door that is "brassed" has a Yale lock on it. A stamp is a "sticker," a bank is a "jug" or "big top," to walk is to "drill," "ham" or "poke," and to run is to "lam."

A railroad ticket is a "ducket" and to "grab a rattler" means to catch a train.

The term "fake" has usage almost as general and meanings as variable as "dump." It is loosely employed instead of "thing" to represent any object from a gun to a bank. A crook might be heard to say, "I am going down the drag to gap at a fake," meaning a safe, a bank or a store. By the command, "give me that fake," he might be understood to demand the surrender of a pistol or knife.

The Class Known as "Liners"

The abodes of real criminals are distinguished from those of "liners" and traveling workmen as "regular jungles," while the less formidable camps are known as "cat jungles."

This brings us back to the "liner" class. Just what are they beyond being "first symptom" criminals?

As a rule they constitute a harmless class of working men who shift about from one job to another, but try to cultivate the acquaintance of criminals and possibly pick up something now and then on the side. In the crook's book of ratings they are classified as follows:

"Circus liners"—men who follow shows and carnivals.

"Gandy dancers"—Railroad construction laborers.

"Shovel stiffs"—Railroad and public street workers.

"Skinners"—Teamsters, especially those employed on railroad and levee construction jobs.

"Working stiff"—Any working man.

Many of these are not criminals at all but earn their classification because of the associations they keep. They do not know the language of the criminals and are neither trusted nor respected by them. Criminals declare that it is easy to distinguish a working man from a tramp because the worker is more inclined to be sociable with strangers.

Criminals, or "tramps," we are told, are very exclusive persons, particularly about the company they keep, but nevertheless possessed of enormous curiosity about persons who try to associate with them. When a stranger comes into a "bum" camp and tries to be friendly nobody will talk to him until he is "recognized" by someone present or plays upon their curiosity until they seek him out.

"Don't Force Yourself on Them"

"If you want to get information by getting in with a gang of criminals," this man writes, "don't force yourself upon their attention, but let them speak first.

"If you are on the road (with a railroad construction gang for instance) the best way to gain admittance to bum camps is to walk up as if looking for somebody, say 'Hello,' look around and walk away. Next, go about 50 yards away and build a fire. Then pick up some wood and pretend to plant something in the ground. Act mysteriously about this for they will see you. Next sit down and read a paper and act as if you were at home. They will get used to seeing you and eventually begin to feel you out. Act cranky and mysterious at first and seem disinclined to talk, but don't forget to cuss the yaps. Take your time and don't get impatient. Remember that some people can never find out anything because they are too hasty. Don't be a four-flusher and talk too much. Don't wear distinguishing clothes, such as a white hat, brown suit or tan shoes. All these are recognized by crooks as markers for the It's hard to place a stranger seen in Bing wearing a blue serge suit, black hat, shoes and black tie and blue shirt. T sands might answer just such a descrip and crooks will trust you sooner if you h these earmarks of a crook."

The "Getaway" Is First Consider

As for safes, the manufacturers may h something about them that the man has o looked but it would be hard to tell what after casting an eye over the secrets ab them that he has divulged. He dissects t all, from "soft boxes" which take about t minutes to blow to atoms, to "screw kee which, he declares, are so stubborn that time between midnight and daylight is great enough to permit the number of shots required to tear them open. He ad however, that there is one type which the most weighty of "heavy men" and w is regularly passed over by them when t seek "box shooting" diversion. That is "ball" safe which can only be entered burning through the plates with an acety torch, a process which usually destroys w paper money there is inside and leaves robbers little reward for their trouble.

But it is useless to know how to blow sa so we are told, unless the robber knows h how to locate and "open up" his "ma and then make the getaway. That getaw is the all important detail that must not overlooked and no discreet safeblower overlook it. He considers it first in his pl and then "backs up," so to speak, on the of the operations.

In these days of motorized flight many these difficulties solve themselves, but gasoline equipment is not available the fu tive must resort to old-fashioned railro methods.

The robbing of country banks is dealt wi at length. Never less than five and usual six men are in these jobs. Two are "hea men" who look after the safe. If there a only five in the "party," two of them w stand guard at strategic points, ready to the alarm and, if need be, shoot to pro themselves. The fifth man will sit at t steering wheel of the automobile, with t engine running and ready to engage his clu for the flight. If six men are in the "part three of them will be on guard. We are assured that six men are usually taken. At a rate, one man, a crack driver, is always the steering wheel, ready to make the g away.

If motor conveniences are lacking t crook, in scouting for his "mark," usually l cates a nearby railroad crossing or wa tank, where all trains stop and when the j is done makes for it and boards a freig train on the line crossing the one runni through the town he is leaving behind. Whe day breaks he is usually out of the locali and he gets off and "plants" all his loot so to pass for a job-hunting workman if a rested.

In making a getaway, "bums" sometime employ a process known as "doping up." is a simple operation of changing scent t throw bloodhounds (pups) off the trail. A the dog picks up a scent on the inside of th building robbed, the thieves walk some distance away and rub onions or something wi a strong odor on their shoes. This is as fa as the original scent goes and the "pu are likely to stop.

This ex-criminal seems at a loss to fi words to express his contempt for bloo hounds and their owners, who, he says, l them as a money-making scheme.

"'Pups' may start in either direction," h declares, "and as likely as not are not follo ing any scent. They are only a fraud a are entirely unreliable. I have known th to go tearing along for 20 miles following railroad in the wrong direction. They a given very little exercise at the kennel a then when they are taken out to trail cri inals will keep on running, after they ha lost the scent, for the fun of the thing. Th owners of these 'pups' have little confid in them and for that reason always ma a fee in advance."

U.S. ARMY'S KNIGHT ERRANT WHO WENT TO GERMANY TO KIDNAP BERGDOLL

Lieut. Griffis Regarded Wealthy Draft Dodger's Escape as a Shameful Event Which He Would Rectify Result Was Foolhardy Attempt to Catch His Prey Off Guard and Which Resulted in His Own Failure, Capture and Sentence to Serve 18 Months—However, Incident Has Served to Show That Bergdoll Has Outstayed His Welcome and Public Is Tired of Entertaining a Man Who Wouldn't Fight for His Own Country.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HAMILTON, O., Dec. 22.

WHILE the spirit of Christmas cheer pervades this city, one little home in the outskirts is filled with grief. A gray-haired couple, living there, have withdrawn into seclusion to conceal their sorrow from their merrymaking townsmen. They expected their son to return from France for the holidays; instead, he lies in a prison cell in a German village.

The son is Lieut. Corliss Hooven Griffis, who, in a spirit of modern knight errantry, led into Germany the second of two expeditions by which it was planned to kidnap Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, notorious draft dodger, who escaped while serving a five-year sentence imposed by courtmartial. One of the companions of Lieut. Griffis was killed by Bergdoll, and all the party were arrested. The leader was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

Lieut. Griffis, who had served as an Intelligence Officer with the Eighty-third and Thirty-third Divisions in France, and who had come through many hairbreadth escapes without a scratch, made an impassioned defense before the German court, in which he made it clear that he had undertaken the enterprise on his own responsibility, out of motives of patriotism. The knight errant of the American Army bent on bringing to book one who had proved himself a craven and coward.

"One hundred million Americans," he declared, "know the damnable things committed by Bergdoll, who is American born, whose father was American born, and who betrayed his country in time of war.

"I know that I planned to violate the German as well as the French laws, but I did what I felt to be my duty. I failed. I have no regrets. A man like Bergdoll who will not stand with his own brother in an event of need is a traitor to man and God."

Judge Kurtzmann, the trial magistrate, appeared greatly impressed by the defendant's declaration that the man called in Bergdoll's stead, after the wealthy young Philadelphian refused to register for service, was killed while fighting in the Argonne. The Judge said it was quite clear that Bergdoll was a draft evader and should serve his sentence; adding that he had given due thought to the plea that Lieut. Griffis was actuated only by patriotism. But the method employed to capture the deserter, said the Judge, in passing sentence, violated the sovereignty of Germany.

Knight Goes Forth on His Deed

It was on the evening of Aug. 10 last that Lieut. Griffis and his companions undertook to execute the plot which they had been planning for months in Paris. Bergdoll, who had fled to Switzerland on a report that the United States Government was attempting to procure his extradition, had returned a few days before to the town of Eberbach, Baden, to meet his mother, Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, widow of a millionaire brewer in Philadelphia. She had traveled to Germany to rejoin her fugitive son, after she had been compelled to pay fines aggregating $28,000 for her own part and that of accomplices in engineering his escape by means of the famous $100,000 "pot of gold" ruse.

Bergdoll returned to his hotel, from which his mother was absent at the time, to find two men in his apartment. According to his story, they attempted to overpower and seize him. He snatched out a revolver, killed one man and wounded another. Others of the raiding party were arrested in a former United States Army automobile, which was waiting outside the hotel.

The man killed was identified as Karl Schmidt, a Swiss, and the one wounded was Karl Sperber, a Frenchman. Others in the party were Prince Faust Gagarin, a Russian; and Eugene Victor Nelson of Chicago. The sentences of Lieut. Griffis' companions ranged from three months for Nelson to 15 for Sperber.

The name of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll was particularly hated among the American soldiers who fought in the war, because it was felt that he had used his family's great wealth to escape military service. He and his brother, Erwin Rudolph Bergdoll, both fled when they were drafted, and evaded the authorities for more than two years. They were said to have declared they would never fight against Germany, and Grover in 1914 offered his services to Germany as an aviator, through the German Consul in Philadelphia.

Both of these wealthy youths had been the terror of the roads about Philadelphia because of their reckless motor driving. Erwin had taken part in automobile races, and Grover had been arrested many times for speeding. A story was told of how they overpowered, kidnaped and drove away with a policeman who attempted to arrest them for reckless driving.

Bergdoll's Pot of Gold Ruse

On Jan. 7, 1920, Grover was arrested in his mother's home, after Mrs. Bergdoll resisted secret service men with a revolver and blackjack. He was hiding in a window seat. He was delivered to the military at Governor's Island, N. Y. Despite his plea of insanity, a courtmartial, after a hearing of 10 days, sentenced him to five years of hard labor at Fort Jay.

Two months later, on May 21, Bergdoll escaped, thanks to a cleverly planned stratagem. Not long before, Mrs. Bergdoll had gone with her attorney to the United States Treasury and exchanged gold certificates for $105,000 in gold coin, which she conveyed to Philadelphia in an automobile.

At Right: Grover C. Bergdoll, notorious draft dodger.

ERWIN R. BERGDOLL,
Brother of Grover, who also evaded the military authorities for two years.

Bergdoll informed military officers at Fort Jay that he had hidden in the Maryland mountains a pot of gold containing $100,000. Only he himself, he declared, knew where the buried treasure was, and he asked permission to go and dig it up. There appeared to be something in the very words, "buried treasure," which appealed to the romantic spirit even of hard-headed army officers. They discovered the fact of Mrs. Bergdoll's gold transaction at the Treasury, and this seemed to them perfect confirmation of her son's tale.

In short, Bergdoll was sent to Philadelphia in the care of two army Sergeants, and lavished hospitality on them. He took them out motoring and to a burlesque show. On the morning of his escape he offered them gin, which one accepted, taking two drinks. They were in Mrs. Bergdoll's home. The telephone in an adjoining room rang, and Bergdoll said he would answer the call. He went out, passed swiftly through the house saying good-by to his grandmother, jumped in an automobile in which his chauffeur, a native of Germany named Isaac Stecher, was waiting, and vanished.

After a bit one of the Sergeants noticed that the telephone was still ringing, and the escape was detected. The Sergeant was with difficulty prevented from killing himself. However, a military court later exonerated all of the officers and the Sergeants implicated in the case. But a Federal Grand Jury in Philadelphia indicted eight persons, including Mrs. Bergdoll, her son, Charles A. Braun, who said he had changed his name because of the notoriety cast upon it by Grover's escapades; James E. Romig, an attorney, and two others. The trial resulted in the imposition of $28,000 in fines, which Mrs. Bergdoll paid.

Brother of Draft Evader Surrenders

On July 21, when the hue and cry after Grover Bergdoll was in full swing, and false reports of his arrest were coming from many remote parts of the country, his brother Erwin startled the authorities at Governor's Island by walking into headquarters and giving himself up. He was sentenced to serve four years of hard labor at Leavenworth, and completed the term, minus commutation for good behavior, last June.

"Castle Bergdoll," the palatial Philadelphia home of the notorious family where Grover escaped from two army Saregnts who were guarding him. The home was seized with the rest of the Bergdoll holdings, totaling $500,000 or more, by the Alien Property Custodian.

Six months passed, and then it became known that Grover Bergdoll had succeeded in making his way to Germany. He was located at Eberbach with his chauffeur, Stecher, and gave out a press interview telling the method by which he outwitted the secret service men who were trying to recapture him. He had been informed, he said, that he could buy his freedom for $100,000.

After leaving his mother's house, Bergdoll related, he and Stecher drove to Baltimore, and then in succession to Gettysburg, Chambersburg, Pittsburg, Wheeling, Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis and Chicago. On the way they bought Indiana automobile license plates from a junk dealer driving a Ford. From Chicago they drove to Milwaukee, Minneapolis and St. Paul, reaching the Canadian border at St. Vincent, Minn. They started to walk across the border, but two men in a Ford gave them a lift to Emerson, Canada. They had to abandon their automobile and baggage on the American side.

Traveling on foot, in hired cars and by railroad, they reached Winnipeg, and tried various steamship companies in an effort to get passports to Europe. After two weeks, one company obtained passports for them. Both represented themselves as British subjects. Bergdoll assumed the name of George Charles Riggs and Stecher that of Frank Jeremiah Johnson. The fugitives traveled by rail to Montreal, where their passports were vised by the Swedish, Swiss and Belgian Consuls. They took ship at Quebec for Liverpool.

After a visit of four days in London, they crossed the Channel to Holland, and from that country entered Germany. They went there. Scarcely had the fact of Bergdoll's to Eberbach because Bergdoll had relatives presence in Eberbach become known, when the first attempt was made to bring him back into the clutches of American justice.

According to the story, Bergdoll and Stecher, because of their adventures, had become social lions in the small South German town. They were invited to a wedding on Jan. 27, and drove to the station to meet another guest. Bergdoll remained alone in the machine.

Suddenly an automobile containing several men drew alongside. The occupants jumped out and surrounded the runaway, one of them thrusting a revolver against his breast. Bergdoll's companions returned at that moment and got into his car. According to his account, he knocked aside the pistol which was pointed at him, while cranking the car with his other hand. He jumped in and drove away, pursued by shots, one of which wounded a young German woman in the hand.

General Allen Tells of Case

The raiders were arrested by the police, and two Americans, Carl Naef and Frank Zimmer, who were connected with the American Intelligence in Coblenz, but who declared they were acting in the enterprise as free lances, were sentenced by a German court respectively to 15 and six months in prison. Eight days after sentence was passed, the Americans were released, owing to stringent pressure brought upon Berlin by Maj.-Gen. Henry T. Allen, commander of the American Army of Occupation in Germany, who acted by order of the War Department. In his book, "My Rhineland Journal," Gen. Allen, under date of Jan. 29, 1921, made the following entry:

MRS. EMMA C. BERGDOLL,
Mother of Grover and Erwin, who was indicted on a charge of aiding her sons to escape and was fined $28,000.

"The Bergdoll case is to the fore now. I have been adjusting the differences between the Chief of Staff, the Chief of Police and the chief of G-2 in connection with this matter. I directed Col. Stone to see Herr von Starck and tell him that I very deeply regretted the action of my agents of the Department of Criminal Investigation and apologized both to the Central Government and to the Baden authorities. He was also instructed to request that these men be turned over to me for discipline.

"A mistake was committed between my Chief of Staff and headquarters commandant, due largely to Bagby's absence and mine and to an excessive desire on the part of some of my agents to capture Bergdoll. Of course these agents should not have been authorized to go into unoccupied Germany and make arrests. Such an act is wholly at variance with our previous policy and inconsistent with a proper appreciation of German sovereignty over her unoccupied territory. 'In the past my agents have been sent into Germany to take over offenders only after their arrest by German authorities, and that should have been the policy in this case."

Despite his apology to both the Berlin and Baden Governments, Gen. Allen pressed his demand for the release of the Americans with such energy that it followed virtually at once. The attack upon Bergdoll and Stecher, however, made them popular heroes in South Germany, and it appeared as if the entire population were ready to rally to the defense of the fugitive. At the trial of Lieut. Griffis, the prosecutor, after denouncing the introduction of "Wild West" methods in Germany, declared that the American and his party were extremely lucky to escape lynching, and that they owed their lives to the Eberbach police.

LIEUT. CORLISS H. GRIFFIS,
American army officer, who has just been sentenced by a German court to 18 months in prison for his attempt to kidnap Bergdoll.

After the raid led by Naef and Zimmer, Bergdoll, under his own signature, cabled from Eberbach as follows to the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

"We captured six Department of Justice agents and threw them into prison. We are safe and sound. See the Associated Press report."

Congress Investigates Bergdoll's Escape

The attempt to recapture Bergdoll once more brought his case into the light throughout the United States, and there was general indignation over the sentencing of the Americans. This resulted in an investigation, in the House of Representatives, of Bergdoll's escape from Fort Jay. The State Department also made efforts to persuade Great Britain and then Canada to demand Bergdoll's extradition from Germany on the ground that he had escaped by means of a forged Canadian passport. These countries finally declined to act. By order of the President, the Alien Property Custodian seized Grover Bergdoll's estate in this country, amounting to $750,000, and the House Committee made determined efforts, though in vain, to get its hands upon the $100,000 "pot of gold." Mrs. Bergdoll defiantly replied that the money was her own, and that Grover had never received a dollar of the hidden gold.

During the Congressional hearing, such high military officials as the Secretary of War and Gen. March declared emphatically it was proposed to recapture Bergdoll "at any price and by any means." Such declarations, together with the vigorous action of the Government in obtaining the release of Naef and Zimmer, were probably not lost on adventurous young men like Lieut. Griffis. He knew that the man who succeeded in bringing the defiant deserter to justice might be punished for state reasons, but that he would become a national hero.

Yet it must be confessed that Bergdoll remains victorious in his long battle with the United States Government. From the time he was drafted until more than two years after the Armistice, the deserter successfully concealed himself from an army of secret service men, and thus escaped any possibility of active service. Even when arrested and sentenced, he hoodwinked the army officers with a cock-and-bull story of a "pot of gold," and triumphantly made his way to Germany. Two forays designed to recapture him failed ignominiously, and he killed one of his would-be captors.

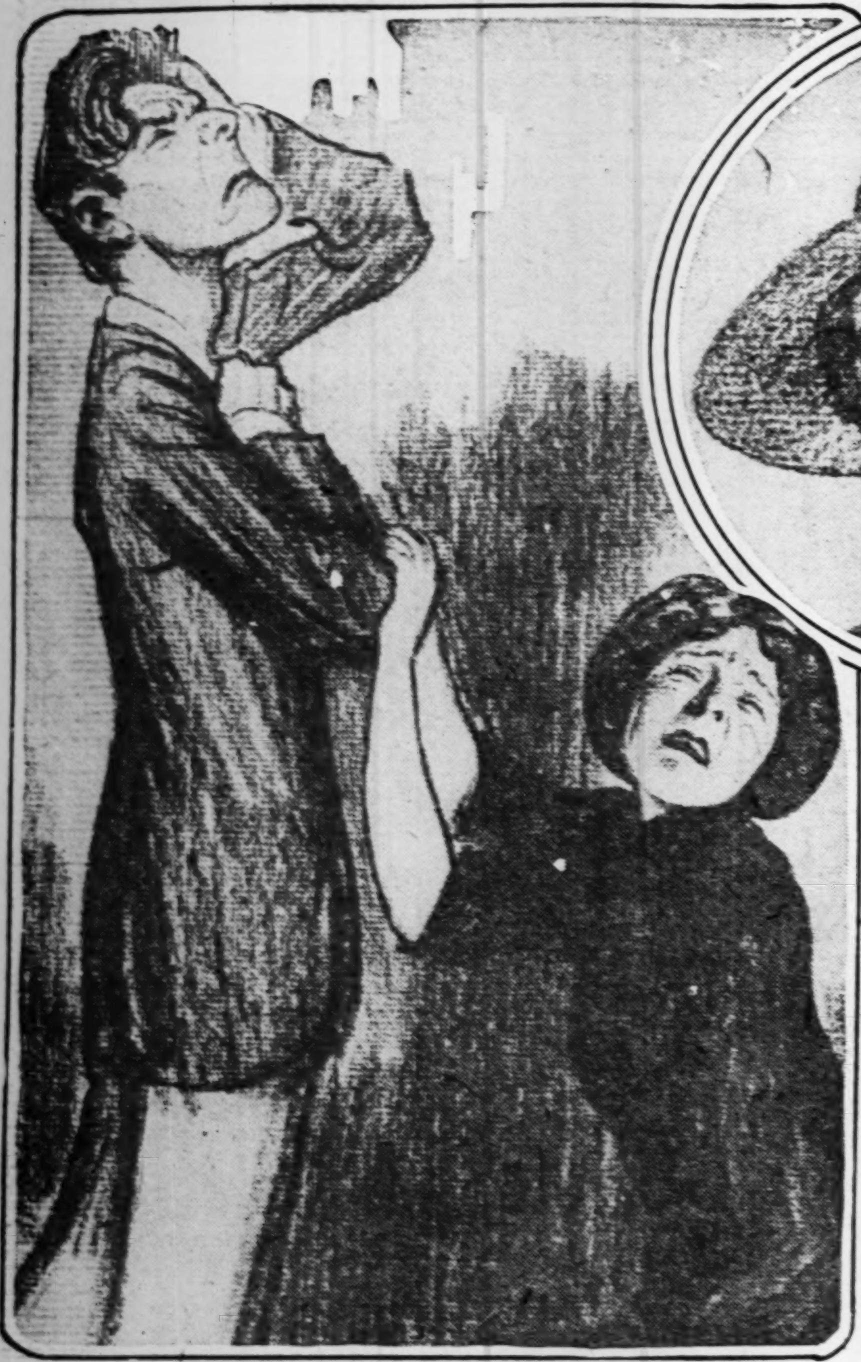
Bergdoll remains free and rich, and his mother stands by him. Lieut. Griffis languishes in prison, and his parents mourn for him in their loneliness and poverty. As for the whereabouts of the gold which Mrs. Bergdoll withdrew from the United States Treasury, not all the menaces of grand juries and House committees were able to extract from Mrs. Bergdoll the slightest intimation concerning its whereabouts.

"It's none of the Government's business," was her invariable reply.

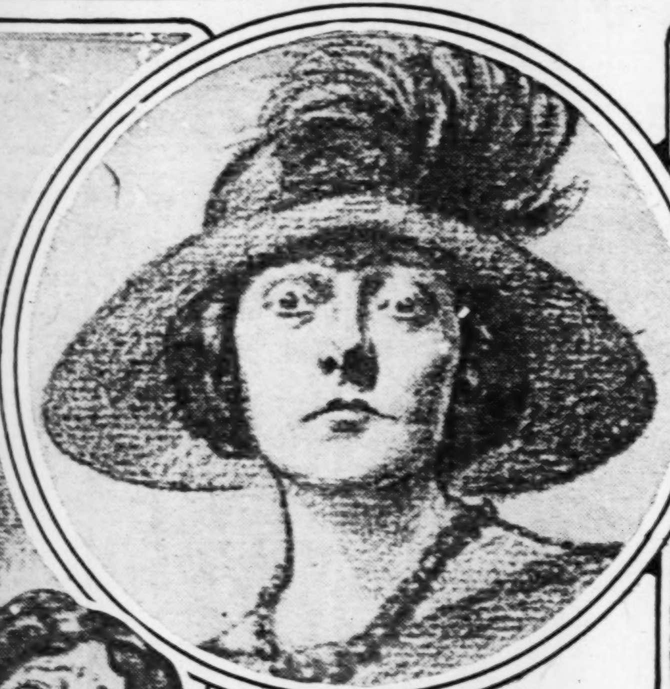
THE IBSEN MATINEE

(Copyright, 1923.)

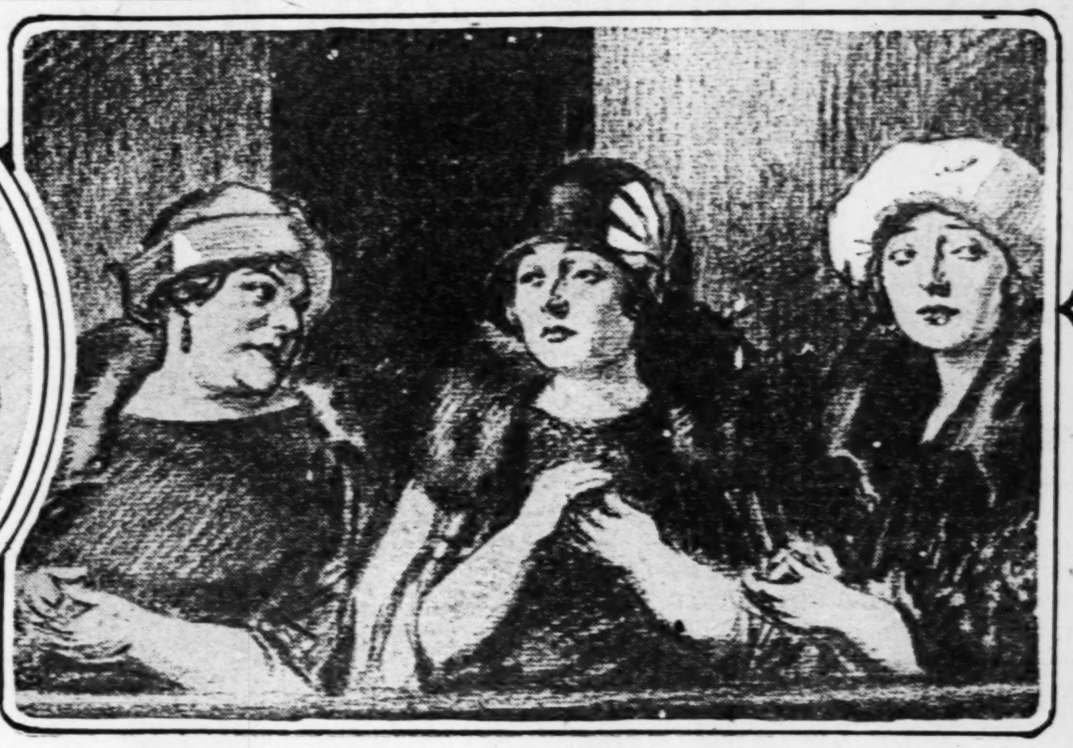
Drawn by W. E. Hill for the Sunday Post-Dispatch



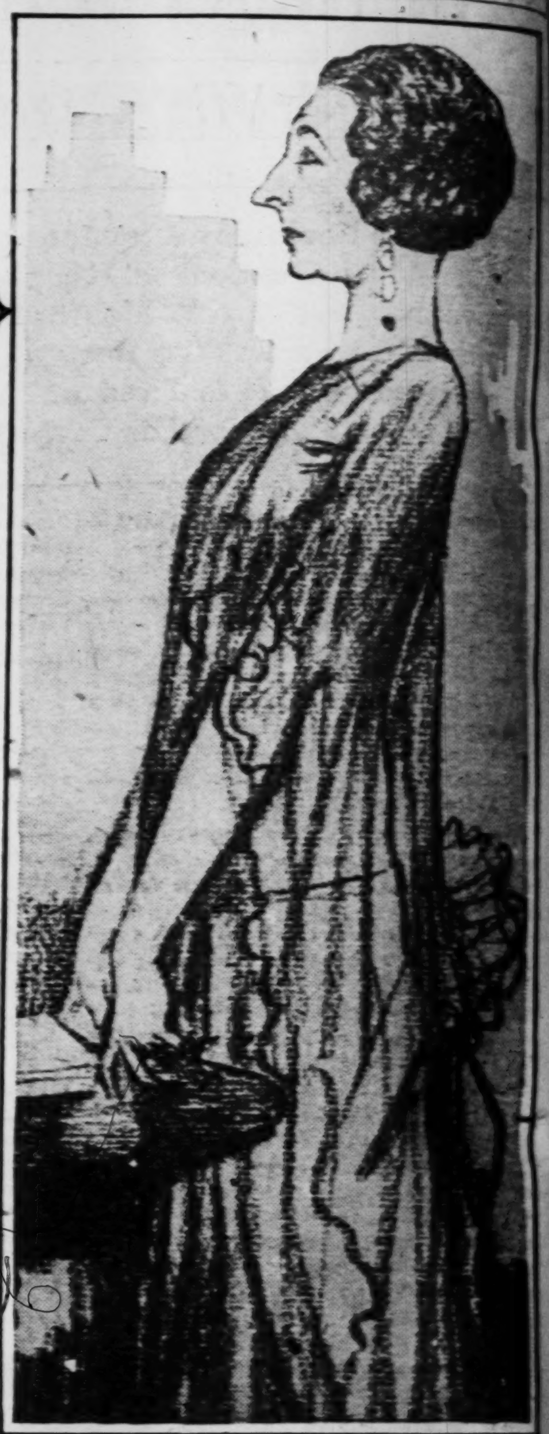
The scene from Mr. Ibsen's "Ghosts," in which Oswald, in glowing terms, informs his mother that madness is ahead of him.



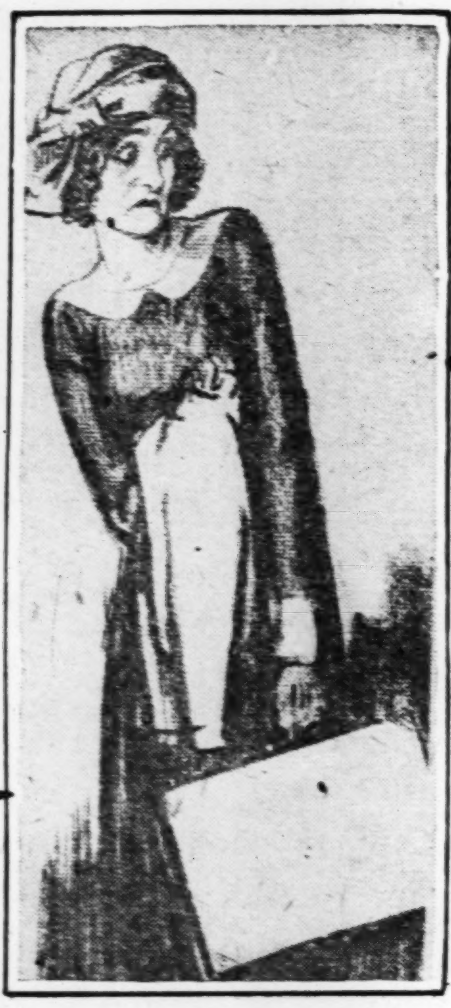
Member of a suburban little theater movement looking over the performance with a view to a really good little theater production of the play.



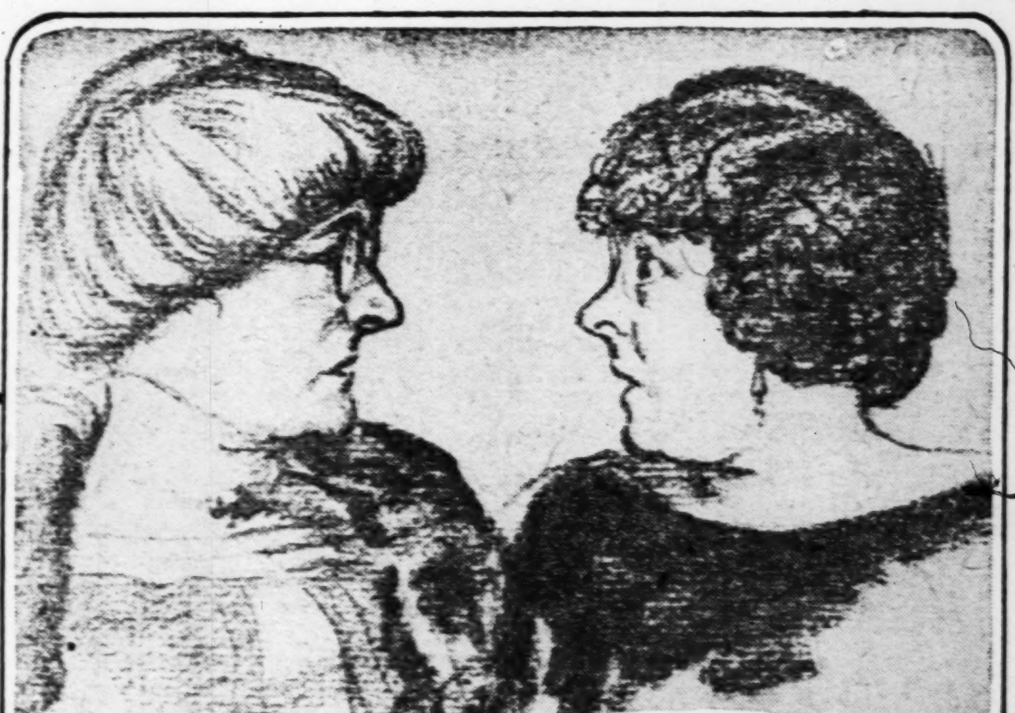
Three professional friends of the leading lady applauding generously, but not too generously, after her big scene.



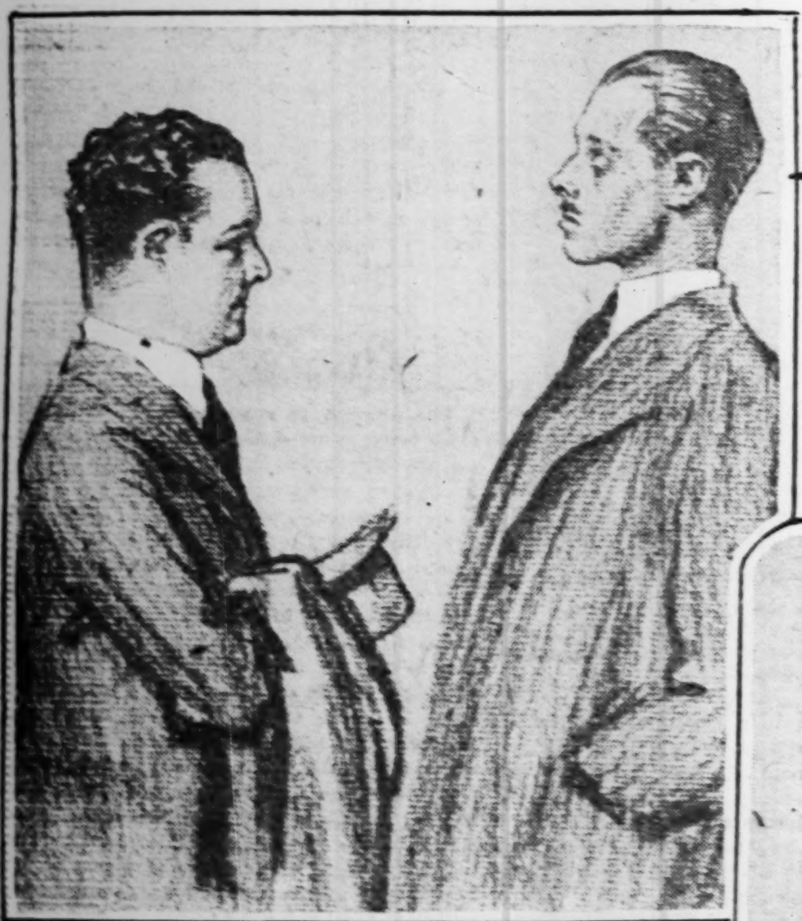
That little rascal, Hedda Gabler, planning a nasty trick to play on someone.



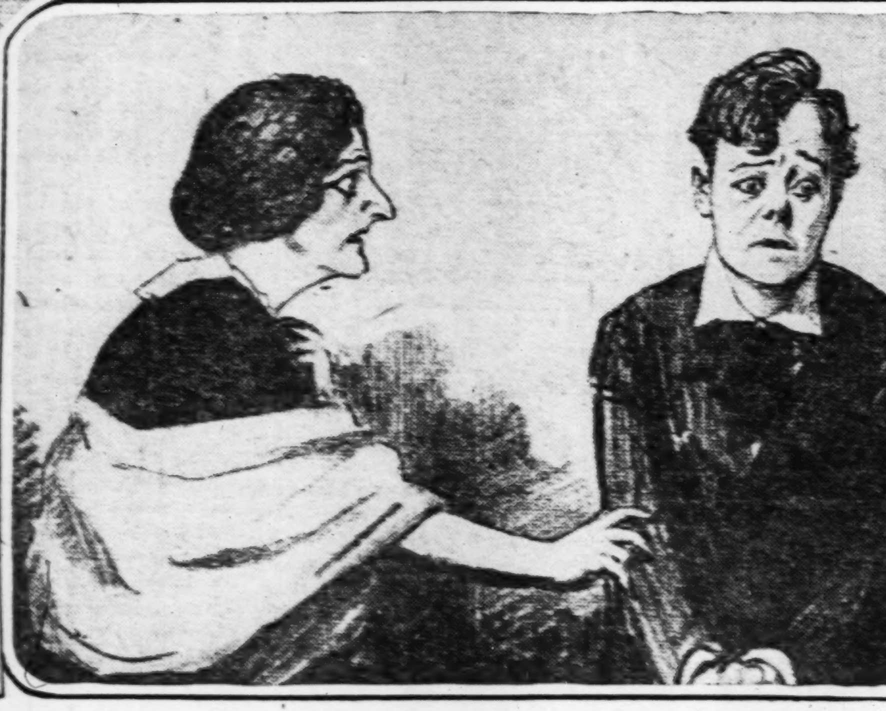
Nora, the doll in "The Doll's House," about to leave home and husband, bed and board, for the open places.



Between the acts, showing Mrs. Tuppen and her dear friend Mrs. Dropling talking over an operation for gall stones.



"Such soul! Such soul!" is the consensus of opinion expressed by the young men who turn out for the special matinee performance.



Oswald, in "Ghosts," asks plaintively for the sun to play with Two out-of-town visitors, who have happened in quite by accident. They thought, of course, it was a movie and are pleased beyond words with the result.

The air is heavy, and the performance likewise, therefore the second assistant dramatic critic slumbers peacefully through the Ibsen drama. He will go back to the office and write briefly that the actors showed entire lack of originality and merit.

VICTOR HOLM, founder of the Independent Salon in St. Louis, has commenced an issue which will definitely decide an important question among local artists. For a good many years the artists have more or less loudly voiced their dissatisfaction with the jury systems of the two annual open competitive exhibits in the city, and for this reason an opportunity is being given them to form an exhibition as they see fit, every artist being his own jury and subject to no limitations except possibly that of size.

For his committee to arrange the Independent Salon, Mr. Holm has purposely chosen the recent prize winners at the Artists' Guild in order to prevent the possibility of this movement being construed as antagonistic to the organized art societies. Kathryn Cherry, T. P. Barnett, William Bauer, Robert Kissack and William Schevill, therefore, comprise this committee of which Mr. Holm is chairman, and will do their utmost to encourage any independent artist to present his work for public inspection and criticism.

AT this time of writing, it is difficult to foretell the outcome of the show. If it is a success—if the artists evince enthusiasm in contributing their good examples of painting, sculpture and crafts, and if it is representative of the best the local artists are doing, it will mean a complete conquest over the jury system. Then they will have been justified in lamenting some of their sorry fates received at the hands of juries in the past. Also, they will be influenced in their decisions as to what to submit to juries in the future.

But if the Independent Salon results in being the dumping ground for the left-overs from the Thumb Box, the Museum's American Show and the Artists' Guild Open Competitive Exhibit, it is going to prove the continued necessity of the very juries for which the artists have oftimes professed such skepticism.

So now it is up to the artists to make good the foundation of their grievance, or forever abide by the established rule of jury systems.

The new Salon, as founded by Victor Holm, is being sponsored by the St. Louis Art League in whose galleries the exhibit is being held. In all probabilities this show will become one of the annual events of the League and will be anticipated by the artists as one of the leading dates on their exhibition calendars.

SIXTEEN wood cuts by Sheila Burlingame which comprise the beautiful illustrations for Harry Burke's book of his "Day's Journeys" are on exhibition in the Art Department of the Public Library. In each print, the lines are soft yet clear, and show how beautifully the block was cut. Aside from the artistry in the actual craftsmanship, the most outstanding feature of the group as a whole is Mrs. Burlingame's sense of composition. Her ideas of ararngement amount almost to an instinct. Her work in this instance is highly commendable.

A FRANK BRANGWYN "Venetian Market Scene," no display at the Kocian Gallery, is one of the most important paintings being shown in the city at this time. The picture is a 40 by 50 upright and is filled with the rich, Oriental charm of intense color and powerful technique that distinguishes a Brangwyn from all other pictures in the world.

The justification of the comparison of a Brangwyn to an Oriental rug could not be shown more clearly than in this "Venetian Market Scene." Thoughtful study and examination of the picture reveals an interweaving of motifs to form a gorgeous and harmonious whole. Small minor groups of figures, complete unto themselves, and separate patches of individual beauty are all united into a symphonic ensemble. The handling of brilliant light on brilliant color in the sails of the ships and on the distant buildings beside the canal focus attention to the feeling of warm Southern sunlight. Solidity and force are subtly molded into the picture just as light and air are of vital importance. Great, free slashes of paint give power to not only the rocking boats, but to the figures which bend above the fruit baskets they lift.

ST. LOUIS is extremely fortunate in securing this painting for public exhibition. It is certainly a picture that should never leave the city.

A number of the Brangwyn sketches for his decorations for the Jefferson City Capitol buildings are expected to arrive here for display at Kocian's within the next few weeks. Several of these preliminary sketches have already been sold by the artist to collectors in England, and for this reason the set will not be complete.

The "Venetian Market Scene" will be on display during the coming week or 10 days.

A LIST of illustrations including the reproductions of T. P. Barnett's painting, "Bound Out," Walter Rousseff's mural, "The Exodus," a portrait by Kaijiwara, Fred Carpenter's "Midsummer Day" and Nancy Coonsman Hahn's "Turtle Girl," give promise of an interesting issue of the new St. Louis art magazine, "The Nucleus," which will appear Jan. 15.

Especial care is being given by the editor to the make-up of the second issue, which will have but little similarity to the first. It will be printed on antique, deckle-edged paper. It is assured that in this magazine the art of typography will receive a place as important as that accorded other phases of craftsmanship.

In addition to the reproductions of local artists' works, four etchings by Eric Goldberg, a Chicago artist, belonging to Dr. Lippman, will be among the illustrations.

FIVE little pictures by Fred Roe are on view at Kocian's at present. Three of these are of his gypsy camp subjects for which the artist is best known. The other two are imaginative flights in color and atmospheric effect. Experiments of this sort are going to result in an interesting addition to Mr. Roe's subject repertoire.

FIGHT IN BEHALF OF BOY ENDED BY DEPORTATION

Congressman Who Sponsored Cause of Joseph Pfer Assails Immigration Bureau's Action.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Representative Everett Kent of Pennsylvania, who has sponsored the cause of Joseph Pfer, 20-year-old stowaway deported to Hungary Dec. 11, although he had lived in the country 16 years, today declared that the Immigration Bureau had acted without "sympathy and humanity" when it shipped the boy back to Europe without notifying his friends.

"Now that the boy is gone, there is nothing I can do to get him back," said Kent. "I thought that he was still here, and, acting on this information, I believed an exception might be made because of the extenuating circumstances. I understood that he would be returned if at all on the ship which brought him, but the bureau without notice has sent him on an Italian ship to Genoa, where he will probably be turned over to the Hungarian Consul.

"The Department of Labor says that he can return with the Hungarian immigrants, if he has a passport, but he has tried to obtain one for two years and failed because he is of military age.

"If the boy were here," he continued, "we might do something, but the immigration officials, with their perfunctory hearings and unreported actions, have barred that way. I could not defend a bill in the House asking that all passport requirements be waived for the legal arguments against the boy are too strong. I could appeal only to human sympathy and ethics."

Christmas Brings To Society Most Brilliant Season

Party Planned by Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Faust and Miss Audrey Faust to Be a Christmas Day Feature—Colonial Ball Last Night for Miss Elizabeth Thatcher.

CHRISTMAS, chief of festivals the world over, recurs on Tuesday, and its spirit, vital to society, resolves itself into a whirl of gayety. Parties of all kinds crowd the hours in an effort to entertain to the utmost young men and women home from college and the debutantes, as well as their elders, and the socially prominent will not have time to pause for breath, between the luncheons, teas and balls which fill the calendar until after the New Year.

Between 4 and 7 o'clock every afternoon, hundreds of motor cars wend their way about St. Louis, carrying their charges to tea dances, one of the most popular forms of entertainment during the Yuletide season, only to return possibly to the same clubs in the evening for dances. A mere glance at the social calendar, printed elsewhere in this section, will tell one that it is an unusually brilliant season.

Christmas day itself has only three parties of any size, most families preferring family parties. The gayest, perhaps, will be the reception given in the afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust and their daughter, Miss Audrey. Five debutantes—Misses Mary Christy Tiffany, Rachel Lee Cuendet, Grace Whitelaw Wallace, Lucy Terry and Frances Collins—have been asked to receive with the hosts, and a large number of guests will attend between 5 and 7 o'clock. The Faust home, especially the ball room, where the receiving line is to stand, will be adorned with holly and poinsettias, and pinetrees, hung

Harvard Glee Club Concert a Holiday Event

University Organization to Be Heard at the Odeon Thursday Evening; Choral Members to Be Entertained at Luncheon and Shown the City by Motor.

A MOST interesting social event of the holiday season, both to music lovers and those to whom music appeals merely as a pleasant diversion, will be the appearance here of the Harvard University Glee Club in concert at the Odeon, Thursday evening. The club, or chorus, as it is known, is credited with being the leading male choral organization in America, and is making its first appearance here in two years, under the auspices of the local Harvard Club.

The men will arrive in St. Louis, Thursday morning, and at noon an informal luncheon of which Charles H. Morrill is chairman, will be given for them at the University Club. In addition to Harvard Club members, the guests will include 20 undergraduates from the university home for the holidays and boys from the Country Day and various high schools who plan to matriculate at Harvard.

In the afternoon a committee headed by Charles Stix will motor the Glee Club members about St. Louis, returning to the University Club for dinner. Due to the strenuous trip, and the fact that they will depart immediately after the concert, there will be no dance for the men.

Society, however, has taken advantage of the opportunity to give concert parties that evening for the college men and women home for Christmas, and not a few of the debutantes will have guests. Miss Louise Bemis plans such an affair for William Parker of Newton Center, Mass., who will be a guest at the Bemis home this week, and Miss Barbara Bay, home from Miss Bennett's School, will be honoree at a similar party given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield Bay.

Humphrey Gifford, chairman for the concert boxes, stated yesterday that those who had reserved boxes were. Mr. and Mrs. G. Pantaleoni, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. D. Meier, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Swarts, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Perkins, Mrs. George Steedman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Markham, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mallinckrodt Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stix, Mr. and Mrs. George Hitchcock, Mr. William Fordyce, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Simpkins, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fordyce, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lumaghi, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKittrick Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore Dr. and Mrs. John Green Jr., Mrs. John A. Haskell, Dr. and Mrs. Archer O'Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. John Holliday, Mr. Paul Kendall, Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Gifford, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Fischel, Mr. Edward Harrison and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pettus.

The chorus has built up its enviable artistic reputation in the past four years. Prior to 1919 it differed little from the average college glee club, singing college songs of the light type, and making tours now and then which were little more than social junketing trips. In 1919, under the guidance of Dr. Archibald T. Davison, director, the chorus undertook the experiment of singing first-rate music, classical and modern, and since then it has won wide recognition.

In 1921 the French Government invited the chorus to visit Europe, and a tour was made of France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany. This tour was notable because the chorus was received everywhere by official personages and eminent musicians. In Paris three concerts with glittering Christmas tinsil and gilt will add to the scene.

Later in the evening, the guests will attend Mr. and Mrs. John Leigh Green's dance for Miss Janet Collins at Hotel Chase, while at the same time the school set will motor to the St. Louis Country Club, where Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Love will entertain at a dinner dance for their daughter, Miss Martha. In the morning, Mr. and Mrs. Charles White Scudder will follow their annual custom of having a group of friends call informally at their Vandeventer place home. The Christmas morning reception is a charming old custom, rapidly losing favor and being replaced by the New Year's day parties which have been in vogue for years.

A bit of the picturesque was introduced into last night's entertaining at "Glen Owen," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hudson Thatcher in Ferguson, when they gave a colonial ball for their daughter, Miss Elizabeth. The Thatcher home is of the typical old Southern colonial type, and lent itself to the atmosphere of other days. Waxen tapers lighted the library, where the hosts, Mrs. Marie Reine Fusz de Penaloza and four young women—Miss Thatcher, and her guests, Misses Anne Riordan and Dorothy Conway, and Miss Henriette de Penaloza, were in the receiving line. The debutante was gowned in white satin and lace, parts of which had been worn by both her grandmothers. There was a tight bodice with lace berthas and full skirt, and over her shoulders fell a long satin court train.

About the rooms, holly and mistletoe were used in decorating, with chrysanthemums and poinsettias making a bower for the receiving party. About 150 guests attended.

What Are Christmas Flowergrams?

Flowergram means a telegraphic delivery of flowers to another city.

This is made possible through the agency of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, a bonded organization of the leading florists in each city of the U. S. and Canada.

If you wish to send flowers to an out-of-town friend, simply make your selection at our store and we will telegraph your order to a member of the F. T. D. in the city in which your friend lives.

Flowers of precisely the same variety and quality as you select here will be delivered within a few hours. The price is the same as for local delivery, plus the cost of the telegram.

Flowergrams offer a delightful solution for the problem of a Christmas remembrance for out-of-town friends.

WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS ANNOUNCED

Romance played a conspicuous part in the social news of last week. Hardly a day but what brought news of one or more engagements. On Monday, Miss Julia Hunt Lee, daughter of Mrs. Henry Turner Lee and the late Mr. Lee, told of her betrothal to Stanley Moon of Hotel Chase, brother of Mrs. Stewart McDonald. The announcement was made at a luncheon given at Hotel Chase by Miss Katherine Brashear in honor of Miss Katherine Hart of Texas, Miss Lee's guest. Miss Lee is a graduate of the Sacred Heart Convent at Maryville and the Georgetown Convent at Washington, D. C. She made her debut two years ago and is a member of the Imperial and Junior League. Mr. Moon is a graduate of Westminster College and served in the navy during the war.

The engagement of Miss Doris Drummond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Drummond of 5339 Pershing avenue, and Alonzo C. Church Jr., son of Mrs. Rolla Wells, and the late Alonzo C. Church, was announced Tuesday when Miss Drummond's aunt, Mrs. Eugene R. Cuendet, entertained several friends at a luncheon. Miss Drummond is a graduate of Sacred Heart Convent, Eden Hall, Torresdale, Pa. She made her bow to society three years ago. She is a member of the Junior League. The wedding will take place in the spring. Mr. Church is a member of several clubs.

Another Tuesday engagement was that of Miss Mary Elizabeth Edwards, daughter of Mrs. George Lane Edwards, and Robert Blackwell Whittemore III, which Miss Lauralouise Price announced at a luncheon at the Price home. Miss Edwards, educated at Mary Institute and Science Hill School, Shelbyville, Ky., is a debutante this year and a member of the Junior League.

Wednesday, Miss Eleanor Stanard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Stanard of Brentmoor, gave a tea for her sister, Mrs. Joseph R. Brown, formerly of Dallas, Tex., at which she told her friends of her engagement to Lansden McCandless, son of Dr. and Mrs. William A. McCandless. Miss Stanard is a debutante of four years ago, and is actively interested in the Junior League. She completed her education at Finch School in New York. Mr. McCandless attended Princeton University, and served in the navy during the war.

Thursday, announcement was made in St. Louis, New York and California, of the engagement of Miss Mary Keck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Keck of Orange, N. J., and East Hampton, L. I., and George Drake Scott, son of Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott of 31 Westmoreland place. Mrs. Scott told a few close friends of her son at a dinner the preceding evening. The wedding probably will take place in the spring. Miss Keck is a graduate of Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and made her debut in New York. Mr. Scott is an alumnus of Yale, and was a junior grade Lieutenant in the Naval Aviation Corps during the war.

The marriage of Miss Norma Elizabeth West to Frank Irving Henderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Henderson of Webster Groves was solemnized last night at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. West, in Kansas City. The service was read by the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Arnold of the Grace Presbyterian Church, before a mantel which had been transformed into an altar of palms and smilax. The bride wore a gown of shell pink georgette trimmed with lace and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Marie West, as her sister's maid of honor, wore a draped model of blue crepe satin, and Miss Vera May Crawford, bridesmaid, was gowned in orchid crepe satin. Each carried Ophelia roses and lavendar sweet peas. Virginia Daniels, in a peach colored taffeta frock, and Howard West, held the ribbons. The bridegroom's attendants were Marion West and Edward Kebs. At the reception following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. West were assisted in receiving by Misses Marian Burns, Grace Baker, Mabel Curnutt and Grace Benjamin. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson will visit here and in Chicago on their wedding trip and will be at home after Jan. 15 in Spokane, Wash.

Miss Mildred Rothenberg, daughter of Mrs. George R. Stern of 735 Westgate avenue, has chosen Sunday, Jan. 6, as the date of her marriage to Joseph H. Feldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Feldman. There will be a 6 o'clock ceremony at Hotel Chase, with Rabbi Miller officiating. Only relatives and the two families will attend. A dinner will follow. Mrs. Ben Feldman will be matron of honor; Miss Ruth Wald, bridesmaid; Robin Corn and Grace Wald, flower girls; Jean Frances Jacob, ring bearer; Ben Feldman, brother of the bridegroom, best man, and Jack Feldman, groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Solomon of 5126 Waterman avenue announce the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Alma Solomon, to Joseph Lev-

A Woman Is as Old as the Line of Her Throat

A great many women who looked old and careworn are being made attractive and good to look at.

The contour of the face, the shapely neck, these make beauty.

Lift up the sagging muscles, tighten the skin around the neck, and you will look years younger. Wonderful Plastic Surgery does this. It is women's best friend. It is painless, quick, lasting. Write for booklet.

inson, and their son, Harold Solomon, to Miss Saedee Levinson.

The marriage of Miss Florence Weenick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Weenick of 1221 Glasgow avenue ,and Dr. Samuel M. Rich of 2836 Dayton street, will take place Christmas Day at 6 o'clock, Dr. Leon Harrison officiating. Guests will include only members of the families. There will be no attendants. Dr. Rich and his bride will go to New York on a fortnight's wedding trip and will make their home at 6315 Cabanne avenue.

Announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Mildred J. Grener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Grener, 5759 Chamberlain avenue, to Roland E. Sturhahn, son of Dr. and Mrs. F. O. Sturhahn, 3519 Hebert street, at a bridge given at the home of the prospective bride's parents yesterday afternoon. Mr. Sturhahn is a graduate of Princeton University and also attended Washington University, where he was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

The wedding of Miss Marguerite Boehner and Glenn T. Hicks, son of Mrs. E. Hicks of 3529 Minnesota avenue, took place Wednesday evening at the Shaw Avenue Methdist Episcopal Church, the Rev. J. O. Emsor officiating. The couple were attended by the bride's sister, Miss Corinne Boehner, and the bridegroom's brother, Clifford Hicks. The bride wore blue georgette trimmed in gold lace and carried pink roses, while the maid of honor was gowned in sand-colored georgette and carried yellow roses. A dinner followed. Mr. and Mrs. Hicks will make their home with the bride's mother, at 4564 Cote Brilliante avenue.

Miss Corinne Mae Taaffe, daughter of the late Thomas Taaffe and Mrs. Elizabeth Taaffe of 1325A Goodfellow avenue, was married to Clarence H. Heitman, son of Mrs. Christian M. Heitman of 3918 Westminster place, yesterday at 3:30 p. m. in the Union Avenue Christian Church. The Rev. George A. Campbell performed the ceremony. The bride is a graduate of Washington University. Mr. and Mrs. Heitman are residing at their new home, 3922A DeTonty street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Ritchey of Fort Worth, Tex., announce that their daughter, Miss Rose Josephine Ritchey, will be married to Melvin V. Brin of Dallas on Christmas day. Miss Ritchey formerly lived in St. Louis.

HOLIDAY PARTIES AND OTHER FUNCTIONS

Miss Lucy Hoblitzelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hoblitzelle of 484 Lake avenue, will give a small dinner party New Year's eve at the St. Louis Country Club. She will have 25 guests.

Another New Year's eve hostess at that club will be Miss Marie Wygant, cousin of Mrs. John O'Fallon Delaney.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Rex Brashear of 5225 Waterman avenue, have sent out invitations to an informal New Year's morning reception. About 80 guests have been invited for 11 o'clock.

Misses Dorothy Dowling and Thelma Gesell will entertain 75 guests with a dance at the Buckingham Hotel Wednesday for the graduating class of the Academy of the Visitation Convent. Mr. and Mrs. John J. Dowling and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gesell will be chaperones.

The cards of Misses Mary Dickson and Marie Carr Taylor and Col. and Mrs. William D. Crosby were enclosed in invitations for a New York's morning reception which Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Perry Francis will give at their home, 4510 Maryland avenue, for their debutante niece, Miss Isabelle Smith.

Several prenuptial parties are being planned in honor of Miss Margaret O'Mara, whose engagement to Mark J. Anderson has been announced.

Miss Theo Monti of Oak Court will give a luncheon bridge party at the Gatesworth Hotel Wednesday. Miss Anna Mae Barry will give a bridge party and shower at her home, 5829 Chamberlain avenue the following day. Miss Mary Ann Anderson, sister of the prospective bridegroom, has sent out cards for a shower to be given at her home in St. Charles Thursday, Pan. 3. The wedding will take place in the late winter.

One of the parties for the Christmas holidays will be that of the Delta Omicron Omicron sorority, Dec. 29 at the St. Louis Woman's Club.

The children of the Old Cathedral parish had their usual Christmas party Friday afternoon. Mrs. James Hunt Lucas arranged the affair, and was assisted in distributing gifts by Mrs. Marquard Forster. Sweaters, shoes and clothing, in addition to candy, were donated by Mmes. William Maffitt, Devereaux Robinson of New York, daughter of Mrs. Lucas; Amadee Reyburn, Seth Cobb, Stephen Colnon, William Pickel, Martin Shaughnessy, George S. NEWS OF WASHINGTON OF INTEREST TO MISSOURIANS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The Coolidge boys have arrived in Washington to celebrate their first Christmas in the White House. The President and Mrs. Coolidge have decided to share their Christmas tree with the community, and have donated the sixty-foot tree sent from Vermont to the city for use in one of the parks here, where it will be lighted with 3000 electric lights. They also have invited everybody to the carol singing Monday night as well. The vested choir of the President's church, the First Congregational, will lead the singing.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge will have no house guests over the holidays other than their sons. These lads have not divulged their holiday plans, but it has been noticed that all the many invitations they have received to sub-deb affairs have been politely but firmly declined.

Mrs. Thornton Boland, formerly of St. Louis, who is spending the winter in Washington, entertained at luncheon on Thursday in honor of Miss Nina Diamantapoulos, the debutante sister of the Secretary of the Greek Legation, and had fifteen of the most exclusive debutantes to meet her. She also entertained at luncheon on Friday in honor of Mrs. Edward L. Preetorius, of St. Louis, who is spending the winter in Washington.

Mrs. Coolidge wore her very newest gown, fashioned of gray crepe de chine with pearl trimmings to receive 50 women writers at tea at the White House on Tuesday.

For the first time in the history of the White House there are two social secretaries—Miss Laura Harlan, who served in this capacity for Mrs. Harding, and Miss Mary Randolph, who was social secretary for Mrs. Coolidge, when she was second lady of the land. Miss Harlan and Miss Randolph sat at either end of the tea table in the State dining room Tuesday.

One of the visitors was Mrs. Maude Howe Elliott, daughter of Julia Ward Howe. Mrs. Coolidge drew her to one side and talked with her for some time while the other guests waited.

Missouri was called "the garden spot of the South" at the meeting of the Missouri State Society on Thursday, by Representative Harvey L. Jost, former Mayor of Kansas City. Representative Cleveland Newton, president of the society, received with Mrs. Newton. The special hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Charles R. Keyser and Mrs. Otis J. Rogers. The new members of Congress and their wives were the special guests of honor.

Dean and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins were special guests of the students from Missouri at George Washington University at a tea last week.

Rear Admiral Robert A. Coontz, who has been in New York, will return to Washington for Christmas. Mrs. Coontz and Miss Bertha Coontz were at home informally on Monday. Miss Coontz will give a large ball at the Navy Yard Dec. 27 for the sub-debutantes, debutantes and debutantes of last year.

Miss Beatrice Henderson has returned from school to spend Christmas with her grandmother, Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the late Senator from Missouri.

Miss Mary Martin of Des Moines, Ia., a student at Wellesley College, is the guest of Miss Eleanor Fidler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Fidler of 6627 Waterman avenue. Miss Fidler entertained her guest at the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority dance last night at the St. Louis Woman's Club. Other out-of-town guests entertained at the ball were Miss Lina Newman of Kansas City, the guest of Miss Claire Rountree; and Miss Eleanor Walker of Brookline, Mass., who is visiting Miss Lucille Stocke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Stocke of the St. Regis apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Guttmann of 5226 Enright avenue have as their guest their niece, Miss Nelda Lichtenstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Lichtenstein, of San Francisco, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lilander of 5811 Pershing avenue, expect their son, Michael Jr., home from Kemper Military School at Boonville, Mo., for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Martin of Long Beach, Cal., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miriam Greenwald, to Mr. Arthur Fihn of the Hotel Chase, St. Louis, on the evening of Dec. 18. The couple will be at home at Hotel Chase after Jan. 20.

Mr. and Mrs. William Menne of 5632 Devonshire avenue gave a surprise birthday party Thursday in honor of Mr. Menne's mother, Mrs. Emma Menne. Her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Schebig, celebrated their first wedding anniversary at the same time. Dinner was served. Christmas decorations were used. The guests were Mmes. and Messrs. Krull, J. Rengel, A. Wiget, Harmel, J. Sutke, Jobst, Einspanier, P. Konrad, Delaney, C. Mail and Mmes. J. Gildehaus, Metz, F. Koch, T. Lauch, Misses I. Bet, M. Krull, F. M. Koch and H. Krull, W. Rengel and F. Menne.

The St. Louis Lonely Club will meet Friday night at 8 o'clock in the recital hall of the Odeon Building. All members of the club and out-of-town guests in St. Louis are invited.

The premiere of "Mary, Mary Quite Contrary," during last September in New York City, marked the first appearance of Mrs. Fiske under the management of David Belasco. The original production and cast are promised for the local engagement. The company includes C. Aubrey Smith, A. P. Kaye, Lennox Pawle, Orlando Daly, Francis Lister, Winifred Fraser, Nora Swinburne, Viola Fortesque, Audrey Cameron, Gladys Burgess and Naoe Kondo, a Japanese actress.

Plays Madcap of the Stage.

IN Mrs. Fiske's role of Mary Westlake, she is an actress portraying an actress—a temperamental star who goes down from London into the pious quiet of a vicarage in the very depths of the country and addles the wits of a young poet by coqueting with his first play, about Joan of Arc. Her sprightly misdemeanors turn the hours of her visit into a wild and fantastic orgy of humor. She nearly drowns a pompous K. C., engages herself to the poet and two others, stays out all night in a party dress with the ex-Governor of Andabar, and then sails away for adventures in other fields, leaving the victims of her visit in dismay, but still conscious of a lingering breath of romance and magic.

Mr. Ervine, who was born in Belfast, is the author of two serious dramas which aroused admiration in the East, "Jane Clegg" and "John Ferguson." He was formerly director of the famous Abbey Theater, in Dublin. With the present comedy, Mr. Belasco introduced for the first time a new system of stage lighting.

Mrs. Fiske's Star to Sparkle on Christmas Tree of the Theaters

Appears at American Tomorrow Night in "Mary, Mary Quite Contrary"—"Up She Goes" at Jefferson—Houdini and Charlotte Nash at Orpheum.

AS a Christmas gift to St. Louis theatergoers, the American will present Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, former St. Louisan and one of the country's most distinguished actresses, in "Mary, Mary Quite Contrary," a comedy by the notable Irish novelist and playwright, St. John Greer Ervine. The engagement of a week begins tomorrow night. The Shubert-Jefferson's offering is "Up She Goes," a musical comedy adapted from Frank Craven's play, "Too Many Cooks." It opens tonight.

The Woodward Players, at the Empress, are giving a comedy of the sawdust ring, "Polly of the Circus." The Orpheum features Houdini in an act displaying the master of shackles as freeing himself from iron fetters while submerged in a tank of water; and Miss Charlotte Nash, who was entered as "Miss St. Louis" in the recent Bathing Beauties' contest at Atlantic City, where she won fourth prize.

The premiere of "Mary, Mary Quite Contrary," during last September in New York City, marked the first appearance of Mrs. Fiske under the management of David Belasco. The original production and cast are promised for the local engagement. The company includes C. Aubrey Smith, A. P. THE first performance of "Up She Goes" occurred a little more than a year ago at the Playhouse, in New York, and served, among other things, in presenting Miss Gloria Foy—no kin of Eddie—to Broadway. She won an overnight success. The work ran in New York until last June, and had an all-summer engagement in Chicago. Miss Foy still leads the company appearing here, but Donald Brian of the original cast has been replaced by Arthur Uttry. Others in the current troupe are Marjorie Sweet, Jack Hartley and Lou Ripley.

Frank Craven's story concerns two young things who are happily engaged, but are subjected to many trials and tribulations by the well-meaning interference of relatives. The lyrics are by Joseph McCarthy and the music is by Harry Tierney, who were similarly implicated in the fabrication of "Irene."

New Year's week will witness at the American David Belasco's rearrangement of "The Merchant of Venice," with David Warfield in the portrait of Shylock which he had yearned over and studied for 20 years. It will be followed by the second edition of Irving Berlin's "Music Box Revue." "The Gingham Girl," a musical comedy, succeeds "Up She Goes" at the Shubert-Jefferson.

The announcement is made that "A Charming Conscience," a comedy, by Orrick Johns, will be presented at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater during the week of Jan. 14, with Margaret Anglin in the leading role. Other announcements at this playhouse are as follows: Jan. 5, "I'll Say She Is"; Jan. 20, Louis Mann and George Sidney in "Give and Take"; Jan. 27, "Irene"; Feb. 3, "The Love Child"; Feb. 10, the "Chauve Souris," and Feb. 17, Walker Whiteside in "Mr. Wu."

Shaw's New Play, "Saint Joan," This Week

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.

IN the huge budget of Christmas week openings, first place goes to George Bernard Shaw's newest play, "Saint Joan," which will have its premiere Friday night at the Garrick. It was written particularly for the Theater Guild, as a sign of the author's gratitude for that organization's hardihood in producing "Back to Methuselah." This is said to be the first time a Shaw play has appeared on the boards prior to its publication in book form.

The subject is Joan of Arc, and the maid of Domremy is the only feminine character in the cast. This role will be taken by Winifred Lenihan. Ian Maclaren, making his debut as a Guild player, has the role of Cauchon, and Maurice Col-

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

John Gilbert has started work on a new picture, "The Exiles," from Richard Harding Davis' novel. Betty Bouton is the lead.

Charles Jones has completed work on a new Fox feature, "Secondhand Love," directed by William Wellman. Ruth Dwyer is the lead.

Margaret Fielding, who just finished work opposite Dustin Farnum in his new film, "The Plugger," has begun work with John Gilbert in "The Exiles."

B. P. Schulberg is getting ready to begin production on the screen version of Robert W. Service's "Poisoned Paradise," a novel of Monte Carlo life, which will be one of the most elaborate on Preferred's next year schedule.

Netta Wescott, English stage actress brought to America by Al Lichtman, will be seen on the screen for the first time with the release of Gasnier's production of "Maytime."

Mammoth inclosed stages at the Schulberg Studios, Los Angeles, are being enlarged to accommodate the settings to be erected for the 15 feature productions to be filmed as Preferred Pictures during the coming 12 months.

Ruth Clifford is displaying a new watch to her envious sisters of the film capital. The novelty which she herself designed to wear in "Mothers-in-Law," is said by jewelers to be the only one of its kind in the world. The works are inclosed in a gold globe. It has four faces and dangles from a jeweled bracelet so that its wearer can tell

"Little Old New York," "The Dangerous Maid" On Photoplay Bills

Other Local Attractions Are "Big Brother," "The Meanest Man in the World" "Darling of New York" and "The Acquittal."

GOLDWYN-COSMOPOLITAN'S "Little Old New York" comes to the Pershing Theater for an engagement of one week, with matinees daily except Monday.

Marion Davies is featured in the production. During part of the action she plays the role of a boy. Harrison Ford is the leading man. Louis Wolheim, noted villain, and Harry Watson Jr., vaudeville star, have character bits.

The story is a romance woven by Rida Johnson Young around early historical developments in New York City. Particularly interesting is the audience's introduction to John Jacob Astor, Washington Irving, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Robert Fulton before these had made their names famous.

Astor is shown operating his fur store and shrewdly advising his friends to buy real estate. Vanderbilt runs the ferry and Robert Fulton, who invents the steamboat, is his protege. The success of Fulton's discovery founded the great Vanderbilt fortune. Washington Irving is a happy-go-lucky man about town. A special music score will be played by the Pershing Concert Orchestra under the direction of William A. Parson.

Constance Talmadge's latest picture, "The Dangerous Maid," will be the Christmas week attraction at the West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters this week. The picture is based on the novel, "Barbara Winslow, Rebel." Marjorie Daw, Conway Tearle and Tully Marshall are in the large supporting cast.

The picture tells the story of a flapper who flapped in the year 1662, masquerading at times as a boy.

Both the Grand Central and West End Lyric feature special attractions in addition to "The Dangerous Maid" and short film subjects. A Christmas kiddie show is booked for the Grand Central's stage. It is entitled "Santa Claus Land," with native juvenile talent featured.

Rex Beach's "The Big Brother," is the photoplay feature on the Missouri program. In the cast are Tom Moore, Micky Bennett, Edith Roberts and Raymond Hatton. "Big Brother" tells a story of a gangster's inheritance, the inheritance being a little boy bequeathed to him by his closest pal, who has been fatally wounded in a gangsters' war. Ben Murray, the mortally wounded gangster, in bequeathing his little brother Midge to Jim Donovan, the most notorious gangster of the East Side in New York, extracts from him the promise to bring the boy up "decent." With the help of Kitty Costello, the darling of the neighborhood, Jim reforms and takes care of Midge like a "Big Brother." But in so doing he incurs the emnity of the ruthless gang that he once led.

C. Sharp Minor plays a number of his own organ compositions and well-known classics. The Ossman brothers, banjoists de luxe, play popular fox trots, including late song hits and a medley of Southern airs.

George M. Cohan's stage comedy success, "The Meanest Man in the World," is featured at the Capitol Theater. It also comes to the West End Lyric the last half of the week, playing Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Bert Lytell, Bryant Washburne and Blanche Sweet top the cast.

"The Meanest Man in the World" is the story of a sentimentalist whose big heart constantly puts him in debt and prevents his success in a worldly way. This shames him and he resolves to be mean no matter what happens. But when he goes to evict a tenant he winds up by rocking the baby to sleep for the unfortunate father, and when he tries the nothing of the affections of a susceptible young parson. Hazel Whitmore plays the circus rider, and Alexis Luce the clergyman. Several children will appear in the cast. There will be an added matinee on Christmas day.

According to admirers of Miss Nash, who would have won first prize and been acclaimed "Miss America" at Atlantic City, had it not been for the judges' dislike of bobbed hair. She is to be entered in a similar contest next year at the instance of civic and business organizations of this city. When not appearing in vaudeville, she is taking a dramatic and elocution course at the National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md. Her act includes an appearance in a boardwalk rolling chair.

Other items of the Orpheum's Christmas week bill include those of John T. Murray and Vivian Oakland, musical comedy favorites; Maryon Vadie, dancer, and Oto Gygi, violinist, with a company; Thomas Swift and others in a new comedy sketch, "The Gob;" Lewis and Dody, comedians; Ernest Hiatt, monologist, and "Princess" Radjah, in her "Dance of Cleopatra."

Vaudeville and Burlesque.

MOTION pictures of St. Louisans—grown-ups in the evening and children at the matinees—will be taken on the stage of the Rialto this week by Louise Lovely and a company of assistants, who use a full studio equipment. The schedule includes the Yip Yip Yaphankers, a band of ex-soldier entertainers, with the Day brothers; "Mr. Hymack," whose quick-change act amazed Orpheum audiences last week; a trio of acrobats, and several other turns.

The Columbia announces Ted Leary and Vera Walton in "Now and Then," a sketch contrasting popular songs of present and past; the Alexander brothers and Evelyn; Sunny Bernet and Al Downs, Madelyn Young and her "Southern Singers," John Orren and Lillian Drew, mimic and whistler, and the "Four Bellhops," tumblers. The film feature, "South Sea Love," by Frederick and Fanny Hatton, stars Shirley Mason.

At the Grand Opera House the bill lists Joveddah de Rajah and "Princess" Alga, in telepathic feats; J. Rosamond Johnson and the "Syncopation Five"; Jeanne Boydell, singer and dancer; Larry Comer, singer, and various acrobatic, clowning and animal acts. The Gayety presents the popular comedian, Billy Watson, in "Beef Trust Beauties," including the lively knockabout skit, "Krousemeyer's Alley."

Four Choruses Are Christmas Week Visitors

THOUGH the Christmas tree will be bare of symphony confections and recital bonbons, the Santa Claus of music brings a great sackful of choral sweetmeats. Tomorrow night the Oberlin College Glee Club sings at the Armory in Webster Groves. On Christmas night the celebrated Ukrainian National Chorus will be heard at the Odeon. On Thursday night the Harvard Glee Club will give a concert at the Odeon; and on Friday evening the Sistine Chapel Choir will pay a return visit to the same auditorium.

The Oberlin Glee Club consists of 28 male voices, and the organization is now making its forty-fourth annual tour. The club will spend three days here, incuding Christmas. It will sing special Christmas music today at the First Congregational Church in Webster Groves and at the First Congregational Church of St. Louis. The program for tomorrow night's concert has not been announced.

Special Program of Russians.

THE Ukrainian singers, again under the direction of Alexander Koshetz, will make something of a feature of holiday music, such as Lyssenko's suites of Christmas and New Year's carols. There will be arrangements of Stephen Foster's "The Old Folks at Home" and "Susanna" and of Dett's "Listen to the Lambs," of a Creole dity, "Vents Nina," and of the Mexican air, "Paloma." This is a program prepared particularly for St. Louis, it is said, and the choristers rehearsed it during last week's lull in their engagements.

There will be numerous Russian airs, some new and others repeated from earlier programs here. Ewissei Belousoff, violoncellist, will play selections by Tschaikowsky, Scriabine, Rachmaninoff and Glazounoff.

Harvard Club Program.

THE Harvard Glee Club of 60 singers, under the direction of Dr. Archibald T. Davison, offers a program of familiar construction. First come religious compositions—Schuetz's "Since Christ Our Lord," Vittoria's "Jesu Dulcis Memoria," Decius' "To God on High" and Lott's "Crucifixus." The second group opens with Morley's "My Bonny Lass." Then come, in honor of the season, three Christmas carols from France; followed by Holst's "Dirge for Two Veterans" and a chorus from Sir Arthur Sullivan's "The Gondoliers." There will be folk songs from Scotland and Russia; Ireland's "Full Fathom Deep," Elgar's "After Many a Dusty Mile" and, to conclude, Handel's "Your Voices Raise," from the Sixth Chandos Anthem.

The Sistine Choir program has not been announced, save that it will consist of numbers not sung at its recent concert, and that there will be music appropriate to the season, including "Adeste Fideles." The choir's appearace at at the Odeon a few weeks ago attracted one of the largest audiences ever gathered there.

Tony Sarg's Marionettes.

THE Tony Sarg marionettes, at the Sheldon Auditorium, will be exhibited in "Red Riding Hood" and "Hansel and Gretel" Friday and Saturday afternoons, and in "Don Quixote" on the evenings of these days. By way of novelty, Ching and Chang, marionettes from China, will de displayed at the matinee. "Don Quixote" is said to be one of the most elaborate of the Sarg productions.

Louis Graveure, baritone, is announced for a recital at the Odeon on the evening of Jan. 5. He will sing groups of German lieder, French chansons, Bohemian and Hungarian folksongs and ditties by English and American composers. Mme. Marie Jeritza, stellar soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., will make her first St. Louis appearance at the Odeon on March 18.

The Morning Choral Club will celebrate Christmas vespers at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the Second Presbyterian Church. One of the numbers will be Fay Foster's setting of a poem by Sarah Teasdale, "In the Carpenter Shop," in which Miss Amie Guth Punshon will assist the chorus. Charles Galloway will conduct, and Paul Friess will be at the organ. Mrs. Bessie Brown Ricker will give a musical reading, and Miss Clara Schlief will have a solo in Horatio Parker's "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

Fomer St. Louisan Who Will Sing With Orchestra

LILLIAN MEINECKE

LILLIAN MEINECKE SOLOIST AT NEXT SUNDAY'S "POP"

THE Symphony Orchestra will give no popular concert today, but on next Sunday afternoon a program, directed by Frederick Fischer, will present as soloist Miss Lillian Meinecke, lyric soprano, who left her home in St. Louis two years ago to prosecute her studies in New York. Miss Meinecke is making a holiday tour, including appearances in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and Buffalo.

Mr. Ganz appears next Friday and Saturday as piano soloist and guest conductor with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. His solo number, the First Concerto of Tschaikowsky, will be directed by Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor of the Los Angeles orchestra. The St. Louis leader will direct Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," and the "Carnaval Romain" of Berlioz.

Mr. Ganz returns home to direct the regular concerts of Jan. 3 and 4, with Ossip Gabrilowitsch as soloist, and will then appear as piano soloist with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, at Indianapolis, under the baton of Fritz Reiner.

Hampden Fine Actor Who Isn't Quite Inspired

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.

THE best testimony which we can offer as to our enthusiasm for Walter Hampden's production of "Cyrano de Bergerac" is the fact that we did not see it until every other critic in town had proclaimed its virtues. And still we like it.

The belated reviewer who has heard much of the magnificence of any play is almost certain to be moved to a little opposition. It is dull work merely to fall in at the tag end of a parade which has already passed. The straggler wants to attract attention to himself, and he can best do that by shouting out that the procession, now disappearing over he edge of the horizon, is heading in the wrong direction. We should like to say that "Cyrano" is not so fine as the others have proclaimed. But it is—almost.

On one point we are able to take slight exception to some of the comment. When Hampden first appeared in the Rostand play the announcement was made dogmatically, by a few, that his performance established him as the finest actor yet produced by the American theater. Just now he compares to dead actors we are not prepared to say, but from our point of view he is still a little below one or two of the living.

Role Well Thought Out.

IT is not difficult to overestimate a player when he appears in a great role. Several indifferent actors have made themselves seem good by merely having the courage and audacity to attempt Hamlet. Now, Walter Hampden is competent and more, and Cyrano is one of the richest roles ever devised for the stage.

The performance which Mr Hampden gives is carefully thought out. He has endeavored to fashion a performance which will be sound in its totality rather than attempt the easier feat of riding to heaven on the skyrocketing of one or two scenes. He knows what he is about. He has grace and humor, and in the final act, the death of Cyrano, the poignancy of the play reaches over the footlights to clutch at the spectator.

Until then we had felt that perhaps Mr. Hampden erred a little on the side of emphasizing the comedy. The most common complaint against him in the theater has been that he lacked a sense of humor. Many who admitted that his Hamlet was dignified and eloquent expressed a desire for more levity and sprightliness.

His Comedy and Elocution.

THE present production of "Cyrano" ought to end the rumor that Hampden is humorless. He scores all the comedy points of the play with ease, neatness and dispatch. In the balcony scene, where Cyrano lends his voice and eloquence to enable his rival to make adequate love, we felt that perhaps Hampden was too intent on enticing us to laugh. After all there was much in this at which we might well weep. But looking back upon it we find that there is a danger of repetition of mood in "Cyrano." If the tragedy of the poor cavalier is emphasized too strongly during the balcony scene the potentiality of pity in the scene of his final death must inevitably be diminished.

There remains, however, one phase of the acting of Hampden which leaves us less than satisfied. His is not a voice which always commands our respect. There are fine tones in it and ample variety, but we think that he has not quite learned to differentiate rigorously enough between the art of eloclution and the art of acting. Now and again we seem to catch him in the act of saying: "A deep chest tone would go well right here." And of course it won't if the actor is over conscious of striving for an effect rather than being intent upon an emotion.

Actors With Inspiration.

TO our mind, then, Walter Hampden is a fine actor who is not quite inspired. And in just what ways is inspiration made manifest? We haven't the remotest idea. In one or two people now upon the stage we seem to sense it. Naturally we cannot prove that it exists in these favorites of ours. Maybe it doesn't, but as long as we stingle quite illogically at certain movements of the hands or minute inflections of the voice we must continue to believe that these are exclusively the great ones of the theater. We have in mind two living players. One is John Barrymore. The other is Jane Cowl. And sometimes Laurette Taylor is a third and O. P. Heggie a fourth.

The new motion of production and the old are combined in the final act of "Cyrano" as produced by Hampden. In the center of the convent garden there stands a tree unmistakably flat, posterlike and futuristic. Yet from these decorative and impressionistic branches there fall, from time to time, in accordance with the requirements of the text, leaves which are far more realistic than the tree which bore them.

As they fell, one point against the overfidelity of the theater in emulating nature was distinctly scored. Hampden as the dying Cyrano had embarked upon eloquence. His words were winged, but down from the flies there floated a most lifelike leaf which fluttered aimlessly about until it lit first on the nose of Cyrano and then slipped across his mouth.

The poetry of the moment was impaired a little by the fact that the actor was obliged to spit out the leaf before he could go on. Nature is a fine thing in the theater, but only up to the point where it begins to get in the way.

bourne has come from Stratford-on-Avon to play Dunois. There are 24 speaking parts.

The other chief openings in the long list are as follows:

Monday night—"The Wild Westcotts," a comedy by Anne Morrison, at the Frazee; "The Alarm Clock," a comedy by Avery Hopwood, starring Blanche Ring and Bruce McRae, at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater, and a revival of Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," at Jolson's Fifty-ninth Street Theater.

Olga Petrova's Play.

CHRISTMAS night — "Hurricane," Olga Petrova's new play, at the Frolic; "The Rise of Rosie O'Reilly," George M. Cohan's new musical comedy, at the Liberty, and "Mary Jane McKane," a musical comedy by Oscar Hammerstein II, at the Imperial.

Wednesday night—"Neighbors," a comedy by Leon Cunningham, presented by the Equity Players at the Forty-eighth Street Theater, and "This Fine Pretty World," a comedy by Percy Mackaye, at the Neighborhood Playhouse.

Thursday matinee—"The Vagabond," by Wilson Collison, at the Apollo.

Saturday night—"Madre," a play from the Spanish of Rafael Marti Obera, featuring Nance O'Neill, at the Lenox Hill; and "Rose Anne," a play of negro life, by Nan Bagby Stevens, at the Greenwich Village Theater.

Fay Bainter's Success.

IN the new Belasco production, "The Other Rose," which opened Thursday night, Fay Bainter and Henry Hull seemed to play more skillfully than ever. Miss Bainter, even with limited opportunities, seemed among the surest and deftest of our comediennes. The play was adapted by George Middleton from the French of Edouard Bourdet. The English version is distinctly lightweight. It is to all intents one long love scene from beginning to end.

Much of the talk is good, but the tale of "Romeo and Juliet" itself could scarcely be maintained on nothing but talk. It becomes necessary to piece out the love dislogue with an absent-minded Greek professor and a small brother who gets in the way. The role of the brother is made mightily amusing by Andrew J. Lawyer Jr., who once played Penrod.

"The Miracle" Delayed.

ADVICES came floating down the wind that "The Miracle" will not open for three weeks, owing to the colossal task of transforming the Century Theater into a Gothic Cathedral. The delay is costing the backers $1000 a day, and it is said that before the curtain rises the cost will exceed considerably the original estimate of $500,000.

"Innocent Eyes" will be the title of the musical comedy for Mistinguette, French dancer, which is now in rehearsal, and which will be produced not at the Winter Gerden, but at the Ambassador. . . . The play dramatized from Zona Gale's novel, "Birth," will be christened "Mr. Pitt." . . . Otis Skinner will close next week in "Sancho Panza" at the Hudson and take the piece on tour. "The Vanities" will also close on that date at the Earl Carroll Theater, and take to the road.

It is reported that Florenz Ziegfeld offered Marilyn Miller's role in "Sally" to Gloria Foy, and that she declined it. Miss Foy is playing "Up She Goes" in St. Louis next week. . . . Leonore Ulric in "Kiki," played to $27,000 during a recent week's engagement in Pittsburg. . . . Richmond, Va., is planning an open-air theater to seat 12,000.

Zoe Akins as Adapter.

AN adaptation from the Hungarian by Zoe Akins is "The Moonflower," which will be produced by Charles L. Wagner, with Elsie Ferguson and Sidney Blackmer in the principal rodes. . . . Israel Zangwill's "We Moderns," starring Helen Hayes, had its premiere tonight in Wilmington, Del. It goes next to Washington and then to Chicago. . . . Rehearsals began this week for "The Chiffon Girl," in which Eleanor Painter will be featured.

Ulrich Haupt, leading man in "Queen Victoria," has been engaged for the tile role of "The Marionette Man," which is to be produced in January. . . . Mrs. Leslie Carter has begun rehearsals in "Stella Dallas." . . . A musical comedy version of "Peg o' My Heart" is being prepared. J. Harvey Manners, author of the play, is writing the book; Anne Caldwell is doing the lyrics, and Hugo Felix is composing the tunes.

During the final week of John Barrymore in "Hamlet," at the Manhattan Opera House, the receipts were in the neighborhood of $30,000, which is considered a record bag for Shakspeare. . . . John Murray Anderson and the Bohemians, Inc., producers of the "Greenwich Village Follies," are in litigation. Anderson alleges that the concern owes him $6500 in back royalties, and the defendants declare they had to make over entirely the last show Anderson devised.

Raquel Miler's American engagement has been postponed until next season, on account of the serious illness of the Spanish danseuse. . . . Mme. Duse will play at the Auditorium in Chicago on Dec. 31 and Jan. 3, 7, and 10. The dramas presented will be Ibsen's "Ghosts" and d'Annunzio's "The Dead City."

It Was Cheaper to Close.

THE Frazee Theater was taken over by the producer of "The Talking Parrot" for two weeks at a rental of $4000 a week. Probably at no performance did the receipts touch $100. Under these circumstances one week was more than enough. For the second week the producer merely paid $4000, closed the show, and let it go at that. . . . Eugene O'Neill has written a new play with the Afro-American title, "All God's Chillun Got Wings." It is to be given at the Provincetown Theater. . . . Channing Pollock, author of "The Fool," has written a play called "The Enemy," which will be produced next September.

A citizen who intended to be devastatingly ironical wrote to the Police Department the other day that the only immoral plays in New York were "Hamlet" and William Hodge's "For All of Us." "Hamlet," he said, idealizes murder; and he pointed out that in one scene of "For All of Us" Mr. Hodge actually holds a girl in his lap. Whether the department sent a censor to the Hodge play is unrevealed, but a Sergeant was detailed to report on John Barrymore's melancholy Dane. He is said to have departed with a crestfallen air, and expectation goes that if he ever submits a report it will be filed in the deepest archives.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

the time of day no matter in what position it is hanging.

Florence Vidor, playing the role of Molly, the schoolmistress in Tom Forman's production, "The Virginian," made a good showing as an entry in the women's classes at a rodeo recently held at Lone Pine, Cal., where the company was on location.

Ethel Shannon, in making up for the old lady part in Gasnier's "Maytime," dips her hands in a mixture of ordinary glue and water to give them an aged appearance. Her make-up is said by those who know to be one of the most effective ever achieved for the screen.

Wesley Barry, the famous freckled kid, just celebrated his seventeenth birthday. A party was given at the Warner Studios where "Wes" is filming the George M. Cohan play, "George Washington, Jr." Freckles just completed "The Printer's Devil," from the original story by Julien Josephson. The intimacy of the pressroom and printing plant of a small town newspaper is a feature.

The filming will start shortly on "Daddies," a screen adaptation of Belasco's Broadway hit of the same name. Mae Marsh is to be the star of the production. Among those already selected to play important roles are Monte Blue, Harry Myers and Claude Gillingwater.

Johnny Hines is now humming away at full speed on his latest screen play, "Conductor 1492," an adaptation of F. Scott Fitzgerald's story, "The Camel's Back." Playing opposite Johnny is Doris May. Dan Mason, creator of the skipper of the "Toonerville Trolley," is seen in the cast which includes Dorothy Vernon, Robert Cain, Fred Esmelton and Byron Sage.

Another prize beauty recently arrived in Hollywood to seek fame and fortune via the motion picture camera. She is Doris Stone, the English girl who won the London Daily Mirror contest as the "most petite girl in the British Isles."

The style of the silver and blue brocaded vest which Constance Talmadge wore in her latest comedy-drama of the seventeenth century, "The Dangerous Maid," is coming into vogue among the fashionably dressed young women of the film colony. It is quite modern in appearance, but still it is designed to the period of the picture.

With 14 players assembled, the cast is said to be complete for "The Thief of Bagdad," the Arabian Nights spectacle which Douglas Fairbanks is now working on at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios in Hollywood. Besides Fairbanks, there appear in this picture Julanne Johnston as the Princess, leading feminine role; Sadakichi Hartmann, as the Governor of Wah Hoo, Mat Comont as the Persian Prince, Noble Johnson as the Indian Prince, So-Jin, celebrated Japanese star, as the Chinese Prince, Brandon Hurst, the Caliph, Sam Baker as the Caliph's attendant, Charles Belcher as the Holy Man, Snitz Edwards, the Evil Associate, Anna May Wong as the Disloyal Maid, Etta Lee as the Loyal Maid, Lasca Winters, a Maid, and Tote du Crow as the Soothsayer.

"Under the Red Robe," was edited on a continental train by Alan Crosland, its director. The picture, with Alma Rubens, John Charles Thomas and Robert B. Mantell in the leading roles, was filmed at the Cosmopolitan studios in New York. Immediately upon finishing photography Crosland was signed to direct "Three Weeks" for Goldwyn. So Crosland and his cutter fitted up a cutting room in a compartment of the train and edited the picture during the trip from New York to Los Angeles.

"The Man Life Passed By" was "Held to Answer" when while "In Search of a Thrill" and under the impulse of "Desire" he violated "The Social Code" by tickling the "Rouged Lips" of "The Good Bad Girl" with "The Eagle's Feather" and suffered "The Fool's Awakening." There at a glance are nine big Metro pictures of this season.

Mary Alden has already appeared in two Metro pictures of the season, "The Eagle's Feather" and Reginald Barker's latest picture, "Pleasure Mad," and is now appearing in a third, "The Fool's Awakening," the screen version of William J. Locke's novel, "The Tale of Trigona."

When "The Man Life Passed By," Mr. Victor Schertzinger's new picture for Metro, is shown in St. Louis, Jane and Eva Novak, who have leading parts, will not worry for lack of publicity. Their father is the editor of one of the St. Louis dailies. "The Man Life Passed By" was written by Mr. Schertzinger and Winifred Dunn.

More than 700 extras were used in filming castle scenes of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks." Principals in the cast include: Aileen Pringle, Conrad Nagel, John Sainpolis, Claire de Lorez, Stuart Holmes, Dale Fuller and Mitchell Lewis.

King Vidor, who directed "Three Wise Fools," is one of the youngest directors. At his last birthday, Feb. 8, he was 29.

Three times each week Jackie Coogan takes his schooling in pleasant doses of one, two and three reels. Recently Jack Coogan senior installed in his home a combination school and projection room where for the edification of his famous son, instructive films are flashed upon the screen to the accompanying lecture of his tutor.

Claire Windsor, Montague Love, Bert Lytell, Rosemary Theby and Paul Panzer have sailed from New York on their way to the Algerian Sahara to film Louise Gerard's "A Son of the Sahara," for First National Pictures. Edwin Carewe, the director, preceded them by several weeks and is now in the city of Algiers getting ready for the big film enterprise.

Norma Talmadge has begun "Secrets." Constance is resting after completing "A Dangerous Maid."

same stunt again he falls in love with the second tenant and lines up with her against his client.

The young man discovers that there is oil on the land which his former client is trying to secure by foreclosure. There is a fight that ultimately ends in victory for the girl and "the meanest man."

"Who's Guilty?" is the question supposed to agitate the audience until the very last in the mystery picture, "The Acquittal" at the Kings. In turn every character is suspected, almost engulfed in the net of evidence; then released. The solution comes in a surprising climax. The cast includes Claire Windsor, Norman Kerry, Richard Travers, Barbara Bedford, Henry Westayer, Dot Farley, Charles Wellesley, Hayden Stevenson, Ben Deely and Frederick Vroom.

The Delmonte Theater goes back to musical comedy to supplement its feature picture and this week inaugurates a stock musical company which will appear twice a day. The organization is known as Groves Brothers Show and their opening bill will be "Saucy Baby." The feature picture is "The Darling of New York," in which Baby "Peggy," the child movie star, makes her debut in a full length feature picture. It is a melodrama which begins in Italy and ends—happily of course—in New York. The story is a crook tale of the New York Ghetto. There will be the usual short run features on the program as well.

Announcement has been made that the Dempsey-Firpo fight pictures will be shown at the Criterion Theater for the week beginning today.

Several Downtown Corners Change Hands in Week of Big Realty Transactions

Key Holdings on Market and Chestnut Streets Figure in Movement Inspired by Bell Telephone and Court House Building Projects.

By Berry Moore.

The realty movement was on a substantial scale during the last week, both the business and residential sections of the market being characterized by encouraging transactions.

Transactions in downtown St. Louis embraced principally key holdings on Chestnut and Market streets, thus confirming reports of negotiations for prominent corners on these thoroughfares east of Twelfth boulevard, inspired by the Bell Telephone and Courthouse building projects.

The most notable of these included the southeast and the northwest corners of Eleventh and Chestnut streets sold through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, and the southeast corner of Tenth and Market streets through the John P. Herrman Jr. Realty Co. These were supplemented by transactions for other holdings on both Chestnut and Market streets, as well as on Pine street.

Albert Wenzlick, president of the Albert Wenzlick Realty Co., bought the southeast corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets occupied by two-story buildings. The site has 85 feet on Eleventh street and 85 feet on Chestnut street. Wenzlick already owned the adjoining 21 feet frontage at 1010 Chestnut street, occupied by the building of the Albert Wenzlick Realty Co., and which gives him a total frontage on Chestnut street of 106 feet by a depth or frontage on Eleventh street of 104 feet. The consideration was not disclosed.

Wenzlick, it is understood, plans eventually to erect a substantial business structure on this corner, destined to form one of the most valuable sites in the vicinity of the proposed Courthouse.

Corner at 11th and Chestnut Sold.

The northwest corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets having a frontage on Chestnut street of 42½ feet by a depth on Eleventh street of 155 feet, occupied by an old three-story building, was purchased by Frank Dubinsky, president of the Dubinsky Realty Co., who acquired the holding as a speculation.

The purchase was made on the basis of $1500 a foot for the Chestnut street frontage of the site.

The corner is a key to this quarter of the block and is directly opposite the site designated for the proposed courthouse. The grantor was the Liggett Real Estate Co., a client of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust which negotiated the sale.

Another notable purchase in this district was that by the Bush-Burns Realty Co., composed of Robert Burns, president, and Wade Bush, vice president and secretary, of the three-story building and site at 1105 Chestnut street, west of and adjoining, the corner acquired by Frank Dubinsky. The first floor of this building is occupied by the Bush-Burns Realty Co. The sale was made by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust on behalf of a client.

Tenth and Market Corner Sold.

Sale of the southeast corner of Tenth and Market streets is announced by the John P. Hermann Jr. Real Estate Co., to Hazel Green, a client of Frank S. Rice, a realty dealer. The site has 31 feet on Market street, and 125 feet on Tenth street, and is occupied by an old structure. It was sold by Judge Shepherd Barclay, whose grandfather acquired it in 1832 when it was virtually an integral part of the Chouteau pond, for 150. The price paid by Rice's client was not announced.

Negotiations were closed during the week for another plot on the south side of Market street, in this block, but details are withheld pending execution of final papers. Mrs. Elizabeth Dwyer recently acquired the southwest corner of Tenth and Market streets in this block through the Mullen-Walters Realty Co.

The Kuffel-Esser Co. of New York, dealer in artists' instruments, has purchased the building at 1007 Pine street through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, in connection with Isaac T. Cook & Co. The lot is [illegible]x109 feet, and is opposite the block purchased by the Bell Telephone Co. for its proposed group of 14-story buildings, which doubtless had its bearing on this sale.

As was told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the block bounded by Eleventh street and Twelfth boulevard, Chestnut and Market streets, has been selected for the proposed $4,000,000 courthouse, authorized under the $87,000,000 bond issue, while the block bounded by Chestnut, Pine, Eleventh and Tenth streets, has been purchased by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. for a group of 14-story buildings for its offices and telephone system, to cost approximately $20,000,000 when completed.

More Transactions Expected.

The movement on these thoroughfares doubtless was precipitated by the announcement of these projects, but it is only in its inception according to realty men. It will receive added impetus with the materialization of plans for lofty structures to be erected at the southwest and northeast corners of Ninth and Chestnut streets, respectively, by the Western Union Telegraph Co. and the Industrial Loan Co.

Large scale transactions in other sections involved the Ranelagh Apartments at the northwest corner of De Baliviere and McPherson avenues and the Turner tract at Normandy, these two deals alone aggregating $750,000. Details are given elsewhere.

Real Estate Exchange to Give Entertainment.

Sales, options, rentals and last, but not least, commissions, which make up the year, will be forgotten in the final afternoon of 1923, when the active members of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, with Secretary Kay as the moving spirit, will have a holiday entertainment and luncheon in the exchange room in the Wainwright Building. The affair will begin at 12:30 p. m., Monday, Dec. 31, and a special committee is arranging for decorations, entertainers, novelties, and catering features.

John W. Gibson is chairman of the committee. The committee on publicity and attendance is composed of Frank J. W. Masek, Berry Moore of the Post-Dispatch, Charalse W. Nax of the Globe-Democrat, and Fred D. Schnell.

The last three years have been prosperous ones for the real estate men. The outlook for the year is equally promising, with notable buoyancy characterizing all sections of the real estate market.

MANUFACTURING CONCERN BUYS TRACT TO EXPAND PLANT

The Steelcote Manufacturing Co. has purchased a tract, 175 by 137 feet, comprising two parcels, situated on the Missouri Pacific Railroad tracks near Theresa avenue, to provide for the expansion of its present plant. The sale of the site was negotiated by the Franciscus Realty Co.

Another notable sale promoted by the Franciscus Realty Co. was that of the northwest corner of Twenty-fourth and O'Fallon streets for the Lindsay estate to Jacob Martin. The purchase was made as an investhent, the site being improved with tenement buildings.

YECKEL-FEYDT-EARICKSON CO. TO OPEN A BRANCH OFFICE

The Yeckel - Feydt - Earickson Realty Co., in connection with the American Building & Loan Association, on Jan. 2 will open a branch office at 3525 North Grand boulevard. Louis F. Yeckel is president of the Building and Loan Association. The company's main office is at 2925 South Broadway.

MISSOURI U. MEMORIAL TO BE READY MARCH 1

Tower of Building Will Reach Height of 150 Feet and Cost $225,000.

Completion of the memorial building to stand at the entrance of the west or new, campus of the University of Missouri is planned for March 1, 1925.

The structure, 400 feet wide and 100 feet from front to rear is to face west, with the arch at the end of Lowry street, which connects the new with the old campus, one block away. On the east, or the opposite side to that shown, the new building will overlook the "White" campus from a huge terrace.

The building is to be white, like others on this campus, of local stone with limestone trimmings. The style is English Collegiate Gothic, with the memorial tower surmounted at the four corners by crocketed spires reaching a height of 150 feet, equal to the height of an avearge 14-story building.

Directly above the arch will be the memorial chamber, with walls of stone wainscot and a vaulted ceiling 40 feet high. This room will have eight memorial windows. Above it, will be the room for chimes. The tower is to cost $225,000, and each wing, $200,000. To the left of the tower will be the quarters of the Men's Union, with meeting rooms, lounge rooms, and the like, and the Women's Union will occupy the section to the right of the tower.

MISSOURI THEATER BUILDING TO HAVE 46 OFFICES TO FLOOR

Isaac T. Cook & Co. to Manage Structure—Five Stores on Ground Floor.

The 12-story Missouri Theater Building, under construction at the southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, will form one of the most notable structures in this part of the city. Isaac T. Cook & Co. is to manage the building, construction of which is being supervised by the architects, Helfensteller, Hirsch & Watson. The building is designed particularly for physicians and dentists.

The office portion of the building—the second to the twelfth floors, inclusive—will have more than 90,000 square feet of floor space, with about 46 offices to a floor. The offices will be done in mahogany. On the ground floor there will be five retail stores.

Three high-speed passenger elevators and one freight elevator will be installed. The passenger elevators will be equipped with the new micro-leveling device, to insure stopping level with each floor.

The building is being financed by Mercantile Trust Co.

BUILDING ON TAYLOR AV. REPORTED SOLD FOR $60,000

The three-story building at 616 to 628 inclusive, Taylor avenue, adjoining the corner of Delmar, comprising six stores and four flats, has been acquired by a client of Eugene J. Altheimer at a reported price of $60,000. The annual rentals of the buildings aggregate $6840. The site has a frontage of 120 feet on Taylor avenue. It was sold for the account of A. Ullman, the negotiations being conducted by Edgar V. Calmer, salesman.

$1000 AN ACRE PAID FOR NORMANDY TRACT

Majestic Homes Corporation Buys 197 Acres on Florissant Road.

The Majestic Homes Corporation has purchased 197 acres at Normandy, comprising the Reyburn and Turner estate holdings.

The amount paid was approximately $200,000, a trifle more than $1000 an acre, which is a record price for this part of St. Louis County.

The tract was conveyed by a syndicate composed of Charles Hoerr, proprietor of the Delmonico Market; Vincent McShane, attorney, and Francis Louther, who purchased the property about three years ago through the Conret & Zeibig Trust.

The Majestic Homes Corporation is proceeding to convert the tract into a residential park, with plans for its upbuilding with attractive homes. The concern has built a record number of homes, notably in the University City district.

The tract is two miles northwest of Wellston and is served by the Kirkwood-Ferguson and the Easton avenue (extension) car lines. It lies on the north side of Florissant road and extends east to the Lucas and Hunt roads.

PRINTING COMPANY ACQUIRES LEASE ON LARGER QUARTERS

The Wolff Printing Co. has taken a long-term lease of the fourth floor of the 10-story building at 1531 Washington avenue, which is to be occupied as the company's office, salesroom and printing department, to meet the requirements of which alterations are to be made. The Wolff company was formerly at 310-12 Market street, but increased business made larger quarters necessary.

The lease was negotiated by the Mullin-Walters Realty Co.

NEW CAKE FACTORY AT 3900 WASHINGTON BOULEVARD

A new cake factory was opened yesterday by the Nafziger Baking Co. at 3900 Washington boulevard. The building was leased through George Steriff, manager of the rental department of the Mercantile Trust Co.

$550,000 CASH PAID FOR RANELAGH APARTMENTS

Mrs. Minnie Housam Buys 94-Suite Building at DeBaliviere and McPherson Avenues.

The sale by which Mrs. Minnie Housam acquired the Ranlagh apartments, a six-story and basement structure at the northwest corner of De Baliviere and McPherson avenues, was the most conspicuous transaction of the week in the apartment building field.

The transaction was made on a cash basis and the purchase price was approximately $550,000, according to Mrs. Housam. The grantor, the Ranelagh Investment Co., of which John R. McCarthy is president, was represented by the Kempland-Redemeyer Real Estate Co.

The building has a frontage on De Baliviere of 110 feet by a depth on McPherson of 125 feet, and is of the modern efficiency type, having been built only three years ago. It has 94 suites of four and six-room efficiency, from which annual rentals of $105,000 are derived.

A canopied entrance is designed for the De Baliviere avenue front in place of that on McPherson avenue. A large outlay is planned for overhauling the building, which is to be operated as a high-class hotel-apartment under the management of the Housam Realty Co. of which Mrs. Housam is president.

This is only one of a succession of large operations in the apartment building field on the part of Mrs. Housam.

Edmund J. Linchey, grandson of the late Edward Butler, millionaire politician, has purchased 6951 Pershing avenue through the George F. Bergfeld Realty Co., in connection with David Bailey, realtor. The house has nine rooms, exclusive of breakfast room and two baths.

This is one of five houses recently constructed in Ames place by the Bergfeld Co., which has erected more than 75 houses in this district.

OKLAHOMA BROOM CORN GROWERS LEASE BUILDING

The Broomcorn Growers' Co-operative Association of Oklahoma has acquired a lease on one of the group of large buildings at Main and Dock streets, owned by Hafner Bros. The lease was arranged by the John B. Krieger Real Estate Co., which worked in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce.

Three Apartments Sold for $90,000.

The Dyas-Shelp Realty Co. announces the sale of three apartment buildings for a total of $90,000. They are: 6625 Washington avenue, containing three apartments of six rooms and sun parlor each, to Louis Rosenblatt for Fannie Maritz; 5768 Westminster avenue, a six-family building, each apartment containing six rooms, to a client for Mabel Hinkley, who was represented by the John S. Blake & Bros. R. E. Co.; 5375-81 Cabanne avenue, containing four apartments of seven rooms each, for Grace and Lillian Armstrong to Abraham Simon.

All of the above properties have been placed under the management of the Dyas-Shelp Realty Co.

CREDIT CLEARING HOUSE LEASES SPACE ON TWELFTH BOULEVARD

The Credit Clearing House has acquired a lease of 5000 square feet in the nine-story building at the southeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and St. Charles street for its general offices. This space, comprising a part of the fifth floor, gives the concern approximately 1000 square feet more floor area than it had in its location in the Odd Fellows Building which it occupied for more than 27 years. The lease, which was made for Leopold Ackerman, was negotiated by Martin and Breitt. Another lease for space on the fifth floor was made to A. B. Ewing, formerly located in the Laclede Gas Light Building. He will use this space for offices and a stock room for electrical supplies and electric light bulbs. Martin and Breitt negotiated the lease.

MISSOURI STATE LIFE BUILDING IMPROVED

5-Story Extension Completed, Cafeteria and Hospital Installed.

The Missouri State Life Building at the northwest corner of Fifteenth and Locust streets which now rises 12 stories in height, with a white tiled front, forms one of the most attractive features of this thoroughfare west of Twelfth boulevard.

The height of the structure was originally seven stories, but five stories have just been added to it. The northwest corner of the building, formerly only two stories, was increased to twelve stories, thus giving the structure a uniform height.

On the twelfth floor an elaborate cafeteria is being fitted up. When completed it will be one of the best equipped and most modern in the city. It will have a seating capacity for about 400 and it is estimated that about 700 will be served at each noon-day meal.

A separate dining room will be provided for the officers. The kitchen is of white tile construction, a model of cleanliness and efficiency. A refrigerator system in the building will serve the cafeteria. All food will be served at cost.

The remainder of the twelfth floor will be devoted to a hospital and employes' club room. The hospital will have all the equipment necessary for the treatment of emergency cases.

The remainder of the building is occupied by the general offices and the various departments of the insurance company as its headquarters.

STANDARD BEDDING CO. BUYS NORTH 15TH ST. BUILDING

The two-story building at 1107 North Fifteenth street has been sold by the Mullin-Walters Realty Co. to the Standard Bedding Co., which makes mattresses. The building is to be used for factory and offices.

Seventeen Years' Successful Record

John C. Greulich Realty Co.

1923 has been a good year to us and those who have done business in our office

The folks who have purchased homes from us are satisfied. The owners for whom we have collected rent are satisfied; we know this because they tell us of their encouragement in receiving statements promptly and the general attention given their property; and from the fact that they are recommending our office to their friends.

Those clients for whom we have handled building operations are satisfied; everything was taken care of in a nice, clean-cut manner without disappointment to them; there were no promises or sleight-of-hand work.

Those who have invested their savings through our office by purchasing Deeds of Trust are satisfied; interest has been paid three days in advance; no one has lost a cent of principal or interest; the security was ample; taxes were watched; insurance covered; everything done to safeguard our clients.

We have an excellent system and facilities for handling your business and insurance (fire, tornado, automobile, plate glass and liability) and selling and buying real estate.

APPRECIATION—We wish to take this opportunity to express to every client our appreciation for the co-operation given this Company in the past, and solicit the continuance of your patronage during the coming year.

Wishing all a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

OWN A FARM WHERE IT IS PROFITABLE
Canadian Pacific Gives
35 Years to Pay

Be wealthy and independent by securing a fertile farm in Western Canada. Choice irrigated tracts in sunny Southern Alberta. Unfailing water supply. Rich dry farm lands in Central Alberta and Saskatchewan. Lands yield bumper crops. 1923 wheat crop broke all records. Prize grains of the world raised here. Big returns in stock raising. Dairying very profitable. Climate unexcelled. Prosperity awaits you in agricultural garden spot of North America. Prices $18 to $50 an acre with 35 years to pay. Settlers pay only 7% of purchase price down. One year's free use of farm. Balance in 34 equal annual payments. The small payments leave you unhampered in making improvements. This is your chance of a lifetime! Write M. E. THORNTON, Supt. of Colonization, Room 520 Canadian Pacific Railway Building, Calgary, Canada. (cx99)

MAN KILLED BY AUTO IS 147TH VICTIM

Julius Schaeffer Fatally Injured by Truck of Kuna Bros. Meat Co.

Julius Schaeffer, 56 years old, 2304 Sidney street, a horseshoer, died at city hospital yesterday afternoon of skull fracture suffered at 7 a. m. yesterday when knocked down at Texas and Gravois avenues by an automobile truck of Kuna Bros. Meat Co., 1819 Geyer avenue, driven by Charles Brestal, 21, of 2927 Wyoming street, a chauffeur.

This is the 147th automobile fatality in St. Louis this year as compared with 133 for all of last year.

Brestal was arrested on a charge of felonious wounding and careless driving and released on bond before Schaeffer died. Rearrest of Brestal was ordered late yesterday.

Injuries in Auto Acident Fatal to East St. Louisan.

Arthur Ford, 25 years old, of the Arlington Hotel, East St. Louis, died last night at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, from injuries suffered at 2 a. m. Friday when an automobile in which he was riding had a head-on collision with another car on Lake Drive.

Ford was riding with Arthur Newman, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel; Mrs. Newman, W. H. Deither, Arlington Hotel, and Miss Katharine Payne of 2024 North Twenty-third street, this city. Their car struck one operated by Archie Steneck of Edgemont Station. Steneck, Mrs. Newman and Miss Payne were cut and bruised, but not seriously injured.

Two Autos Fail to Stop After Running Down Men.

Henry Moore, 38 years old, 151 Victor street, a laborer, was seriously injured at 8 o'clock last night when knocked down at Seventh and Dorcas streets by an automobile which failed to stop. He sufered a fracture of the skull and internal injuries. Another automobile failed to stop after striking John Sweeney, 65, a laborer, living at Broadway and Madison street, as he was crossing Broadway at Cass avenue last night. He sustained lacerations of the head.

Others injured in automobile accidents last night were: Mrs. Theresa Broeckelman, 43, of 907 Bates avenue, possible skull fracture, struck at King's highway boulevard and Botanical avenue. George Harwath, 50, of 1815 South Eighth street, fractured ribs and possible internal injuries, struck at Broadway and Olive street. Charles Joerder, 42, of 3429 Eads avenue, fractured skull and internal injuries, struck at Grand boulevard and Park avenue.

KATHERINE GALLOWAY HELD ON SHOPLIFTING CHARGE

Husband Says Former Prima Donna of Municipal Opera Here Is Now in Sanitarium.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—When the case of Miss Marion Cooper, 35, Germantown, Pa., charged with shoplifting, was called in Women's Court today it developed she was Mrs. Katherine Eithier, a former opera singer of 312 West Forty-second street, who mysteriously disappeared Wednesday.

Mrs. Eithier, under the name of Katherine Galloway, was prima donna in the St. Louis Municipal Opera in 1921.

Her husband, Alphonse Eithier, an actor, told Magistrate Marsh she was in a sanitarium, where she has been under observation since he bailed her out of a city prison Wednesday night. She was held in $500 bail for trial in special sessions.

Miss Katherine Galloway was the prima donna of the St. Louis Municipal Opera Company during a part of the 1921 season, but resigned on June 21 of that year, announcing that ill health was the principal cause of her retirement. She left St. Louis a few weeks later for New York, stating that she was to have a part in a Shubert musical production that fall.

While ill health was given as the cause of her retirement from the St. Louis engagement, in which she proved popular with the opera patrons, friction with Fred A. Bishop, then stage director of the opera company, was a factor in her resignation.

SAYS COUNTY JUDGE WAS INTERESTED IN ROAD WORK

Responding to mandamus proceedings to force his approval of a $1200 bill presented by Emil Steffen for improvements on Hancock avenue, between John street and South Broadway, Presiding Judge Richard Smiley of the St. Louis County Court yesterday charged that Associate Judge John C. Steffen, a brother of Emil, was interested in the project, and, therefore, the contract for it was illegal and void.

The contract for the improvement work was let to Emil Steffen by Associate Judges Steffen and Sheerin in Judge Smiley's absence. When Emil Steffen sought to collect for the work done Judges Steffen and Sheerin approved payment and Judge Smiley disapproved, whereupon the contractor applied for a writ of mandamus. The matter is pending before Circuit Judge McElhinney.

John C. Steffen was with the John C. Steffen Contracting Co. until his election to the County Court.

TELLS HOW SURGEONS MAKE OVER FACES

Dr. Coughlin of St. Louis Says Plastic Surgery Is Proven Success.

Chins, noses and ears may be repaired, adjusted and altered. Greek profiles may be made to look a la Roman and vice versa. Nature can be aided and improved upon.

These facts, and they are facts, were brought out by a St. Louis surgeon, Dr. William T. Coughlin, in a serious, though non-technical discussion before the Western Surgical Association at its recent convention in Colorado Springs, which was attended by more than 200 surgeons from Western States. Dr. Coughlin is professor of surgery at St. Louis University and one of the chiefs-of-staff at St. John's Hospital.

There was not time in the World War to do justice to the art of facial surgery, Dr. Coughlin said, but the experience gained from handling hundreds of cases where faces had been marred by shells is proving of inestimable value now. War veterans form a large percentage of those whose faces are being restored, he said, but those who were born with certain defects are almost as eager for changes.

Some of Made-Over Cases.

He explained in detail how a person lacking in chin can be made to resemble Jack Dempsey, to some extent at least, by piling up skin tissue over the jaw bone; how noses can be extended, upraised or set back and cartilage inserted to keep them that way; how shattered jaw bones may be replaced with shin bones.

Of seven cases cited by Dr. Coughlin, the most striking, perhaps, was that of a woman school teacher who had very little chin. Being obliged to come into contact with the public, she worried over her deformity and even had thoughts of suicide. Then the magic of modern surgery stepped in and brought her chin to the front. Today she is happy and, while not exactly beautiful, will pass in the proverbial crowd.

There was also the case of a woman who had a "dishface" profile—her profile was very flat and her nose appeared to have been smashed. Her nostrils were slit and rib cartilage was inserted. Today her nose is outstanding and could not recede had it the desire to do so. An X-ray picture shows the cartilage, but to the unaided eye the nose bears no evidence of alteration.

One's Own Bones Best.

Incidentally, a nasal operation was performed upon Fannie Brice, actress, recently. Miss Brice objected to continuing with a hooked nose, despite her manager's protests that it added to her personality, and had the hook eliminated.

It is best for the patient to supply his own missing parts, the facial surgeon believes. In a case where a man's jawbone has been shattered by a bullet, a strip 10 inches long and three-fourths of an inch wide was taken from his shin and transplanted to the jaw. It's still there and is getting along nicely, the patient being able to talk and chew like any other man.

After experimenting with gold, silver and rubber plates, it has been proved that nothing is so good for transplantings as the patient's own ribs. The fourth and fifth ribs are especially favored. Wounds in the skull are permanently patched with rib cartilage.

The principles of plastic surgery were developed years ago, but the war gave fresh impetus to their application, Dr. Coughlin continued. Never were they applied so well as now, he added, substantiating his statement with photographs.

Dr. Coughlin served in an American military hospital in France during the war.

MUNITIONS CHIEF FOR KAISER HERE ON VISIT

Baron Paul von Gontard and Family Guests of Mrs. Lily Busch.

Baron Paul von Gontard, director of German munition plants during the war and a personal friend of the former Kaiser, with his wife and two children is visiting Mrs. Lilly Busch of No. 1 Busch place. The Baroness before her marriage 22 years ago, was Miss Clara Busch and is a sister of August A. Busch.

The party arrived from Germany a week ago and will leave Jan. 5 for Pasadena, Cal.

The Baron could not be reached for an interview last night. He is understood to be a leader among German monarchists. August A. Busch told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that Von Gontard's stay in this country would be brief, as he plans to return to Germany after a short visit in Pasadena.

He was one of the men mentioned by former Ambassador James W. Girard in his book "My Four Years In Germany" as close friends and advisers of the Kaiser. He had charge of a division of the Krupp works, supervising the manufacture of ammunition for the German armies. His wife presided in a palace on Bendler strasse, Berlin, and was a social leader under the empire.

She inherited an eighth part of the Adolphus Busch estate, estimated at the time of his death to be worth $35,000,000. Her sister, Wilhelmina, married Edouard Scharrer, a Lieutenant in the German army, and she, too, moved to Germany. During the war the property of the Busch sisters in the United States was held by the alien property custodian.

TWO WOMEN KILLED BY POISON IN MEDICINE

Columbus, O., Doctors Reveal That They Unknowingly Gave Fatal Solution.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22.—Concluding several months of investigation, two prominent Columbus physicians, Dr. Jonathan Forman and Dr. E. J. Gordon, last night revealed that they had unknowingly administered poison to two women who died last September within a period of a week, and to a physician who recovered after having been dangerously ill for several days. All three were undergoing treatment for digestive disorders. A majority of the medical profession in the city aided Drs. Forman and Gordon in their investigation.

The victims, Mrs. Minnie C. Davies, Columbus, and Mrs. Nellie Paul, of Circleville, at first were supposed to have died of heart disease. Each was given an amount of a preparation, a solution of sulphate of barium antainingacacia., which rays of a fluroscope will not penetrate, thereby permitting the physician to observe its passage through the alimentary tract., Mrs. Davies was a patient of Dr. Forman and Mrs. Paul was treated by Dr. Gordon. Both died soon after the solution was administered.

Soon after the solution was given to Dr. W. D. Murphy, he became violently ill, and by reason of the fact that his stomach refused to hold the liquid, he was saved from possible death. Shortly before Mrs. Davies died, Dr. Forman purchased a supply of one of the drugs used in the solution from a local wholesaler.

Puzzled over the deaths of the women, although both were said to have suffered from diseases of the heart, Drs. Forman and Gordon decided to go over the medical history of each patient and called upon other physicians to aid them. After pursuing this course for a while it was decided to have an analysis made of the drugs used in making the solution and what was supposed to have been acacia was found to be almost chemically pure arsenic. Acacia and arsenic have the same physical qualities.

Families of the dead women were said to hold the physicians blameless.

SALESMAN DIES SUDDENLY IN DOWNTOWN FURNITURE STORE

Joseph M. Frankel, 59, Had Suffered From Diabetes a Year Ago.

Joseph M. Frankel, 59 years old, 5630 Pershing avenue, died suddenly at 5:30 p. m. yesterday at the May-Stern Furniture Co., Twelfth boulevard and Olive street, where he had been employed for 30 years as a salesman.

He became suddenly ill at 5:15 p. m. A doctor, who happened to be in the store as a customer, administered first aid. Frankel suffered with diabetes a year ago and it is thought the present ailment was superinduced by that attack.

He is survived by his widow, who was visiting in South St. Louis last night and did not learn of the death until her return home at a late hour.

For 25 years Frankel has arrived at the store each morning about 6:45 o'clock, opening the store. He elected that task himself after entering the employ of the company and continued it voluntarily.

TURKEY PRICES DOWN 12 CENTS SINCE THANKSGIVING

Those who didn't eat turkey Thanksgiving day, because the price was a bit too steep, will have a chance to avenge themselves on the bird, for turkey has dropped 12 cents a pound. Indications are that the price will not advance much before it is time to purchase Christmas dinner.

Less than a month ago, aspirants for turkey on Thanksgiving were asked to pay 50 cents the pound at most places, the lowest quotation at that time being about 45 cents.

Most of the dealers at Union Market yesterday were willing to sell their turkeys for 40 cents for each pound—5 cents lower than a month ago, and one was selling the bird for as low as 33 cents a pound. One dealer explained the drop in price being due to the inclemency of the weather, but just what the atmospheric conditions had to do with the drop he didn't know.

WHITE CHRISTMAS FOR FRANCE

Deep Mantle of Snow Annoyance to Railroads.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—That old-fashioned Christmas, always wished for but seldom seen, will be celebrated in France this year if the weather prophets are not altogether wrong. The country is already under a deep mantle of snow to the annoyance of such prosaic folk as the railroad men who in the central regions particularly are calling fondly for volunteers to dig out the tracks. Many villages there, as well as in the Alps and Pyrenees have been cut off from the rest of France, and their Christmas is likely to be a fast rather than a feast.

All persons who have the means to do so are spending the holiday season on the shores of the Mediterranean, but the usually, mild climate in that region at present is being varied by tempests of considerable intensity.

Compare J. Orlick's Canaries

With any birds offered for sale. Their wonderful song has won the admiration of hundreds of satisfied customers.

"I am more than pleased."
"I am well satisfied."
"The singer cannot be any better."
"We are perfectly delighted."

Are only a few of the praises I receive. My canaries are strong and healthy, bred and kept in large, sunny flying rooms until they are 5 to 6 months old. Their training is backed by 35 years of experience, with only one aim—to produce high-grade singers.

There are more fine rollers in full song in my house than in all other places combined.

J. Moser for his consoling words; pallbearers; St. Ann's Married Ladies' Society; Wacker-Helderle Undertaking Co., and for the beautiful floral offerings.
GEORGE KATHMAN, Son;
KATE WERGES, Daughter,
AND FAMILY. (c)

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends for their kind consideration and expressions of sympathy during our sad bereavement in the loss of our dear husband and father, Emil A. Roebke, and for the many beautiful floral offerings. We wish to especially thank Rev. Press for his kind words of condolence and to the members of Good Hope Lodge No. 218, A. F. & A. M., Compton Circle No. 325, P. H. C. and Elks Lodge, for their participation.
MRS. MARY ROEBKE AND SON.

We wish to thank our many friends and relatives for their kindness and sympathy shown us in our late sad hour of bereavement in the loss of our dear son and brother, Christy C. Findlon, and for their many beautiful floral offerings. We especially thank the Rev. Father Lenik for his kind and consoling words. Also Mr. M. Guy Hardin and his friends of Stockton Post for their wonderful services. Also the pallbearers and the undertaker, Wm. C. Movdell, for their kind and efficient service.
FINDLON-STEPHENS FAMILY.

We wish to thank our many friends and relatives for their kindness and sympathy shown us in our late sad hour of bereavement in the loss of my beloved husband and our dear father, Henry P. Siegel, and for their many beautiful floral offerings. We especially thank the Rev. H. L. Reader for his kind and consoling words, the employes of the H. P. Siegel Plating Co., the pallbearers, Occidental Lodge No. 163, A. F. and A. M.; St. Aldemar Commandery No. 18, K. T., and the undertaker, George L. Pleitsch, for his very efficient service.
Katie Siegel (nee Murphy), wife; Harry J., Edward W. and Eleanor A. Siegel, children.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to all our relatives and friends for their sympathy and kindness shown us in our late sad bereavement in the loss of my dear wife and our dear mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Mrs. Antonia Stoll, our especial thanks to the Rev. M. Clarke, for his kind words of consolation; to the United Ladies' Aid Society, and to the pallbearers; also for the many and beautiful floral offerings. THE BEREAVED FAMILY.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope

BREAKING HOMES. — Report the condition to the prohibition officer of East St. Louis.

M. J. B.—You can find a list of the actors in question in the World Almanac.

MRS. M. A. H.—We would advise you to take the books to a secondhand dealer to ascertain their value.

THANK YOU—Civilians are employed at the Air Intermediate Depot, Scott Field, Ill. Application for employment may be made by mail or in person; the mail address is as given above.

T. Z. S.—To remove ink spots the fabric is soaked in warm water, then it is squeezed out and spread upon clean piece of linen. Apply a few drops of liquid ammonia of a specific gravity of 0.891 to the spot, and dab it next with a wad of cotton which has been saturated with a dilute phosphoric acid. After repeating the process several times and drying the piece in the sun, the ink spot will have disappeared without leaving the slightest trace.

J. L.—Crystallization of honey does not harm the honey and the crystals can easily be dissolved by heating the honey, which should be done in a double boiler or other kind of water bath. If the temperature does not go beyond 106 degrees Fahrenheit, there is little danger that either color or flavor will be affected. Honey should be kept in a dry place or it will absorb moisture and spoil. Ordinarily the safest places for honey are the warmest places. To clarify honey, melt down the pure honey in a double boiler of porcelain or earthernware and strain while hot through a flannel cloth dipped in hot water. This dissolves the crystals and converts the honey into a uniform thick syrup. The dark coloring of the honey does not indicate that the honey is not good.

MRS. A. B. W.—The Missouri Botanical Garden, which is popularly known as Shaw's Garden, was first started between 1840 and 1850, as the private grounds of Henry Shaw, an Englishman, who had settled in St. Louis as a merchant in 1819, and retired from active business in 1840. In 1858 the proprietor conceived and began to put into execution a plan for converting his garden into a scientific institution, somewhat after the model of the famous Kew Gardens of England. Mr. Shaw died in 1889, leaving practically his entire estate, valued at several million dollars, as an endowment for the garden, the management of which was entrusted to a board of 15 trustees. There are 50 acres included in the garden. The garden is open to the public every day in the year except New Year's, Fourth of July, Labor Day and Christmas; week days from 8 a. m. until one-half hour after sunset; Sundays from November to April, 1 p. m. until sunset; from April to November, 2 p. m. until sunset. No charge is made for admittance. In establishing the garden, Mr. Shaw contemplated providing pleasure with incidental instruction for the public; training for gardeners and botanists, and contributing directly to botanical knowledge. A course of study and manual work for garden pupils is conducted at the garden.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

ADOPT.—You can adopt a child in any state, and we cannot say which state would suit you best for this purpose.

CRAZY CAT.—A man owning an automobile truck will need a chauffeur's license in order to operate it.

P. S. M.—Write to the State Game Warden, Springfield, Ill., for information regarding hunting there.

ANXIOUS. — As you signed a written contract, they can probably sue and get judgment in spite of what your friend told you. However, you might consult a lawyer.

C. R.—It would be safe to marry again under the circumstances, but if your first husband ever turned up, your second marriage would not be legal.

W. S. K.—If there was a written contract, suit will not be barred until 1926. If it was merely an oral contract, then suit was barred five years afterward, in 1921.

ANXIOUS.—You have a right to manufacture the safety strap provided that in doing so you would not infringe any valid patent. If you are satisfied as to that you can go ahead. However, it might be desirable to consult a patent attorney before doing so.

"TOUGH LUCK."—If you signed a chattel mortgage or a contract providing for retention of title, they can take the furniture back at any time after you fail to make a payment. If you have trouble, consult the Legal Aid Bureau, in the Municipal Courts Bldg., Fourteenth and Market streets.

NEGLECTED WIFE. — You can probably collect your back alimony by a suit, even though his property has been put in his wife's name. We suggest that you consult a lawyer. You can ask him to take the case on a contingent fee.

P.-D. READER.—The collector usually sends a postal to the taxpayer when he has an address available, though it is not required. (2) The collector has only power to collect taxes on money in the bank when such information has come to the assessor and he has assessed it for that year. The authorities could not assess and collect taxes for prior years.

P. D.—An alien who took out his first papers prior to the Armistice and who claimed exemption from the draft because he was an alien, cannot take out his final papers until 1926. An alien who took out his first papers after the Armistice may or may not be granted his final papers now, depending on the circumstances of his case and on the judge before whom his application comes up.

CHILI.—There is some doubt at present as to whether a business such as the one stated is within the provisions of the Bulk Sales Law, but probably it is not. However, as you did not comply with the provisions of the Bulk Sales Law and as there is some doubt, it might be cheaper for you to settle for a small amount than it would be for you to fight the case. Of course you can hold the man who sold the business to you liable for this, and can deduct whatever you have to pay from the amount of the notes which he holds.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

READER.—We suspect the trouble may be found in the nose. A sinus abscess would account for the pains, not only in the nose but in the chest.

DAILY READER.—The trouble will not cause any other trouble than in the joint affected, but it should not be neglected. We think the child should be seen by a competent orthopedist.

GRAND.—You are probably using the solution too strong. Dilute a little with water. This solution is not intended to do more than clean the mucous surfaces of the nose. You may try spraying afterward with pinoleum oil. If no improvement, consult a physician.

B. L. R.—The best method of removing a wart is by the electric needle, or by excision. Simpler methods often suffice, touching with oil of cinnamon or trichlor acetic acid (the latter to be used with caution). For excessive perspiration of the hand, correct any deviations from normal in the health. A level teaspoon of precipitated sulphur in milk, to be taken morning and evening. Locally, the following may be used: Naptholis, 2½ drams; aquae cologniensis, 6 drams; spts. vini gallici, 5½ ounces.

PHILIP. — The following is a formula for the cure of dandruff and for falling hair: A certain amount of dandruff in the hair is normal, it is the natural exfoliation of the upper layer of the skin of the scalp. When it becomes excessive it generally indicates some disturbance in the scalp and is very often found to precede falling of the hair. Excessive dandruff, therefore, merits attention of those who wish to preserve the hair. There are three forms of baldness from a practical viewpoint: senile baldness, premature baldness and a symptomatic baldness. The first two are not amendable to treatment from the standpoint of a cure, although in premature baldness the eventual loss of the hair may be delayed somewhat. It is in symptomatic baldness that treatment is effective, and it is to this that the following applies. Disorders of the general health is often reflected in the loss of the hair and this should be considered in such cases any departure from the normal health being sought for and corrected. Locally the treatment may be summed up in one word, "stimulation." Weekly, semiweekly or even daily cleansing of the scalp should be practiced. This is best done with the following wash: Saponis Virdis, four ounces alcohol, two ounces. Dissolve with heat and filter. After shampooing with this the hair is thoroughly rinsed in clear water and dried as thoroughly as possible and the following applied: Carbolic acid, 15 grains; glycerine, 2 drams; cologne water, enough to make an ounce. Make a part in the hair and drop the mixture on the scalp at intervals of an inch and rub in with a soft brush, a tooth brush serves well. Cover the scalp by this method, making one part after another. After a time the shampooing may be done less often but the mixture should be applied faithfully and persistently until the hair ceases to fall or the case must be abandoned as hopeless.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our relatives, friends and neighbors for their sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during our recent bereavement by the death of our dearly beloved son, grandson, nephew and cousin, George. We especially thank the Rev. McAtee and the pallbearers; also the employes of the Curtis Manufacturing Co., MacCarthy-Pardue Motor Co., Tower Grove Bank and Ziegenhein Bros. Undertaking Co. for their efficient service.
MR. AND MRS. A. MICHAEL. (c)

The family of the late Emil A. Roebke wish to extend their heartfelt gratitude to the relatives and many friends for their kind expressions of sympathy, floral offerings and assistance tendered during their recent and sad bereavement and especially thank the Rev. Press, pallbearers and fraternal organizations whose membership was so dear to him.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for their sympathy and kindness shown us in our late sad bereavement in the loss of our dear brother, brother-in-law and uncle, Edward A. Schwenker; also for the beautiful floral offerings. We especially thank the Rev. Mr. Poth, Washington Lodge No. 24, I. O. O. F.; Oak Hill Tent No. 112, K. O. T. M., and Mr. Kriegshauser, undertaker, for their kind and efficient services.
THE BEREAVED FAMILY.

We wish to express our thanks to our relatives and friends, the co-workers and principals of the Koken companies and the dear old associates of the Home Quoit Club, for their expressions and offering of sympathy and love in our bereavement at the death of our dear brother Fred, and for the kindly and consoling services of Pastor Kramer of the Pilgrim Evangelical Church, the pallbearers and chaplain and the brothers of the Concordia Lodge, I. O. O. F. and the Ziegenhein Bros., all for which we are sincerely grateful.
SOPHIA, CHRIS AND EDWARD VOGLER.

SONS. (c)

In loving memory of our dear mother, Katherine Poehler, died Dec. 20, 1922:
Dearest mother, how we miss you
Since from earth you passed away;
Our hearts are filled with sorrow
As we think of you today.
Sadly missed by HER CHILDREN.

In memory of my dear wife and mother, Mary Stuart, who departed this life four years ago, Dec. 20, 1919:
Faithful and honest to the end of her days,
Upright and just in all her ways;
Forgotten to the world to some she may be,
But dear to our heart she will always be.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND SON.

In loving memory of Lydia Stoeckkel, entered eternal rest Dec. 20, 1918:
None know the depth of our regret.
We remember when others forget.
Only those who have lost a loved one
Can feel the pain of parting with one.
Until we meet in heaven, sadly mourned by your heartbroken
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHER.

In memory of our dearly beloved son and brother, William J. Finnegan, who died on Christmas, 1922:
Dearest William, how much we miss you
Since from earth you passed away;
And our hearts are filled with sorrow
As we think of you today.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

In sad but sweetest memory of our beloved husband, father and son, William F. O. Saul, who departed this life one year ago today, Dec. 23, 1922:
Dear sweet daddy, how we miss you,
No one but us can tell.
Sadly missed by his dear
WIFE, SON, MOTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving memory of Andrew Stoeckel, entered eternal rest Dec. 23, 1917:
Husband and father, dear, as Christmas draws near,
It brings no cheer but fills us with tears;
We will never find another who will fill your vacant place.
God only knows how we miss you.
Sadly mourned by your heartbroken
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, Fred Hellmann, who departed this life five years ago today, Dec. 22, 1918:

A happy home we once enjoyed;
How sweet the memories still.
But death has left a vacant chair
This world can never fill.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Margaret Kramer, who departed this life two years ago, Dec. 23, 1921:
Though earthly ties are broken,
In life we will meet no more,
Our thoughts are with you, dear mother,
On yonder distant shore.
The God who gave has taken
And heaven our mother has won.
Although our hearts are aching,
The will of God is done.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

In memory of our dear mother, Minnie Kamp, who departed this life five years ago, Dec. 19:
We saw you suffer and heard you sigh,
Could do nothing but sit and cry.
We saw you sinking hour by hour,
Yet we did all within our power;
But now you calmly sleep the past,
While our sorrow for you will always last.
How hard it was to part with you,
The one so loving, kind and true.
Sadly missed by
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN. (c)

In memory of my beloved husband, Ira Rohland of Hillsboro, Mo., died Dec. 22, 1922:
Bade no one a last farewell,
Said goodbye to none,
His loving heart had ceased to beat
Before we knew he was gone.
His cheery smile and kindly ways are pleasing to recall.
He had a kind word for each one
And died beloved by all.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, FATHER, SISTER, RELATIVES AND MANY FRIENDS.

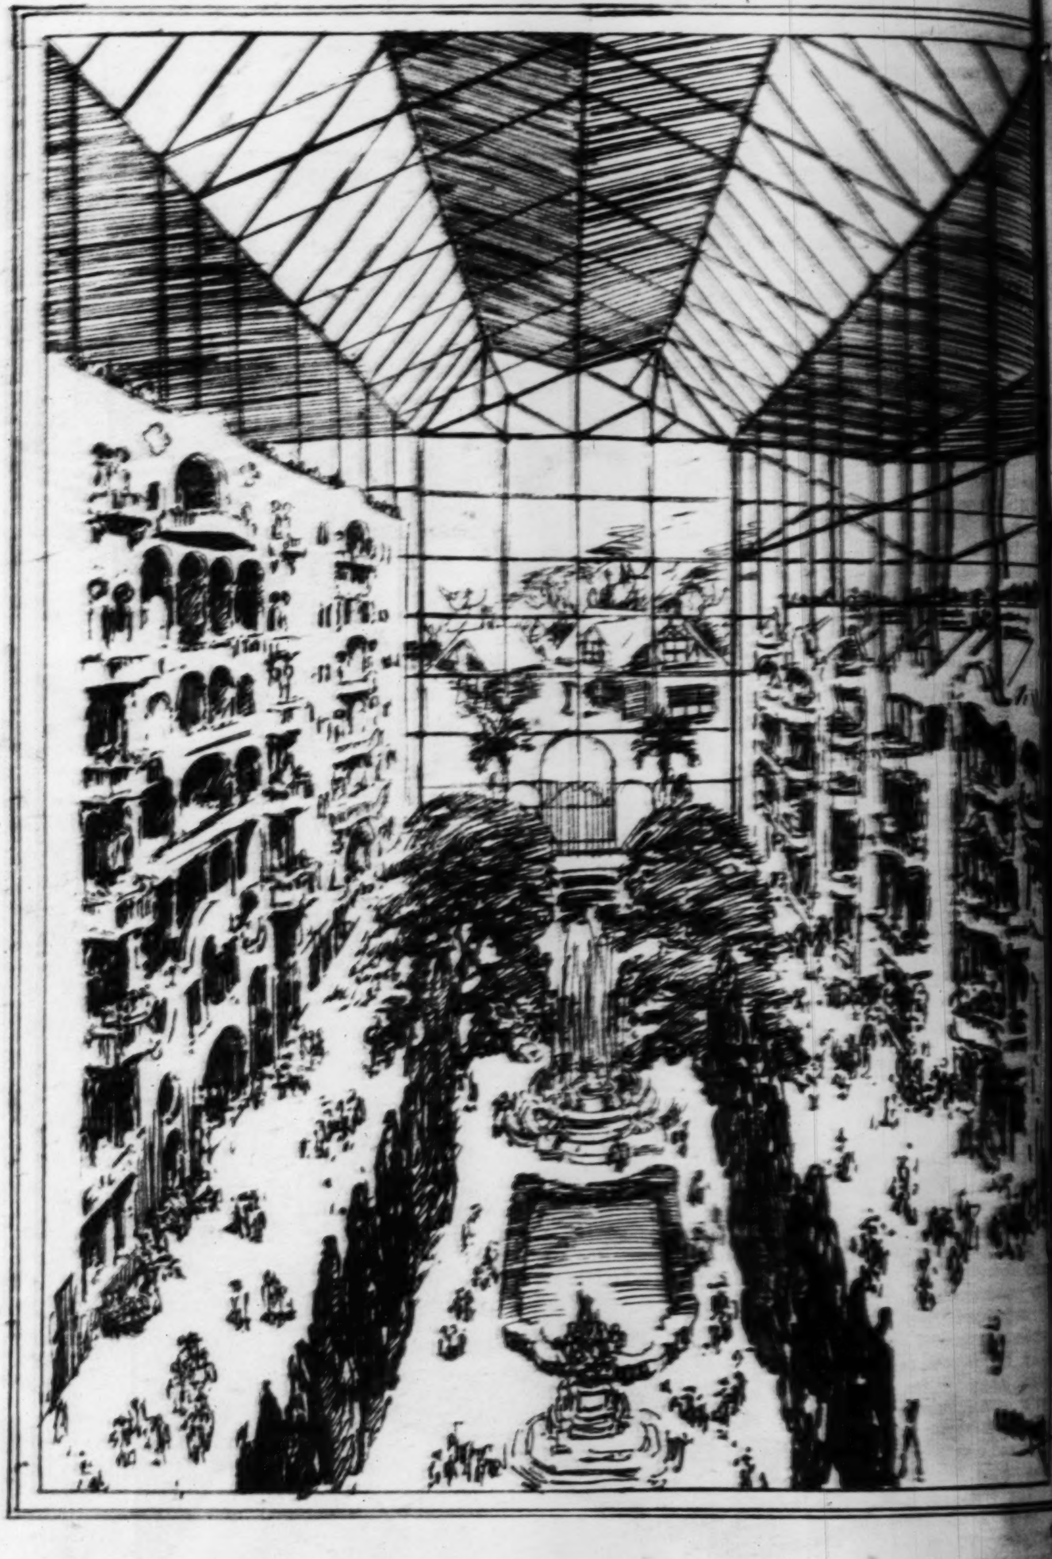
Why Radio Communication Suddenly Ceased About Midnight

From a Drawing by W. A. Byrnes

A Whole Town Under a Glass Ro

Is Architect's Proposal

Practicable and economical for population of 15,000 to 65,000 persons to dwell in vast structure like a conservatory, says Chicago man—No dust, smoke, ashes or wintry weather, and rain only when the janitor turns it on!—Either detached houses or apartments could be built in enclosed area, and cost of structure half a mile square, affording these unusual comforts, is put at $16,735,000



Perpetual summer would reign in a glass-enclosed town, even in midwinter, for it would be [illegible] unit and the temperature controlled as desired, says the planner. The streets can be boulevarded, wi[illegible] sorts of vegetation. The buildings will be the same as conventional houses in tropical climates— [illegible] shells built for privacy and not requiring heavy walls. They must have watertight roofs, because of [illegible] frequent artificial showers which will be provided for maintaining the vegetation and for air c[illegible] ing. These sprayheads in the big roof will be very efficient also for fire protection.

HOW the world of sober fact overtakes and outdistances its fiction mongers of only a few years back is illustrated again in the amazing proposition which a Chicago architect has just made through the pages of a conservative engineering journal.

But before taking up in detail this revolutionary plan for better housing conditions, drawn by a member of the exacting architectural profession, it will be interesting to glance at what a once-famous dreamer imagined along the same lines.

When Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward" was first published, some 35 years ago, his fanciful description of life in the year 2000 A. D. created a sensation. And to many readers the most interesting feature of the idealistic society which he portrayed was the greater amount of creature comforts enjoyed by the people when all co-operated, under Government regulations, for the common good.

A picturesque particular of the story, and one which greatly impressed its hero, "Julian West," who had been overmesmerized in 1887 and only awakened 113 years later, was their independence of the rain.

"Dr. Leete" and "Edith Leete," whose excavations in their garden had disclosed the subterranean sleeping chamber of "Julian West," and who had revived him, told the survivor of a bygone era that they would take him to dinner "at the dining house." But when a heavy rainstorm came up during the day "West" thought the plan would be abandoned.

"I was much surprised," says the narrator, "when at the dinner hour the ladies appeared, prepared to go out but without either rubbers or umbrellas. The mystery was explained when we found ourselves on the street, for a continuous waterproof covering had been let down, so as to inclose the sidewalk and turn it into a well lighted and perfectly dry corridor which was filled with a stream of ladies and gentlemen dressed for dinner.

"Edith Leete, with whom I walked, seemed much interested in learning what appeared to be entirely new to her, that in stormy weather the streets of the Boston of my day had been impassable except to persons protected by umbrellas, boots and heavy clothing.

"'Were sidewalk coverings not used at all?' she asked.

"'They were used,' I explained, but in a scattered and utterly unsystematic way, being private enterprises. She said to me that at the present time all the streets were provided against inclement weather in the manner I saw, the apparatus being rolled out of the way when it was unnecessary. She intimated that it would be considered an extraordinary imbecility to permit the weather to have any effect on the social movements of the people.

"Dr. Leete, who was walking ahead, overhearing something of our talk, turned to say that the difference between the age of individualism and that of concert was well characterized by the fact that, in the nineteenth century when it rained the people of Boston put up 300,000 umbrellas over as many heads, and in the twentieth century they put up one umbrella over all the heads."

So much for Bellamy and his ingenious book, which still has readers, although H. G. Wells and other authors have described the future of humanity since Bellamy wrote. Now consider what Samuel R. Lewis, Chicago architect, proposes. He says it is not only a feasible undertaking, as a building problem, but would be an economical one, too. And he tells about it in the Journal of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

To put a whole town under a glass roof—that is all Mr. Lewis suggests.

Or to roof with glass a residential section of a city, and heat it as a unit. And by a residential section he doesn't mean just a city block or two, where open-handed millionaires might enjoy a comfort denied to persons of lower financial rating. No. He says the idea can be applied to a district one-half mile square, with residents varying from 15,000 to 65,000 in number, according as apartments or homes of two or more storie[illegible] built therein.

Perpetual summer would reign in such a[illegible] closure, even in midwinter, for both tempe[illegible] and moisture could be controlled as desired. T[illegible] would be no smoke nor dust. There would b[illegible] handling of coal or ashes, no pipes or radiators, [illegible] no rain except when wanted, and then the j[illegible] would turn it on!

For this permanent Palm Beach atmosphere, [illegible] still other desirable features mentioned below, [illegible] has worked out the cost. Upon the scale indi[illegible] with accommodations for between 15,000 and 65,0[illegible] population, the structure and its central heat[illegible] plant would cost $16,735,000, he says.

If detached residences were built in the inclos[illegible] each of the 2208 householders would have to p[illegible] about $2100 extra for "the privilege of living in [illegible] conservatory." As an apartment proposition, [illegible] owners would save enough in coal alone "to cr[illegible] a substantial sinking fund and pay the interest [illegible] all that the project would cost beyond conventi[illegible] structures," Lewis declares. He writes in part:

"It has come to be pretty generally admitted th[illegible] conventional central station heating, as by hot wa[illegible] or steam, cannot be done at any less cost to the [illegible] dividual building served than the cost of operating the individual plants. Factors such as space [illegible]

Night brought a measure of temporary relief. The portion of the leg below the jaws of the trap, its circulatory apparatus cut off by the pressure, was slowly growing numb. By just that much was the pain relieved. As the weary hours wore on, this part gradually became completely nerveless. The fox resorted to the last measure of safety. Twisting till his powerful teeth could close on the trapped member, though the movement woke new pangs in his tortured body he grimly set to work. Horrible moments passed.

The trap which had caught him had gripped high on his leg, for its designers had ingeniously arranged the spring so that when sprung it would literally leap from the ground and bite high, thus getting a good grip, with small chances of losing its prey. It was what is known to the trade as a "jump trap," and was noted for its efficiency.

The fox continued gnawing. The severed foot fell to the ground. There was only a small shred of flesh caught in the trap now. A quick pull, and——

Another scream testified to the effort and its failure. The trap, besides its spring feature, embo fiendish intricacy of design. It was a "double-jaw" trap; above the jaws the fox had done its terrible bit of was another pair of biting member good two inches of bone and muscle fast.

The night passed. With the day fever and most horrible thirst. Th throbbed frantically. The fear retur

The fox had enemies. If one of the the trail now there would be nothing eaten—alive! Fever, horrible tormen maddening thirst and blind fear in gether had their way of the victim.

THE PRICE OF THOSE FURS YOU WEAR

The sufferings of trapped animals are more dreadful than any tortures devised in the Inquisition or atrocities of the Chinese, declares writer — In quest for a humane trap, American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals recently offered a prize to inventors—Of about 300 designs submitted, none was practical and award was withheld

By F. GREGORY HARTSWICK.

THROUGH the damp North Woods, along a trail which he thought he alone knew, a big red fox was trotting with the idea of getting a good meal somewhere and then holing up for a long sleep. He moved soundlessly but swiftly.

Suddenly there was a vicious clank and snap and with a yelp of pain the fox leaped and fell, twisting with agony. A trap had closed on his hind leg.

The fox rolled and writhed but could not loosen that steel grip. Every moment wrenched the torn muscles and tendons held in the relentless steel jaws; the tattered nerves telegraphed messages of unbelievable pain. Added to the physical torture was the horrible pang of fear—the dreadful unreasoning fear of the wild thing held against its will. Blindly the creature struggled, flinging its lithe body this way and that, dragging the heavy trap as far as its chain would allow, shrieking as the savage teeth of the jaws tore the wound anew, falling at last in exhaustion, eyes glazed, frothing at the mouth.

Night brought a measure of temporary relief. The portion of the leg below the jaws of the trap, its circulatory apparatus cut off by the pressure, was slowly growing numb. By just that much was the pain relieved. As the weary hours wore on, this part gradually became completely nerveless. The fox resorted to the last measure of safety. Twisting till his powerful teeth could close on the trapped member, though the movement woke new pangs in his tortured body he grimly set to work. Horrible moments passed.

The trap which had caught him had gripped high on his leg, for its designers had ingeniously arranged the spring so that when sprung it would literally leap from the ground and bite high, thus getting a good grip, with small chances of losing its prey. It was what is known to the trade as a "jump trap," and was noted for its efficiency.

The fox continued gnawing. The severed foot fell to the ground. There was only a small shred of flesh caught in the trap now. A quick pull, and——

Another scream testified to the effort and its failure. The trap, besides its spring feature, embodied another fiendish intricacy of design. It was what is called a "double-jaw" trap; above the jaws below which the fox had done its terrible bit of auto-surgery was another pair of biting members, so that a good two inches of bone and muscle were still held fast.

The night passed. With the day came fever—fever and most horrible thirst. The caught leg throbbed frantically. The fear returned.

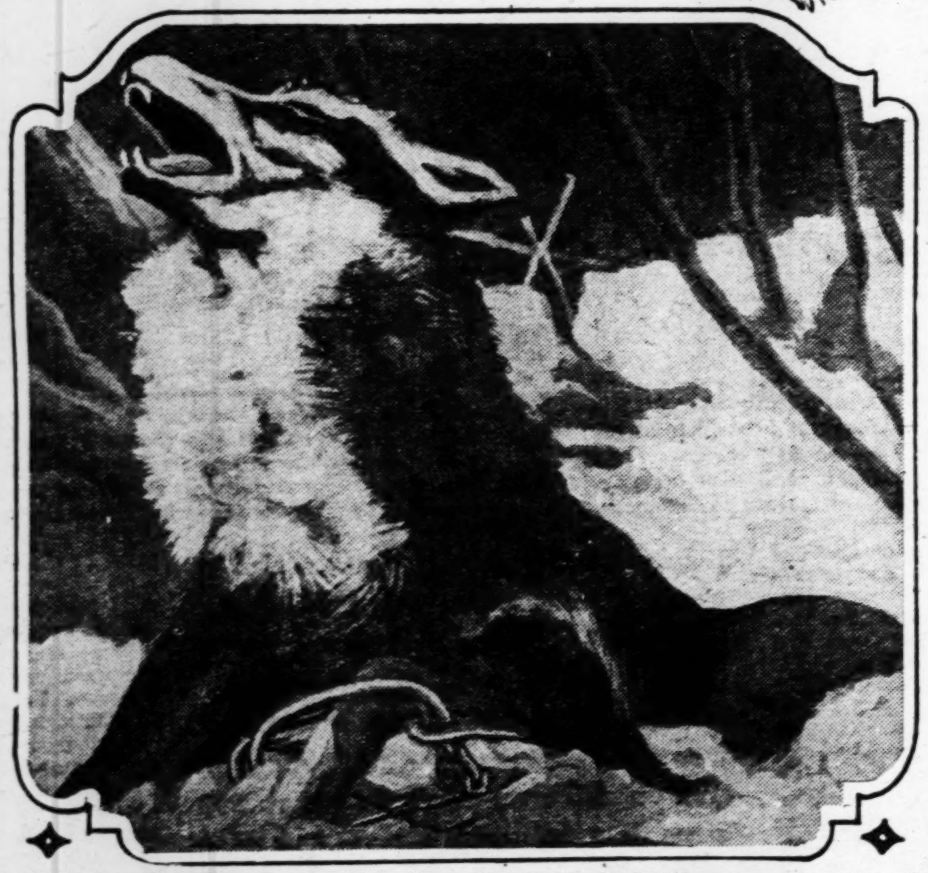
The fox had enemies. If one of them came along the trail now there would be nothing left but to be eaten—alive! Fever, horrible torment of the flesh, maddening thirst and blind fear in turn and together had their way of the victim.

This torture went on for days.

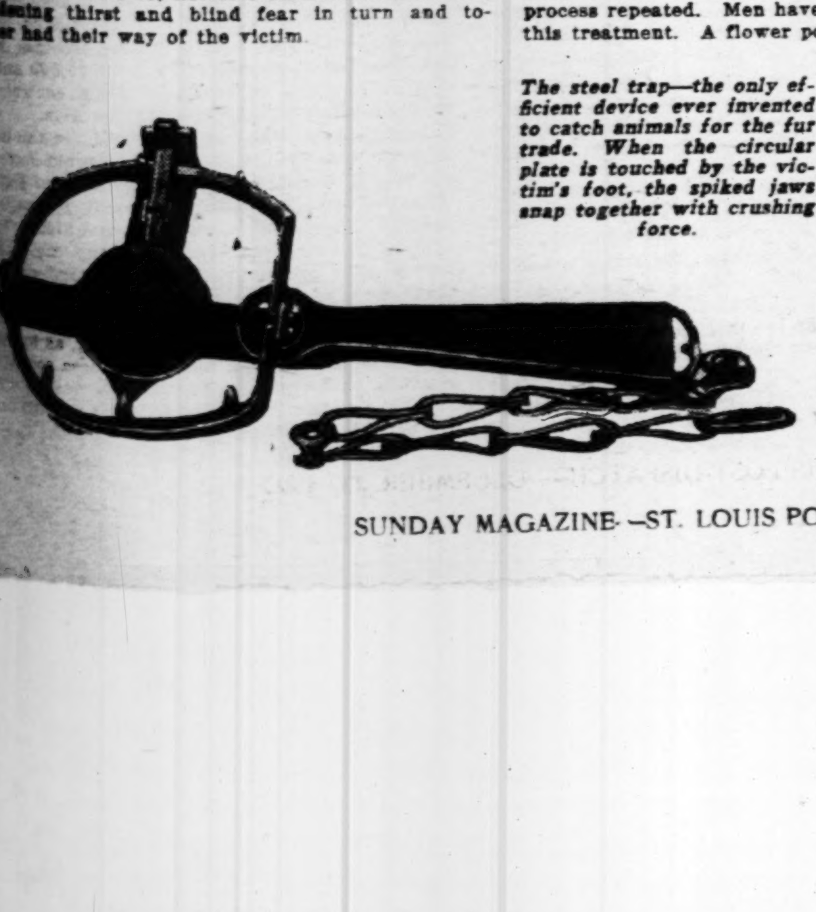
The Spanish Inquisitioners, who specialized in human agony, considered that they were successful if they could keep a human victim alive for a few hours. The Chinese, more subtle than their European brothers, studied torture carefully and devised means which could make a man linger in excruciating torment for perhaps two days.

In a book called "The Garden of Tortures," Octave Mirabeau describes in detail some of the devices he witnessed in the far land of Cathay. Few persons are able to read this book at a sitting. The descriptions are too horrible. Men are whipped with flexible white-hot steel rods which hiss their way deep into the flesh; the rod is held till it cools and the puffed, swollen muscles have closed over it; then it is torn out of the wound, reheated and the process repeated. Men have lived during an hour of this treatment. A flower pot is inverted on the victim's stomach, and under it placed a starved rat. Through the little hole in the bottom of the flower pot a red-hot rod is inserted. The rat, driven frantic by the torture of the hot iron, eats his way out through the victim's body.

These are but two of the many devices perfected through long years of experiment on prisoners. Let the girl who reads of them shudder as she draws her fur piece closer about her neck—and well may she shudder; for the victims of Chinese atrocities lived in agony less than one-tenth of the time that the animal which supplied that same fur piece lingered!



An agent of the Massachusetts S. P. C. A. went on a special trip to the North Woods to photograph trapped animals. Here is one of his pictures. This fox had been in the trap two days, and was at the end of his strength. Think of it the next time you put on your smart new fur piece.



The steel trap—the only efficient device ever invented to catch animals for the fur trade. When the circular plate is touched by the victim's foot, the spiked jaws snap together with crushing force.

Recently the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals offered a prize for the invention of a humane trap. About 300 designs were submitted. Dr. W. Reid Blair, veterinarian and pathologist of the New York Zoological Park, was selected to pass on these devices. His report was that not one of the models submitted was practical for the purpose specified. The society withheld its award.

To be practical a trap must embody three elements: simplicity of operation, portability and efficiency. There is no trap now existing which combines these three except the steel-jaw trap. Box traps or "ketch-alives" are clumsy; deadfalls are difficult of construction and obviously cannot be carried. A so-called "tree-trap" has been invented, in which a powerful jaw is mounted on a slanting tree in such a way that the animal disturbs the bait with its nose and brings the jaw down on the back of the neck; but these are not easy to disguise and their adjustment is difficult. Mr. Horton of the New York branch of the S. P. C. A. tells that one model of a tree trap was received which the committee was afraid to set, so powerful was its spring and so delicate its adjustment.

A trap, to operate successfully, must not smell of human touch and must be capable of concealment. The steel trap fulfills both these requirements. A trapper can carry many of them and place them at advantageous positions along game trails. They require no bait; they operate by the unguarded place

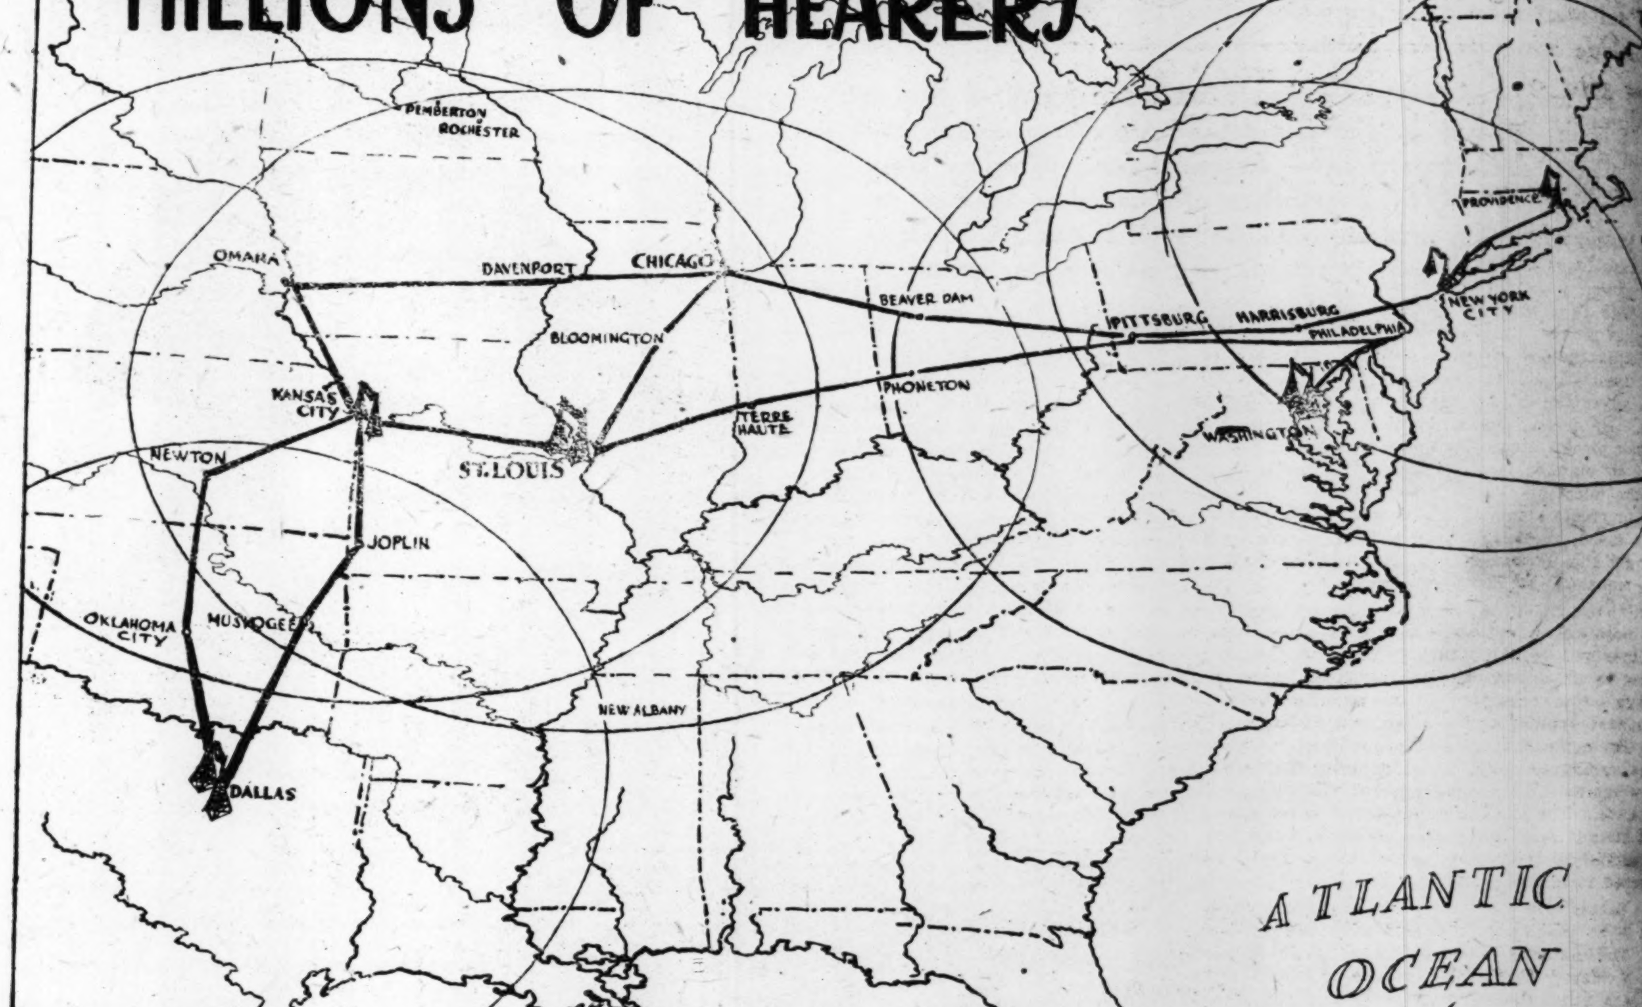
CARRYING THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO MILLIONS OF HEARERS



Map showing distribution of the six broadcasting stations which transmitted President Coolidge's voice as he read his message to Congress, and approximate area covered by each. The solid black lines mark the route of microphone circuits from the Capitol to the radio stations. Two such circuits were set up utilizing long distance telephone wires of the Bell system. The extra circuit was for use should line trouble develop during the address. It is noteworthy that the President's words, from beginning to end, were transmitted without a break so that an immense number of persons, in cities and villages, in homes, offices, and even on thousands of remote farms, heard the President's recommendations to Congress, covering a speaking period of little more than one hour.

History-making achievement carried to success Dec. 6 when Calvin M. Coolidge addressed Congress—How more than 5000 miles of telephone wire aided radio in carrying the executive's words across the continent—Speech was carried over two circuits at the same time and many experts and telephone company employes had a hand in the transmission—Long and arduous preliminary tests :: ::

PROBABLY you heard President Coolidge deliver his message to the Sixty-eighth Congress, Dec. 6.

All you had to do was to sit down at your radio set, put on the headphones and possibly adjust a crystal or turn a dial and the voice of the Chief Executive came in strong and clear.

Simple, wasn't it?

Yet it was not so simple as it may have seemed to you.

Considered only as a historical event, it was of the greatest importance and significance. For the first time in history the voice of a President conveying his message to Congress went out over the radio so that it might be heard by the people as well as by their elected representatives.

In keeping with so great and unusual an event science and practical engineering performed some wonderful feats in providing and maintaining the means by which the President's words were carried across the country and into your radio set and those of many hundreds of thousands of other listeners.

To make this possible the three great modern methods of communication—radio, telephone and telegraph joined forces.

If you thought of what you received on your radio set as direct and unaided radio reception you were mistaken.

When the President spoke before Congress at noon Dec. 6 it would, of course, have been possible to put his words out on the air from a radio broadcasting station in Washington. But those words would not have gone very far, or at least they would not have been audible for any great distance. It is possible for a radio listener in St. Louis to receive, for instance, broadcasting from Washington station WCAP under favorable conditions at night, but that performance could not be duplicated in the daytime, no matter how efficient the receiving apparatus, at this stage of radio science.

So successfully were the difficulties overcome that at the very time of day—around noon—when the power of radio reception is at its lowest ebb, the President's voice as broadcast through Post-Dispatch Station KSD was heard in 14 states as clearly and loudly as if the President had spoken in the KSD studio instead of in the national Capitol. Reports of the clear reception of the message have come from Rochester, Minn., to the north; New Albany, Miss., to the south; Hamilton, O., to the east, and Omaha, Neb., to the west, and from hundreds of intermediate points.

It would be impossible to estimate the size of the vast audience which heard a President's message over the radio for the first time in history. In hundreds of rural communities all business was suspended and farmers and their families came from miles around to hear the President's words through loud speakers. These speakers were to be found in the country banks, in flour mills and newspaper offices. In many rural sections loud speakers were installed in high schools so that all the pupils might listen to the President's words. Besides those who journeyed to the towns there were hundreds of farmers who remained at home and heard the broadcasting on their own sets.

In St. Louis groups of radio listeners were everywhere and there were more downtown listeners than had ever before heard Station KSD. Even if one had not been disposed to listen, it would have been difficult to avoid hearing the voice of President Coolidge in the downtown district of St. Louis. All of the radio stores had loud speakers in operation. Some of these instruments were so placed that they were easily heard on the street. Loud speakers were installed in brokers' offices and in the meeting rooms of corporation and bank directors.

Many radio fans took an extra hour or so off the noon period and went home to listen to the message. In many cases there were midday parties in homes, with guests specially invited to listen.

At the outset of the plan to broadcast the President's message it was apparent that so important an undertaking would not be considered a success unless the voice and words of the President were audible to all listeners as would be the broadcasts from their local stations. It also was apparent that there would not be a full measure of success unless equal opportunities of hearing should be afforded to users of crystal and tube sets.

This developed the problem not only of efficient daylight broadcasting of the message but of its transmission to many widely scattered points in the country without loss of intensity and clearness.

The use of telephone wires was the solution.

The mere statement that it was decided upon to use telephone wires in conveying the radio impulses does not give an idea of the magnitude of this undertaking. Even the radio fan, accustomed to long distances and remarkable communication feats, will more readily comprehend it when it is made known that 5165 miles of telephone wire was used to transmit the radio impulses set up by the President's voice. The air, in daylight, would have dissipated radio impulses within a few hundred miles of the point of origin, but the wires held them and carried them unimpaired to six of the largest broadcasting stations in the United States, one of which was Post-Dispatch station KSD.

That, too, sounds simple enough. But it wasn't.

Here was no mere matter of guiding the radio impulses onto a telephone wire and letting them find their way unaided. There was to be nothing haphazard about this engineering achievement, in which the services of the most capable executives and skilled technical men and mechanics of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. were enlisted.

At the outset it was decided that reliance must be placed solely on one wire circuit. Two

The Human Porcupine Goes Wolf-Killing

St. Paul man who calls himself the Canadian Cactus because his cowhide covering has 1200 sharp steel spikes sticking outward has gone into the big North Woods to give battle to timber wolves by the pack—Carries no gun, but has two-edged knife and double-bit ax with bayonet—Hopes to realize from Government bounty and sale of pelts :: :: :: ::

INGENIOUS as well as adventurous, a young man from St. Paul, who calls himself the "Canadian Cactus," but who might be described with equal accuracy as the human porcupine, has plunged into the big woods of Canada to kill timber wolves without firing a shot.

Stanley Carlson purposes to take a rather mean advantage of the brutes, looked at from one angle. He doesn't intend to give them even a bite for their pains. Stanley has armored himself against attack by claw or fang. When he projects himself into the midst of a pack of howling wolves he expects to create a species of consternation similar to that caused by the British Gen. Sir Julian Byng amongst the Germans when he took those strange new monsters, the armored tanks, into action at Cambrai.

If those wolves are wise in their day and generation, they will not try to tackle the Canadian Cactus. If they be unwise, as an amateur naturalist is entitled to assume, they surely are going to get stung. The sudden explosion of a huge nest of hornets will seem like a pleasant picnic, according to Carlson's theory, compared with the impact of the ferocious wolves against the unique suit of clothes worn by the Cactus. For the ingenious Mr. Carlson has provided himself with an outer covering, from top to toe, studded thickly with outsticking steel spikes, sharpened to a fine point.

The Cactus had his wolf-surprising outfit made to order in St. Paul by an expert architect of moccasins. The material is tough cowhide an eighth of an inch thick. The seams are like those in moccasins, each stitch being locked; if a thread breaks when the onset is fierce, the seam will not rip. The spikes, 1200 of them, are riveted into the leather. They are distributed over the outer surface at intervals of about one inch. A thousand of the spikes are of inch-length, the other 200 being five-eighths of an inch long. These latter are around the thumbs and under the arms.

The Cactus went first to Port Arthur, on the northern shore of Lake Superior, about 200 miles north of Duluth, Minn. Thence he struck out into the wooded wildernesses; and at a point about 100 miles north of Port Arthur he hopes to encounter enough wolves to keep him and them busy for the rest of the winter. The wolves, he predicts, will not be busy very long, as individuals. He is not going to shoot them. He carries no firearms. The sound of a rifle would tend to frighten off the survivors. The Cactus doesn't wish to scare away the wolves. He needs their ears.

"Give me your ears," demands the Cactus, paraphrasing Mark Antony in the speech to the Roman populace over the body of the slain Caesar. "If you have ears, prepare to shed them now!"

The ears are worth money—more money to a man than to a wolf. The Canadian Government pays a [illegible] bounty for wolves' ears. Turn in a full set, [illegible] proving that you have killed a wolf, and you get your bounty. Then there is the pelt. The Cactus says he figures that for pelt and bounty he will realize about $32 on each wolf he kills. He hopes to return to civilization next spring with his own hide intact and with enough skins and ears to supply himself with a considerable grubstake for future activities in the adventure called life.

But don't get the notion that the Cactus expects the wolves to commit unintentional suicide—if one may so describe it—by throwing themselves upon his spikes, even as Arnold Winkelried threw himself upon the spears of the Austrians to open a breach through which his surviving comrades might rush onward to victory.

These 1200 spikes are for self-preservation only. When those huge timber wolves close in upon the Cactus they will be, whether they know it or not, violating man's and beast's first law of nature. They will be breaking the law against both the Canadian [illegible] and themselves; and as punishment for this [illegible] breach of the primary statute, the Cactus proposes to slay the outlaws with knife, bayonet or ax.

A long, two-edged hunting knife probably will reduce most of the beasts to submission; but if this fails, the Cactus will take the ax to them. He is provided with a double-bit ax, to which is affixed a bayonet, short but sharp. If the ax whack be not enough to lay low the enemy, then the bayonet thrust will be brought into use.

The Cactus is thrice armed, as we see. "Thrice armed is he that hath his quarrel just," we recall Shakespeare as having stated. The Cactus holds his quarrel to be just, since those fierce wolves have been accused of killing and eating horses and humans engaged in the timber industry up there, and in trapping.

We are told that only last year a trapper left a Hudson's Bay Co. station and failed to return. A rescue expedition of two men was sent out. They didn't get back. A more numerous rescue party followed. The bones of the trapper, licked clean of flesh, were found. Scattered about in the snow were a few shreds of his clothing that had withstood the masticating mechanism of the wolves. Then the party came upon the skeletons of 17 big wolves in a ring around the picked bones of the two men of the first rescue party.

Those poor fellows had made a last stand, like the heroic Davy Crockett in the Alamo. Crockett, as you may remember, was found dead against the wall, with a score of Mexicans he had slain before the survivors slew him. The two Canadians had killed those 17 wolves before the rest of the pack killed them. Then the surviving wolves picked clean the bones of both the wolves and the men.

So, with his justified quarrel, the Cactus proposes to fling himself into the midst of the wolf pack and lay about him until the last fanged foe expires. No doubt he will look, to the wolves, as innocent as a large animated Teddy Bear, or as a deep-sea diver with his working clothes on. But that will be, of course, an illusory fancy upon the part of the ravenous beasts. Their eye-opening will come when they try to take a nice large bite of civilized man-flesh out of some part of Mr. Carlson's armored anatomy. No doubt those wolves will wail with humiliation as well as howl with pain when the Cactus suddenly incloses them in his spiked arms and hugs them to his spiked bosom, following this apparently affectionate gesture with a jab of his snickersnee, a thrust of his bayonet or a whack of his ax. "Lay on, MacDuff! and damned be he who first cries, 'Hold! enough!'" That's the idea.

The Canadian Cactus ready for the wolf pack.

As indicated, the lines of the suit to be worn into action by the Cactus resemble those of a Teddy Bear or of a diver's outfit. The sleeves end in spike-studded boxing gloves—with one blow of his fist in one of those gloves Carlson can drive the spikes into a plank. On his feet, over his shoes, he wears spiked spats.

Around his neck is a sort of steel collarbone and hinged to this is a big cowhide helmet, generously spiked, which comes down over his head and locks to the steel collar. Over his face goes a baseball mask.

The whole thing weighs about 23 pounds. It was made by hand by John F. Ridograss, proprietor of the St. Paul Moccasin Co.

They have bold, bad wolves 100 miles north of Port Arthur, the Cactus says. They travel in packs—10, 20, sometimes 30, to a pack. If one pack lands a victim, the howls and the smell of blood may swell the mob to 100 before daybreak, Carlson surmises.

Big, shaggy beasts they are. Some of them stand four feet high and measure more than six feet from nose to tail-tip. They are black on their backs and gray on their sides, with tawny circles around their eyes, and they have long, glittering white fangs with which they tear away the flesh of a deer as it flounders in the snow trying to escape.

They have killed off so many deer that the Canadian Government allows hunters only one deer apiece each season now. It is quite a common occurrence for a pack of timber wolves to attack and devour a team of horses belonging to one of the lumber camps, and they are said to be especially fond of lumberjack, eaten raw.

Hunger of Kin About to Violate the Tomb

Russian relatives of the brilliant girl whose self-revelations through her diary thrilled the world a generation ago are seeking to realize on her burial plot and beautiful memorial chapel in a Paris cemetery—Young artist who worshiped beauty and had extraordinary horror of death hoped for perpetual care of her place of rest—Now, after 40 years, a common grave and a wooden cross may receive and mark her dust. -:- -:- -:- -:- -:-

OUT of Paris comes now an echo of the World War that is calculated to touch the heart of the world, if it be true that "all the world loves a lover." The dust of Marie Bashkirtseff is threatened with violation. Vandal fingers made thin by hunger due to the decline and fall of the Russian ruble are about to reach down into her costly tomb and to profane the sacred precincts of her marble memorial chapel. Unless the municipality of Paris shall intervene, the casket containing her remains is to be taken from the beautiful Passy Cemetery in Paris and buried in a common grave at Nice, under a wooden cross.

Marie Bashkirtseff indubitably was a lover. She loved all beautiful things with a love surpassing adequate utterance. She loved life with a passion so violent that it slew her in her early womanhood. She loved, apparently above all else, Mlle. Marie Bashkirtseff. But let us not dare to impugn the dignity of even her self-love; for it may be said that every individual is his own universe, and therefore in adoring her own entity this extraordinary young Russian transplanted to France was but worshiping, in a sense not to be misinterpreted by minds less exalted than her own, the glory and the beauty of being.

One generation ago the name of Marie Bashkirtseff, through "The Journal of a Young Artist," went ringing around the world. The book was a posthumous publication. In her twenty-fourth year the author had perished of tuberculosis—so the doctors said. In another sense she was a victim of her passion for beauty and her ambition for fame.

"I have enormous emotions," she wrote in her journal; and nobody who read the unique and pathetic autobiography had a mind to dispute that simple asseveration. It may be that a very considerable number of us have enormous emotions; but happily most of us are able to keep our emotions under control and not let them master us, rip our hearts out, turn our souls inside out, nip us in the very bud of life—as did the emotions of Marie Bashkirtseff as to herself.

"When I am dead, my life, which appears to me a remarkable one, will be read," wrote Marie. And so it has been read very widely and still finds readers, though the diarist herself died a few months less than 40 years ago. "If I should not live long enough to become famous, this journal will be interesting to the psychologists," predicted Marie; and her prediction came true, immediately upon publication. These naive remarks are in the preface to her book, which opens with the words:

"What is the use of lying? To begin with, I wrote for a long time without ever thinking that I should be read by others, and now it is just because I do hope to be read that I am absolutely truthful. If this book were not the exact, absolute and faithful truth, there would be no reason for its existence."

Marie, of course, was abnormal. It has been said of her that "she was at least 15 years old the day of her birth." That interesting exaggeration serves to carry the conception of a person who really never had a childhood, whose mind leaped beyond her years at the beginning and kept always in advance of her birthdays. Precocity, it is called by some, and is praised as such. Abnormality perilous to the happiness of the possessor is another way of putting it.

The Freuds and their like were not psychoanalyzing when Marie's book came out; and there are plenty of respectable persons today who are grateful for that fact. Mlle. Bashkirtseff, quite likely, would have been psychoanalyzed into a creature to be abhorred rather than pitied. As a matter of fact, all the testimony goes to prove that she was, as she deliberately declared in her journal, a most thoroughly "good" girl from the moral standpoint, and this despite her years of association in Paris with artists and art students, in the bohemian atmosphere of the Latin Quarter and in circles more respectable to the naked eye yet none the less temptational to a beautiful girl of artistic impulses.

"I die absolutely pure of heart, mind and body," wrote Marie in her will, which was made public only recently, after the death of her mother.

This will, which outlines what in the main her devoted mother did to enshrine the girl's memory, is inserted here to emphasize the alleged ghoulishness of the efforts of certain relatives to remove Marie Bashkirtseff's body from Passy Cemetery, tear down the memorial chapel, dispose of the relics it contains and sell the valuable burial ground where it stands:

"Having no personal possessions, I intrust my family with the execution of my wishes, for I am quite convinced that they will be respected just as though I had a fortune to bequeath.

"I die absolutely pure of heart, mind and body. Since God wills it and, after all, it is greatness, I forgive everyone; but it is not greatness, only indulgence, which, as Balzac says, deserves the most horrible contempt. I beg no one's forgiveness, not having offended anyone gratuitously. Those whom I may have offended (I do not remember many) have not been sufficiently offended.

"On my deathbed I wish to be dressed in the finest white cloth and draped as I loved to be in my lifetime. Very simple drapery. I intrust this task to Mme. Valleid, the tryer-on at Doucet's, and beg her to give the best attention.

"The following is what I desire to wear, nothing more, nothing less: a batiste chemise, with Valencienne around the neck, arms and legs. No stockings; the feet will be covered by the dress. Hair down.

"I request Bastien-Lepage, Robert-Fleury and Dina to arrange my hair so I shall be fair to see. The neck uncovered, the arms also as much as possible. The arms may be veiled, but in such a way as to reveal their form. Put flowers in my hands. The bed, before I am laid upon it, should be covered by a large sheet of white silk, which must fall around to the floor. No flowers on the bed or the body.

"I wish to be painted thus, life size, by Bastien-Lepage. There should be candles. Afterward, I desire to be cremated, and my ashes should be placed in a gold urn of antique design, to be selected by Robert-Fleury.

"Then I should like a sort of chapel built for me, Bastien-Lepage to be the architect, in the Champs Elysees quarter. This I desire particularly. This chapel is to be large enough to contain 18 to 40 persons. My portrait on my deathbed to be placed above the urn.

"A fine organ also should be placed in the chapel, and once a year, on the anniversary of my death, I wish sad and beautiful music sung by great artists.

"Around my last resting place should be a garden. The chapel should be detached from any other edifice. My statue should be done by Saint Marceaux and placed in the garden, the only raiment being a long, simple drapery (for modesty), life size.

"I desire an annual prize to be founded for the sculptor, man or woman, under 25 years of age, accomplishing the best work, the laureate keeping the prize for three years.

"I should like the poor to be helped in winter as much as possible. I bequeath all I have written to (name blank) on condition that he does not change a word and it be published 10 years after my death."

This last will and testament, duly signed by the stricken girl, was dated July 22, 1884. Marie died Oct. 31 that year, just 11 days prior to the twenty-fourth anniversary of her birth in Russia. The injunctions contained in her will were carried out with two exceptions. Jules Bastien-Lepage, himself on his deathbed, was unable to do the deathbed portrait; he died six weeks after Marie. Her mother refused to sanction cremation; so the body was deposited in a tomb inside the memorial chapel, simply garbed as directed, with flowers in the hands.

The funeral was memorable. Paris still talks about it. Everything was white—coach, horses, clothing of attendants. Whiteness, signifying purity, symbolized the indisputable cleanliness of the girl's life.

Marie's relatives in Russia, belonging to the nobility, were immensely wealthy. When her mother made known the wishes of the girl as specifically set forth in the extraordinary document quoted above, they rushed forward to carry out the instructions. The Passy Cemetery is very small, being situated on ground highly valuable. Almost in the center of this burial tract a piece of ground was purchased at a cost of $20,000, and on that site was built a huge mausoleum, in the form of a chapel. This memorial cost $60,000. Bear in mind that these figures relate to a period nearly 40 years ago. Present value of the land where Marie is buried is a great deal higher than the sum stated, perhaps three or four times as much.

The struggle is on between two branches of the dead girl's family. Impoverished by soviet confiscations of their property and through the inflation of the ruble, kinsfolk in Russia are clamoring for a partition sale of the burial plot and the chapel. They contend that they have a right to dispose of Marie's resting place. Urgent needs of the living, it is argued, have prior right over sentiment for the dead. The living must eat, be clad, be housed: as to the dead—oh, well, what?

Rich and fashionable Parisian folk have a fondness for Passy as a last resting place for themselves. They are willing to pay huge sums for space there. Should the Bashkirtseff plot be placed on the market, those half-starved Russian relatives would find themselves restored to a status of abundance. Marie's father died whilst she still lived. Her mother, who died about three years ago, left virtually nothing. For 36 years she had tended her daughter's tomb with loving care. "Sad and beautiful music sung by great artists" was heard issuing from the chapel on each anniversary of Marie's death. Thousands of people visited the place from day to day, looking through the grill to inspect the interior of the chapel, wherein, above the tomb, was reproduced in its entirety a replica of the girl's studio in the Latin Quarter. The furnishings from the studio were placed in the chapel. Some of the canvases painted by Marie were hung there. Many objects of artistic beauty reposed there.

On a modern and minor scale, the tomb of Marie Bashkirtseff is suggestive of that of the Pharaoh Tutankhamen of Egypt, recently discovered. Tutankhamen also was a young person and, like Marie, is believed to have died of consumption. He was more fortunate than the Russian girl in that his

"Her death was pathetic, but her life was pathos

t menace to her place of repose.

ny celebrated persons have written about Marie shkirtseff, but the things she herself wrote surs all those by other hands in the elements of gedy and pathos. Gladstone wrote sympathetlly of the girl, after reading her autobiography.
. Augustine Birrell, a contemporary of Gladstone
o still survives the Victorian era, read the Bash-rtseff self-revealment and wrote:

"To deride life is indeed foolish; but to pity your-lf for having to die is to carry egotism rather too
r. This is what Mlle. Bashkirtseff does."

"We all know that we shall die," wrote Marie in r journal, "that none will escape, and we have courage to live under this frightful menace. Is

Marie surely never accepted the advice of good old
Samuel Johnson, who himself had a most mortal r of death, despite his brave utterance: "Be od fellow and don't insist upon being rememd more than a month after you are dead."

Marie began keeping a diary when she was 12
s old. She continued to write herself into it shortly before she died. She told all her likes dislikes, all her loves and longings, all her hopes fears; and she enlarged upon both fears and s, stringing out to the stretch of almost innumle pages of writing paper her ambitions in life her horror at the fact that she must die and haps be forgotten.

All her hours were filled and thrilled with jubi-
t life. It seemed that she could not get enough living, that she insisted upon putting a day's ex-ence into an hour, crowding each minute with istic sensations — music, painting, poetry, ient classics, modern masterpieces of literature.

Gallery. Into everything she did she put her energy to the last ounce. She burned the candle at both ends and in the middle, and so it was reduced to the socket in a brief blaze of glory and sputtered out.

Dipping into her diary almost anywhere, one may find passages wherein she bewails the brevity of life and the inevitableness of the end. Scattered through the journal are many allusions to her own beauty, physical and spiritual, perhaps more space being devoted to the physical. Marie was beautiful, and she adored her own beauty. She confided her adorations to paper—for posthumous passing on to the world, the curious, critical, cackling millions. Those millions found choice titbits over which to cackle, such as this:

"I love to be alone before a looking-glass, and admire my hands, so fine and white, and faintly rosy in the palms. Perhaps it is stupid to praise one's self in this way, but people who write always describe their heroine, and I am my heroine. And it would be ridiculous for me to lower or belittle myself through false modesty. * * * Fortunately or unfortunately, I esteem myself so great a treasure that I think there is no one worthy of me, and those who raise their eyes to this treasure are regarded by me as hardly worthy of pity. I could scarcely treat a King as an equal. I think that is as it should be. I look down on men from such a height that they find me charming, for it is not becoming to despise those who are so far beneath us. I regard them as a hare would a mouse."

A few days later we find Marie writing: "I begin now to live, and to try to realize my dreams of becoming famous. I am already known to many people. I look at myself in the glass, and I find that I am beautiful. I am beautiful: what more do I want? Can I not accomplish anything with that? My God, in giving me the little beauty I possess (I say little through modesty), you have given me already too much. O, my God! I feel myself to be beautiful; it seems to me that I shall succeed in all that I undertake. Everything smiles upon me, and I am happy, happy, happy!"

"I believe in God and His divine goodness—that is why I do not lose courage," wrote the devout Marie at another place. "I cannot express what I feel, nor my gratitude to God for His goodness toward me."

It appears that one Count A—— was of the many who made love to Marie, all of whom she spurned. The girl described in full detail of conversation one of the Count's numerous proposals of marriage. A few lines may be copied out here:

"Tell me, mademoiselle," he said, "how many times have you been in love?"

"Once."

"And with whom?"

"With a man I do not know, whom I saw 10 or 12 times in the street, and who is not even aware of my existence. I was 12 years old at the time, and I had never spoken to him."

"What you tell me is like fiction."

"It is the truth."

"But this is a novel, a fantastic tale. Such a feeling would be impossible; it would be like loving a shadow."

"Yes, but I feel that I have no reason to blush for having loved him, and he has become for me a species of divinity. I compare him to no one in my thoughts, and there is no one worthy of being compared to him."

"Where is he?"

"I do not even know. He is married and lives far away."

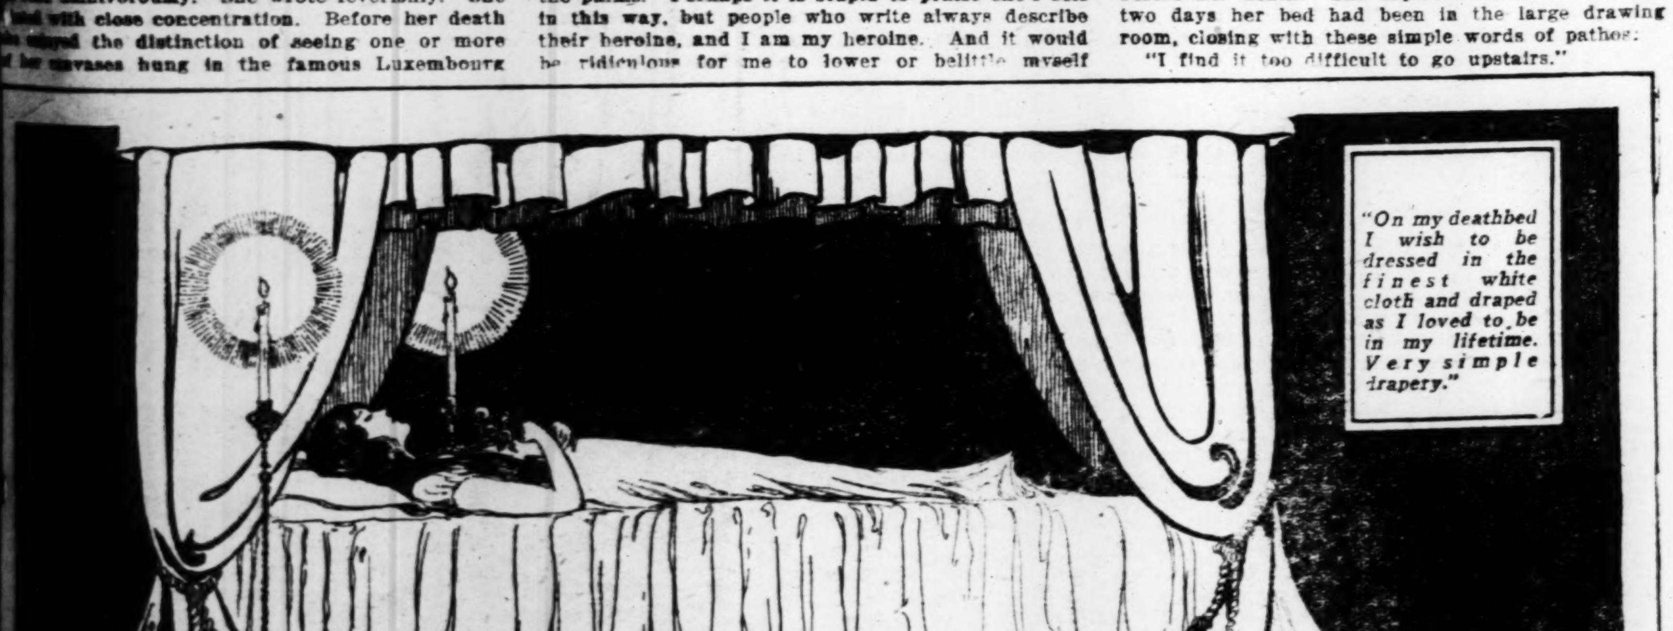
"What an absurdity!"

The unusual Marie was opulent of absurdities, as appraised by the ordinary human mind. Yet she had also her exaltations, her splendors of dream and vision, before which all those who understand must move softly and be silent.

One of the students of Marie's writings has said of her: "It is the woman rather than the artist who seizes and holds us—the woman writhing in the grip of elemental desires, even at the very door of death; the woman demanding as the proper food of genius 'all music, incense, flowers'; praying God to make her 'a veritable star'; shivering at the thought of ridicule; comparing herself in her superstitions with Napoleon and Caesar, in her varied talent with the Queen of Rumania."

The final record in her diary is dated just 11 days before her death. She explained that for the last two days her bed had been in the large drawing room, closing with these simple words of pathos:

"I find it too difficult to go upstairs."



"On my deathbed I wish to be dressed in the finest white cloth and draped as I loved to be in my lifetime. Very simple drapery."

The Dogs of War

By ARTHUR STRINGER

SHE wore a chinchilla turban that tilted slightly over one eye, an engulfing chinchilla coat, and an unmistakable air of disappointment. For a minute or two she stood, irresolute, beside the incredible number of parcels which her porter had deposited on the snowy platform, watching the crowded taxis and the closed cars as they blithely circled the station yard and scattered hillward toward the twilit avenues of Wimblehurst.

Then, deserting her pryamid of gayly ribboned parcels, she walked toward the waiting-room door. It was not often that Stevens, that most dependable of chauffeurs, was late in coming for her. She was tired, after her day of Christmas shopping in the city. The holiday spirit ebbed from her heart, like air from a punctured tire. She felt alone and overlooked in a cold and wintry world. And as though expressive of her own momentary desolation of spirit, a sudden dolorous and prolonged duet of dog-howling smote on her ears.

She stopped short as she heard that sound, for Alberta Orgaine loved dogs. And she knew that prolonged yowling which echoed through the wintry air was unhappiness and neglect and heart-break making itself vocal. So, instead of turning in at the waiting room to telephone, she kept on along the station platform until she came to a slatted crate standing just beyond the corner of the express room. Imprisoned within this crate she saw two Scotch collies, so alike in line and markings that one seemed but the shadow of the other. They stood with their thin shoulders together and their pointed noses directed heavenward, baying out their misery to an unheeding world. They yodeled and chorused in unison, prolonged their thinning howls into a plaintive double wail of protest that echoed across the wintry hills.

Alberta Orgaine dropped on her knees beside the crate and uttered soothing little endearments to the dogs. She continued to talk to them, in a soft and friendly tone, until they gave up their mournful caroling, and even permitted the unknown white glove to caress their unaverted necks. When they had completely quieted down again, the girl rose to her feet and proceeded with an ominously determined stride to the inner door of the express room, where she encountered a hostile and extremely busy youth with terra-cotta-tinted hair, sorting packages.

"Where's Treadway?" she demanded with a crisp note of authority which the youth promptly and openly resented.

"Sick wit' the flu," he retorted, turning back to his packages.

"And what are you doing here, little boy?" she naively inquired. The youth managed to survive the "little boy." But he proclaimed his personal and inalienable independence by lighting a cigarette and inhaling its fumes.

"I'm tryin' to run this office," he coolly announced.

"And do you think you're running it properly?" just as coolly inquired the girl in chinchilla.

"I haven't heard any complaints," retorted the red-haired youth.

"Then you probably haven't heard those dogs that are being so atrociously neglected out on the platform," she said, with sugary quietness.

"Say, let me tell you somethin'," he cried, as he threw down his cigarette and ground it under a quickly rotating heel. "I'm doin' two men's work here, and I ain't got time for holdin' debates or sloothin' out the owners of animals who ain't interested enough to come and get their shipments when they're landed here."

Alberta Orgaine considered the red-haired one, considered him with a quiet and contemplating eye. "When did those dogs come here?" she finally inquired.

"On the 7:18 this morning," was the curt reply.

"Have they been fed and watered?"

It was the harried youth's turn to swing about and inspect her with a steely stare. "Yes, ma'am," he said, with purely ironic intent. "That's all I'm here for—just that—to wet-nurse the livestock that comes down the line!"

"I don't think you'll be here long," asserted the girl with the slightly flushed cheeks.

"I don't intend to be," retorted the undisturbed youth, as he flung a parcel to the far end of the truck.

Alberta turned away. But her heart, which one short hour before had rocked with the blithest of Christmas good will, now beat hard against her slender young ribs. She went indignantly back to the dog crate, where the lonely collies sniffed less timorously at her coat as she bent over the slats in search of the shipping tag. She found it, at last:

MR. PARAN CAYLEY,
Gray Gables, Wimblehurst Station.

She had no idea who Paran Cayley might be, but she knew what her opinion of him was. So inflammatory remained her estimate of that gentleman, in fact, that when she looked up and saw Stevens standing at attention with a rug over his arm, she regarded him with fire in her eye.

"How dare you keep me waiting like this?" she demanded.

"It was a blow-out, miss," explained the meek-eyed chauffeur.

"Wait here for me," she said, shortly, as she started across the station yard. She went to the Star Restaurant, on the street corner beyond, and purchased four chicken sandwiches and a bottle of milk. With these she returned to the dog crate. The collies, much to her disappointment, would not partake of the sandwiches. Neither would they partake of the milk. So she left the food on the crate floor, where they could find it when their mood changed.

"Give me that robe," she said to Stevens, who still stood at attention. The robe was one of plucked beaver lined with dove-gray wool. She draped it over the top and back of the dog crate, through which the wind was blowing. Then she bade the dogs a reluctant good-by.

"Stevens," she said on the way home in the car, "who is Paran Cayley?"

"That's the man, miss, who's just bought Gray Gables," explained Stevens.

"I thought he'd be that type," announced Alberta Orgaine, with unexpected spirit. "He is, isn't he, Stevens?"

"What type, miss?" queried Stevens.

"Nouveau riche and everything that's abominable," promptly explained his mistress, remembering the "No Trespassing" signs which had been put up about the skating pond in the rear of Gray Gables.

"He appeared a very likable-looking person, if I may say so," ventured the man at the wheel. "And your father remarked only yesterday how he was glad Gray Gables had fallen into the hands of that kind of a neighbor."

"I hate him!" promptly announced the girl in chinchilla.

During dinner that night, Alberta Orgaine sat unusually preoccupied and silent. Instead of taking coffee before the open fireplace in the library, she ordered out the landaulet and quietly headed for Wimblehurst Station. In her limpid eyes smoldered a light which was not customarily there.

The intensity of this light did not diminish when she traversed the lonely platform and found the dog crate and the two collies still standing just beyond the windy corner of the express room. But the robe of plucked beaver which she had so carefully draped about the crate was gone. And that added fuel to the flame of her indignation.

She found small consolation in the fact that the sandwiches had been eaten. So she promptly went back to her landaulet and this time headed for Gray Gables.

It was a mannerly enough footman who answered her ring, but she disliked the man, just as she disliked everything about the place. When she asked for Mr. Paran Cayley she was told politely that Mr. Cayley was not at home. This seemed to leave her more indignant than ever. She turned peremptorily away, climbed back into her landaulet, and directed her way once more toward the station.

There, having extracted the hub wrench from her toolbox, she crossed to the dog crate, where she proceeded to pound loose the slats. She was thinly disheartened, when she had the crate open, to discover that the two prisoners betrayed no outward signs of gladness at the prospect of release. But she grasped them firmly by their collars, spoke to them soothingly, and was finally able to lure them tremblingly over to the open door of her car. While so engaged she saw a terra-cotta head appear at a lighted window behind her. It was the express-room youth, but he was beyond the pale of her interests. She was in no mood for further parley with that offensive stripling. So she bundled the collies unceremoniously into the car, stepped after them and slammed shut the door.

Once home with them, she snapped leashes on the collar rings, tied them up in the warmth of the basement furnace room, and once more proferred them food and water. She even sought to bed them down on her hastily commandeered last year's coonskin coat. But the two collies were not at home, and they knew it. They trembled and sniffed and regarded their surroundings with mournful eyes. When the returned to them later in the evening, however, and stroked their noses and patted their shoulders and poured endearing diminutives into their bewildered ears, they melted sufficiently to essay an infinitesimal tail movement of appreciation.

Alberta Orgaine did not permit her resentment against her new neighbor to interfere with her slumbers. She slept soundly that night, as was her wont, conscious of having performed an act of kindness where the end quite adequately justified the means. She slept so soundly, in fact, that she heard none of the mournful yowling which awakened her somewhat mystified and somewhat indignant male parent a full hour before dawn. Hiram Orgaine, having rung his bell and commanded an equally mystified butler to investigate the cause of that early morning chorus, promptly ordered the dogs to be removed to the garage. There, three hours later, Alberta found them, and there she had the satisfaction of seeing them fall unhesitatingly on the breakfast which she carried out to them. One of the dogs even licked her hand. And it seemed a friendlier world to the misunderstood lady of mercy.

She was engaged in her customary task of feeding cracker crumbs and chopped suet to a colony of plump sparrows along the terrace balustrade, two hours later, when her ministrations were cut short by the approach of two figures which in no way appealed to Alberta's scrutinizing eye. One was a rubicund-faced and slightly obese man and the other was an even less prepossessing person in a shabby Norfolk jacket with a powder hole in one shoulder, tweed knickerbockers stained with motor oil, and a knitted woolen muffler that had seen better days. Alberta could see that he was a more intelligent-looking person than the fat man beside him, for although his eyes were solemn, he wore unmistakable lines of humor about his mouth and carried himself with a vague air of negligence which left him impervious to the challenge in her eyes as his long legs bore him in her direction.

"You Miss Alberta Orgaine?" inquired the fat man, stepping disagreeably close.

"I am," she acknowledged. "What about it?"

The fat man squared his shoulders as he produced a document from the pocket of his overcoat.

"Then here's a summons for you?" he announced as he displayed the document in question.

"What does this mean?" she demanded, without giving much attention to the paper paraded before her.

"It means, lady, that I'm a State Constable and that you've got to come with me."

"And why should I have to go with you?" she asked.

The State Constable duly considered his document.

"You're charged, lady, with stealing two blue ribbon collies from a shippin' crate down at the town station. And if you've got any explainin' to do, I guess that'd better be done when we get down to the Justice of the Peace."

"But who said I stole two collies?" demanded the violet-eyed lady, now pallid with indignation.

"The warrant was sworn out by Mr. Paran Cayley," announced the officer of the law. The girl's head nodded comprehendingly.

"Yes, that's just the sort of thing a blighter like that would do," she remarked.

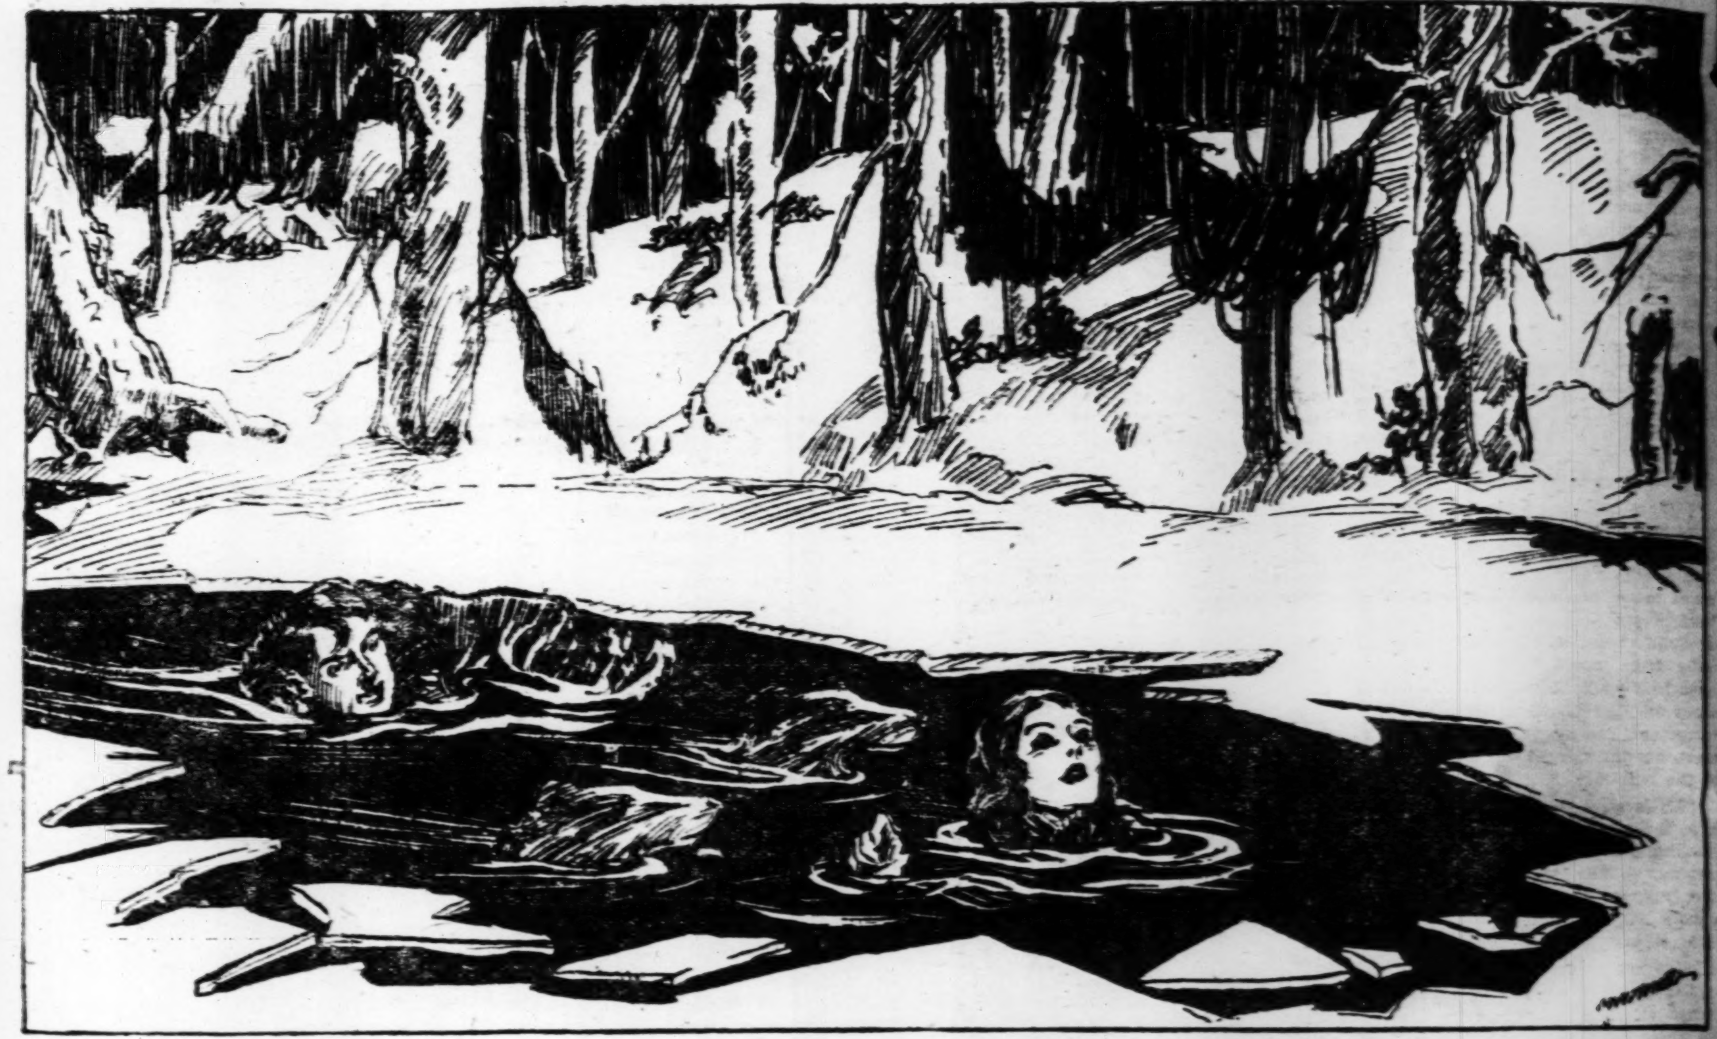
The rather tall man spoke for the first time. "He may have been especially fond of those dogs," he suggested, with a quietness which exasperated the girl.

"Don't you think he has rather a remarkable manner of showing his love for his animals, leaving them night and day in a shipping crate, without food or water?"

Perhaps he didn't know they were there, suggested the man with the solemn eyes.

"It was his business to know," retorted the girl with the flashing eyes."

The solemn-eyed one was about to reply to this, but his obese companion



It was useless. It was quite useless, after all, to try any more with that leaden weight on her feet.

interrupted him. "I guess we'd better save some o' this until we get down to the Magistrate's office. And the sooner we get there the better."

"I'm sorry," retorted the girl, "but I've rather a busy morning ahead of me."

The small eyes in the obese red face winked hard at that speech. "So've I," announced that affronted minion of the law as he drew nearer his prisoner; "and I guess we'll be on our way."

It was then that the second intruder spoke. "Perhaps Miss Orgaine would prefer going down quietly in her own car," he meekly suggested. Yet he seemed to be having trouble in keeping the corners of his mouth straight. "I'm sorry, but this thing really has to be faced. And the situation is already disagreeable enough without making it worse."

"Thanks to that man Cayley!" asserted the indignant-eyed Alberta.

"Perhaps he didn't entirely understand the situation," observed the long-legged stranger.

"I'm glad there's somebody to apologize for him," asserted the girl with the peach-blow cheeks as she started toward the garage. Then she stopped short, suddenly remembering the two incriminating collies behind its closed doors. So she veered discreetly about and headed back for the house, where she ushered her visitors into the reception hall and telephoned Stevens to bring out her landaulet.

She noticed the two men whispering together as the car slithered up to the porte cochere. She observed it with only half an eye, however, for faint and muffled, she could hear the baying of two unhappy canines. She made the engine race, unnecessarily, as she waited for her two persecutors to climb into the car after her.

But only the fat man made an effort to follow her.

"You can manage very nicely, Perkins, without me," the other explained, as he swung the car door shut.

"Who is that man?" she demanded as they swung out through the manorial iron gates.

"Oh, he's kind o' actin' for Mr. Cayley," retorted the indifferent-eyed Constable.

"One of the servants?" was the acid inquiry.

"Kind of a man-of-all-work round the place," he vaguely asserted as he watched with a reproving eye while the hand on Alberta's speedometer hovered between the "40" and "50" ciphers on the enameled dial. But he said nothing more.

Alberta Orgaine emerged from Magistrate Hicks' office with a sense of triumph that was distinctly qualified. She had neither been locked up nor fined nor humiliated by an official harangue from the bench. Instead, she had waited until the benignant Elias Hicks had concluded a somewhat prolonged colloquy over the telephone, whereupon he had addressed her in a kindly and fatherly and altogether inoffensive way, pointing out that the best thing for everyone concerned, especially at this season of charity and good will toward all, would be for Miss Orgaine to restore the appropriated property to its owner, proffer a reasonable explanation for his misdemeanor, and have the warrant withdrawn and the case dismissed.

"Does that mean I'd have to apologize to Paran Cayley," promptly inquired the pale-cheeked Alberta.

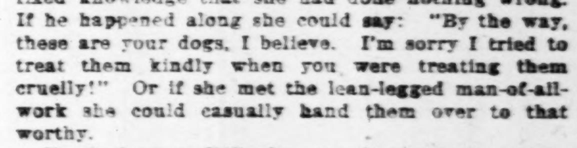
"I think a dignified explanation, under the circumstances, would not be out of order," asserted the dispenser of justice.

"I don't think I could keep it dignified," ventured the girl, with a ghost of a laugh.

Alberta went out to her car, pink to the ear tips. She was not used to being dismissed. Nor was she used to making apologies. She was quite decided, in fact, that nothing could persuade her to go to Paran Cayley like a repentent schoolgirl and meekly restore his collies to him. Eventually, of course, they would have to go back. But she could send them by one of the servants, with a note, a frigid and satiric note of explanation.

Then an idea came to her, as she saw a group of boys skating on a roadside sheet of ice. She would ignore Paran Cayley's churlish signs as to no trespassing and go skating on his lake, accompanied by the collies. That would be an announcement of her indifference, her disdain of his authority, of her fixed knowledge that she had done nothing wrong. If he happened along she could say: "By the way, these are your dogs, I believe. I'm sorry I tried to treat them kindly when you were treating them cruelly!" Or if she met the lean-legged man-of-all-work she could casually hand them over to that worthy.

She had some difficulty, two hours later, in getting into her high-laced skating boots. The dogs were restless on their straining leashes and had to be tied to a sapling until that change was effected.



"What does that mean?" she demanded. "It means, lady, that I'm a State constable, and that you've got to come with me."

They betrayed a tendency to yodel, with the excitement of being once more in the open, and she was forced to speak to them sharply. Then she untied them and took the leashes, and let them race off across the smooth pond of ice, dragging her skimmingly after them. She kept them as close to shore as possible, disturbed by the repeated featuring of fine cracks which showed in the rubble ice as her skate blades glided over it.

She rested, when the dogs were tired, and as she rested she saw a man working his way over the hill. He carried a lopping-ax and a tapeline and was solemnly engaged in driving square pegs into the snow-covered ground. The dogs yelped and tugged at the sight of him, but he ignored them, just as he ignored the girl holding them back. She saw he was the man-of-all-work. So she half-circled the lake, to his side, and called out to him. He came slowly down the bank, with his ax over his shoulder.

"Do you think that ice is safe?" he none too graciously inquired.

"It hasn't proved otherwise," retorted the girl, when the yelping of the dogs could be silenced. "Do you belong to Gray Gables?"

He considered this question. "In a kind of way," he finally admitted.

"What sort of way?" she demanded.

"Oh, I do odd jobs around. I'm just measuring off these back hills. We're going to landscape 'em."

"And spoil 'em!" amended the girl. "I rather imagined that's the sort he'd be."

"Who'd be?" asked the man with the ax.

"Paran Cayley!" Then, observing his abstracted gaze on the tugging collies, she added: "As you see, I've brought his precious dogs back to him."

"He's missed them," was all the lean-legged man on the bank deigned to remark.

"I think he'll miss a great many other things," observed the silvery-voiced girl on the ice.

"Why?" asked the shabby-looking man on the bank.

"A blighter always does," she coolly announced. And the man on the bank seemed to give this much thought.

"Isn't there a chance you've misjudged him, just as he's probably misjudged you?"

"I could forgive him being cruel to a woman," asserted Alberta, "but not to animals."

"Perhaps his cruelty was as unconscious as your own," he said as he stepped closer to her. But Alberta did not respond to that thrust. For the two collies, breaking her hold on the twisted leashes, flung themselves against the lean-legged man and muzzled about him with staccato yelps of joy.

"They seem to know you," observed the girl, vaguely oppressed with a feeling of desertion. He looked up at her, laughing, but he did not speak, for a small boy dragging a red sleigh appeared over the crest of the hill.

"Uncle Paran," he called out as he caught sight of the man at the pond-edge. "Uncle Paran, you said we could get the Yule log ready today."

Alberta Orgaine turned slowly about on her skates. Her gaze met and locked with that of the man on the shore.

"So you're Paran Cayley?" she said, with infinite ing convenience, continuous service and cleanliness, rather than cost, have come to be the selling features of district heating.

"The investment costs of conventional group heating are enormous, and maintenance and transmission charges are high, since it is hard to keep hot pipes, with their high rates of expansion, properly protected and insulated when buried underground. There has been recently a tremendous readjustment of rates for the central heating service, even when by-product steam was used, and the necessity of such readjustment is proved by the number of plants which have failed financially, or which have been abandoned. The service is so desirable, however, and anyone who has it so hates to give it up that the service company can obtain prices considerably higher than the cost of individual operation.

"Our thought, however, seems to have been given to the generation and transmission of the heat rather than to the buildings in which it was to be used and their ability to conserve it. We have scratched gravel to get more water to fill a leaky bucket, instead of plugging some of the leaks. Buildings as we build them are not very often considered especially from the heat-conserving standpoint. Too often four walls and a roof to keep out the rain are about all that is asked. One of the first things a competent heating-plant designer should do is to exert his influence toward the proper construction of the building.

"All large cities carry a higher general average outside temperature than the country adjacent. The escaping heat from the walls, the heat from the tremendous power expenditures, to say nothing of that from the lights, and the waste products of combustion, all tend to raise the mean temperature of cities several degrees.

"Why not combine the various nondescript buildings in a great, permanent, highly insulated, well-lighted structure, heating to a comfortable degree the whole neighborhood? If you will think a little of this rather radical scheme, I believe you will be intrigued, as I am, by its possibilities.

"Most rooms in buildings get direct sunshine for a few hours only, each day. If we have a lofty building with properly oriented skylights, we will get a brilliant spray of sunshine over all of its area either in the morning or in the afternoon, and the lighting and health should, so far as sunshine is concerned, be first-class.

"If we build this structure of the highest reasonable grade of construction now commercially possible, we might make the structures within its shelter the lightest of shells, built for privacy only. If the inclosure is lofty, no mechanical ventilation will be required, as the difference in temperature between the inclosure and outdoors will cause a rapid air change. Dust, temperature, humidity and even air motion can be controlled by artificial showers of rain, whenever these are needed, from sprayheads in the roof. Ponds of water may be utilized on the roof for temperature regulation. Substantial reductions in the cost of living can be made by the garden truck which can be grown on the inner roofs and in the back yards.

"Anyone who wishes cold air may dress for it and pass outside, but under ordinary circumstances people will wear light clothing and should be free from colds, as they suffer no extremes of temperature.

"There are many applications of this idea of neighborhood heating which are so radical as to involve material changes in our accustomed routine of civilization. There are applications, as in housing over a narrow valley, which would be for purposes of comparison unfair on the basis of first cost and maintenance. A circular structure, quite lofty, with heavily insulated outside walls and windows and open to a great central court would be the most economical construction, in all probability, except for the ground space occupied. It has interesting possibilities, however.

"After much study and several sketches, I worked out as a sample, to satisfy my curiosity, the scheme shown in the plan. The inclosure is approximately one-half mile square, arranged with steel columns 75 feet on centers, with a chimney at each column to care for the venting of kitchens, toilets, garages and the like. The roof is to be about 100 feet above the ground, and great monitors 150 feet on centers run north and south, having high glass sides, so that the direct sunshine may traverse the entire area at some time every day. The glass will be triple, with cleaning galleries between the sheets, and will be hinged so as to be opened in summer. There will be glass or doors in the side walls at street ends and above the roof lines to permit summer wind action.

"I have suggested three main streets, entered through vestibules with tight doors. These streets may be boulevarded, with all sorts of vegetation. The buildings will be the same as conventional houses in tropical climates, mere shells built for privacy and not requiring heavy walls or insulating qualities. They should have watertight roof construction because of the frequent artificial showers which will be provided for maintaining the vegetation and for air conditioning. These spray heads will be used also as very efficient fire protection. The buildings need by no means be in straight lines, as I have shown them, but may be curved and diversified, and should be attractive.

"The efficiently insulated roof of the inclosure will shelter the community in summer against the heavy sunshine. Heating and other services may be by pipes run around anywhere among the roof trusses, and no insulation beyond that for 70 degrees will be needed. We may utilize the inner roof spaces for recreation, parks, etc., and for communication in addition to that in the streets. The streets, in truth, might become parks, and all services, such as motors and delivery wagons, might be run out of doors on the main roof, with convenient stairs and elevators at strategic centers, or in subways under the houses, these subways having artificial ventilation. Garages may be in the otherwise unneeded basements alongside the subways, or may be outside on the main roof."

Mr. Lewis states that he has calculated on nothing which would be impossible of commercial realization at a reasonable price today. The structure with its heating would cost, he says, not to exceed $2.50 per square foot of area, or $16,735,000. All work done inside will cost much less than the same outside, because work can be carried on every day, regardless of outside weather conditions. On the apartment basis he expects to get in the total inclosure, seven stories high, 16,128 flats, having a population of around 65,000. On the basis of homes of two or three stories he could get a total population of around 15,000. He goes on:

"As an apartment proposition such an institution as I have suggested is an economical financial possibility today. The owners would save enough in coal alone to create a substantial sinking fund and pay the interest on all that the project would cost beyond conventional structures.

"As a detached residence proposition, each of 2208 householders would have to pay around $2100 for the privilege of living in a conservatory, being free from smoke and dust and having no coal or ashes to handle. There are many exclusive residential districts no more beautiful than that now proposed which carry more than $2100 per lot as arbitrary overhead.

"We must always have heated buildings, because through more than half of every year we would suffer, and many of us would die, otherwise. Why not meet the issue in an efficient way by housing in great spaces, doing away with little inclosures? What in the world is a detached building but a hollow projection wasting valuable heat? The canons of streets and alleys between our modern city buildings are exceedingly inefficient and wasteful from every standpoint. If we roof them over with glass we can save the burning of great quantities of coal, thus saving some of the soot and dust. The snow-handling problem of cities will be simplified wonderfully, as the snow can be removed without interference with traffic.

"It may be a few years before my $16,000,000, half-mile square project will be floated, but I predict that the roofing over of streets in metropolitan districts will come quickly. The saving in heat will finance the construction."

Carrying President's Words to Millions of Hearers

pendent circuits must be used, both doing exactly the same work of carrying the President's voice across the country. Thus two strings for one bow were provided. If one string should break the other would still be available for use. The system was so arranged that both of the independent circuits reached each of the seven broadcasting stations.

At each of these stations a switch was installed so that if one circuit should fail the President's words would be switched instantly to the other.

Now, it was no more advisable to turn the radio impulses onto two wires and let them go their uncharted way than it would have been to leave them to their fate on one wire. They must be personally conducted all the way, and this led to an immense amount of detail work of which you never dreamed when you listened to the President's words on your radio set.

If the radio impulses were to travel over two wires they must have the best possible right of way. The selection of the route required many days and nights of work by telephone company employes. Of the thousands of telephone circuits which spread over the country some lines work more smoothly and quietly than others. They are freer from hums and other extraneous noises. These are known as "quiet lines." It was necessary to find these quiet lines and link them up into the circuits which were to carry the President's words. This was a matter of actual testing and searching of records. It occupied the time and efforts of many persons to fix the exact locations of the quietest lines in a vast system of wires between Providence, R. I., and Dallas, Tex. After the quiet lines were found they had to be connected into continuous circuits and with the necessary connections to carry those circuits into the Capitol at Washington and into the six broadcasting stations through which the impulses were to be sent out by radio.

These stations were WCAP, Washington; WEAF, New York; WJAR, Providence, R. I.; KSD, St. Louis, Mo.; WDAF, Kansas City, Mo., and WFAA, Dallas, Tex.

After the route had been selected and connected up there was a series of the most minute and painstaking inspections and tests to establish beyond a doubt the efficiency of the two circuits, one of which was 2898 miles long and the other 2267 miles long. To make these inspections experts assigned to special duty were stationed at many points along the lines.

Though Washington is about 1000 miles from St. Louis the lines that brought the President's message to Station KSD had a total length of 2527 miles and in addition it required nearly 2500 additional miles of wire to reach the Kansas City and Dallas stations to the west and southwest of St. Louis. All of this vast mileage of circuits had to be tested.

When all the divisional tests had been made there still remained the work of installing apparatus, most of it elaborate and costly, which aided in the personal conduct of the President's voice across the country and kept it vigorous on the journey.

In order to prevent the impulses from losing in intensity it was necessary to install repeater or "booster" stations at intervals of 150 to 200 miles over both circuits. There were 18 of these stations between Washington and Dallas.

For duty at each of these booster stations two experts were stationed with a force of helpers. In addition to the boosting along the way, special transmitters were installed in each circuit at their points of entry into the various broadcasting stations.

All along both circuits special forces of linemen and trouble crews were held in readiness to repair any breaks in the circuits. Though actual figures are not available it is safe to say that several hundred telephone company employes were on special duty or had added duties in connection with the transmitting of the President's speech.

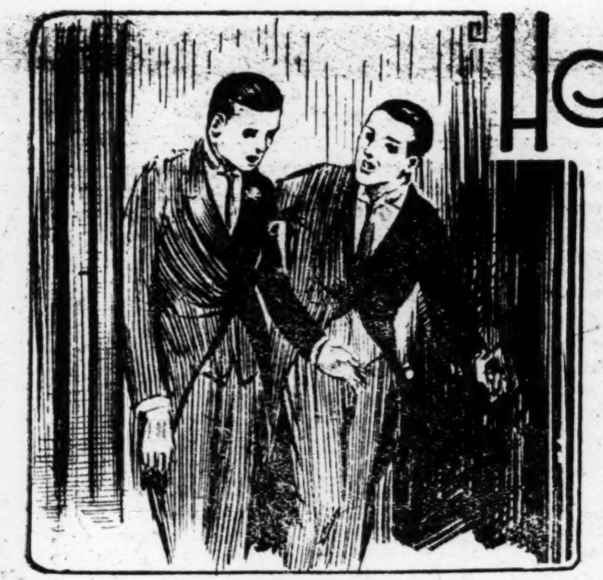
And that is not all. As has been said, 5165 miles of telephone wire were used in this great communication feat. In addition to this there was about an equal mileage of telegraph line in special use while the transmitting was under way. This was an extra precaution which made necessary the special assignment of many telegraph operators. The telegraph lines were used for two purposes. In case of a breakdown or interruption from any cause on the telephine lines the telegraph was at hand to give notice of the break to the nearest repair crew. It also was used in communicating directly to the broadcasting stations and keeping them posted on the progress of events in the Capitol just preceding the President's address.

This information was valuable to operators in the broadcasting stations while preparations were being made for putting the President's voice on the air. The telegraphed signal, "The President is now entering the hall," caused everybody in the broadcasting stations to "stand by" and gave them warning that the President's words would arrive over the telephone wires within a few minutes.

Not only were there elaborate line tests at divisional points all over the two great circuits, but when all had been found in readiness so far as human prescience could guarantee it, there was a final series of actual transmission tests extending over a week.

These tests were made in the early hours of the morning when most radio users were asleep. At Station KSD, Chief Operator Willis P. Corwin remained on duty until 3 a. m. and in some instances later, throughout the test period. On one occasion at least the tests lasted until 7:30 a. m. Phonograph records were played in Washington, newspaper articles were read, and carried over the chosen telephone circuits to KSD and the other five stations selected to broadcast the President's voice. Skilled radio and telephone men listened in on this transmission and made recommendations which caused the improvement and refining of the transmission to that high quality which you noted when you listened to the President's voice on your radio set.

So what you heard that day when President Coolidge addressed Congress, was not such a simple thing to arrange, after all.



"Steady now!" he whispered. "Brace up! Try to be a man! Get ready!"

Here Comes the Bridegroom

By Booth Tarkington

(This is the sixth and last of the series of stories covering the romance of Muriel and Renfrew.)

EARLY on a warm and perfumed June morning made for brides and birds, the larks' first caroling to the new sun (or it may have been an early rising Ford) awakened young Renfrew Mears for the last time from slumber in the house of his parents; for he was to be a bridegroom at noon that day. His waking thoughts were of his best man, about whom Renfrew had a definite anxiety, well founded upon the best man's having insisted (with the ring in his pocket) upon hiring a taxicab for a trip to Beloochistan and the Italian lakes, after the bachelor dinner the preceding evening.

Across the street, Miss Muriel Eliot was awakened by the same lark, if lark it were. At noon she was to be Miss no more forever; and her first thoughts were filial, being of her dear old father.

Yet they were not wholly tender. Mr. Eliot, at the wedding rehearsal, the afternoon before, had missed his cue for giving her away and had stood looking up at the Gothic beams of the church, motionless in a bland daydream.

"If he does it today," thought Muriel, "I'll throw something at him right there."

The bridegroom's mother awoke with the thought of a small medicine chest which the bride had promised to keep always at hand for the preservation of Renfrew's health. Mustard plasters had been overlooked by some inexplicable oversight and must be added to the chest before the ceremony.

The bride's mother awoke to a nervous certainty that she had forgotten something she had meant to tell the caterer; but she couldn't think what it was.

The bridegroom's father awoke thinking how impossible it was to believe that this was his boy's wedding day; the time was so short since his own wedding day. (But he forgot to mention his thought to his wife. After all, the time had been long enough for him to acquire the habit of forgetting to mention such thoughts to her.)

The bride's father awoke to thoughts so sentimental that presently he found his eyes in danger of becoming a little watery; but he brightened up as he shaved, realizing that all the fuss would be over tomorrow and the house could quiet down again. Besides, Renfrew was a fine, steady young man, of the most amiable disposition in the world. It wasn't like seeing your daughter marry somebody you didn't know anything about, as so many daughters do!

Two other awakenings, one in each of the well-shaded and substantial houses, may be mentioned: that of Miss Daisy Mears, 8-year-old sister of the bridegroom, and that of Master Robert Eliot, similar in age, the fat little brother of the bride. These two were to march together up the aisle, following the bride and her father; they were to carry sweet flowers with them, and were to look pure and dignified—a difficult matter.

Robert awoke thinking of cake icings he had seen in sculpturesque preparation and had secretly tested, wielding a heavy forefinger, to the damage of the sculpture.

But Daisy awoke to build fairy pictures in her mind's eyes; pictures in which the bride was nowhere, obliterated by a magnificent flower-bearing personage much like a stately Queen of Sheba lately prevalent in a movie Daisy had attended. And at 10 o'clock her conception of this personage, exquisitely curled, made an appearance in the front yard, to permit public admiration of pomp in pink chiffon, white silk stockings and bright little buckled black pumps.

The public, however, consisted principally of a small next-door neighbor, little Elsie Threamer, who came to the hedge between the two lawns for conference.

"Why, my dear! Aren't you invited?" Daisy asked, in what she believed to be her mother's most fashionable manner.

"Of course I am," Elsie replied, and her lovely, placid eyes showed her astonishment. (In the matter of personal beauty, if not of the present moment's high adornment, she had greatly the advantage of Daisy.) "Why, I told you yesterday mamma said I could go to the wedding!"

"But, my dear! Not like that?" the airy Daisy exclaimed. "Isn't that the very frock you wore to Lawrence Coy's party munce an' munce an' munce ago?"

"Well, what of it?" Elsie inquired, not unreasonably. She was charmingly and appropriately dressed for the purpose of attending a wedding. "I look all right, don't I?"

Daisy laughed with an increased airiness; for her fast-approaching importance had gone to her head.

"Well, what if you do or what if you don't?" she said. "The main thing is, I got so much on my mind I hardly got time to notice!" And she plagiarized a desire she had several times heard on the lips of her elders of late. "My goodness, but I do wish it was all over!"

"What for?" Elsie asked. "What for do you wish that? What'd be the good of getting up a wedding just to have it be over?"

"Oh, but my dear!" Daisy exclaimed, with a gesture that carried aloft both of her small and expressive hands. "My dear! Just think of me!"

"What for?"

"What for? Why, my goodness! Just think of me marchin' up the church aisle, with the whole town a-lookin' an' a-lookin' an' a-lookin' at me! Oh, my dear!"

"Well," said Miss Threamer, reassuringly, "Robert Eliot's goin' to march with you, isn't he?"

"Isn't it terrible?" Daisy moaned. "Just think of me havin' to march with that ole fat thing!"

"What I meant," her neighbor explained, "I meant Robert'll be all dressed up an' everything, too. Of course, when you march up the aisle the people on your side'll look at you, but the people on his side'll look at him."

"Look at Robert, you mean?" The idea was evidently a new one to the mind of the bridegroom's sister, and after a momentary pause of incredulity she made plain her conviction of its preposterousness. "Why, my goodness, Elsie Threamer, what would anybody look at Robert Eliot for, unless they wanted to get sick or somep'n?"

"They'll haf to, Daisy. On his side the aisle they'll haf to look at him, and on your side they'll haf to look at you. They can't help it."

"My goodness! People can look where they want to, can't they?"

"Not in church," Elsie insisted. "In church you haf to look where you got to. On Sunday don't you haf to look at the minister, or else at the families in front of you?"

"This isn't Sunday," Daisy reminded her. "I only wish it was! If it was Sunday I wouldn't haf to march up that aisle with everybody in the whole world gogglin' at me. I guess you never did these things, Elsie, else you'd know more about it. I do wish it was over!"

"I bet Robert does, too," her friend said, glancing across the street to where Master Eliot, noticeably betailored and haberdashed, had made his appearance in something of the driven manner of a person physically urged forth from a house. "I bet Robert wishes it worse'n you do, Daisy!"

"Robert? I guess he doesn't! All he thinks about is how much he'll get to eat when we have the food afterward. He hasn't got everything on his mind like I have." And Daisy added, casually, as Robert slowly sauntered toward them across the street: "My, but I hate him!"

Robert paused at the gate. "Wha' chu doin'?" he inquired critically. "Showin' off in your skimpy little ole pink suit?"

Excitement had already given Daisy a high color, but upon this uncalled-for insult, indignation deepened the tint. "Look here!" she exclaimed in a shrill voice. "Don't you dare to set one foot inside my father and mother's yard. I got disgrace enough already for one day to haf to march up that church aisle with you: I don't want everybody seein' me in your fat ole companies anywheres else!"

"My heavens!" Robert returned hotly. "You don't think I want to march up that church aisle with you, do you?"

"You do," said Daisy, promptly.

"What!"

"Course you do! But I warn you right here, Mr. Robert Eliot, it's the last time you'll ever get the chance! Why, I wouldn't march up that church aisle with you again if they gave me a hundred dollars!"

"I wouldn't march up with you this time," the ungallant Robert retorted, "not unless they took and made me!"

"I wouldn't do it again," Daisy shouted, "not if they said I had to do it or either get burned to death!"

"And I wouldn't," Robert informed her, also shouting, "I wouldn't if they were going to take and drown me!"

"They ought to!"

"Ought to what?"

"Ought to drown you!" Daisy explained, still shouting.

"Drown me?"

"Yes, they ought! They ought to drowned you long ago! They ought to drowned you when you were little, an' saved the money for all the food you ate ever since!"

But this was going too far. Robert advanced from the gate threateningly. "Look here!" he said. "You look here! You aren't goin' to be allowed to just run over everybody around here!"

"Don't you dare come near me!" Daisy warned him.

"Yes, I will, too! You think you're so big in your skimpy little ole pink suit, I'll take an' I'll"——

"What'll you do? I'd just like you to dare say what you're goin' to do so much!"

"I'll take that skimpy little ole pink suit an' bury it in a hole I'll dig in the ground!" said Robert, still advancing. "I'll take that skimpy little ole pink suit"——

But Daisy lifted up the voice she used in emergencies, the whole volume of sound within her power: "Mamma!" she shrieked. "Mamma! Mommuh!"

Then, as Master Eliot halted, greatly disconcerted, Mrs. Mears looked down from a window upstairs.

"Children! Children! What are you doing? Is that the way to behave on the wedding day?"

Robert hastily turned back toward the gate, hoping to get out of sight before matters should go farther; but he was not to be spared.

"Mamma! Mamma!" Daisy cried, appealingly, as if for protection; then she pointed at the retreating invader. "He said he was goin' to tear my new dress right off o' me an' dig a hole in the ground, and bury it in it!"

"I did not!"

"You did!" Elsie said, promptly.

"Why, Robert!" Mrs. Mears exclaimed.

Robert could not defend himself; he could only continue a dogged flight, but he sent over his shoulder a threat in a husky whisper, calculated just to reach the enemy without being heard in the higher reaches of the air. "You wait! I'll fix you!"

"Mom-muh!" Daisy screamed, instantly. "He says he's going to fix me."

"Robert!"

But Robert fled to his own yard and disappeared among shrubberies.

"Oh, Daisy!" Mrs. Mears exclaimed, reproachfully. "What a way to begin the wedding day! Quarrelling with the bride's brother! Come into the house."

"I guess I better," Daisy said, in parting explanation to Elsie. "I certainly got enough on my mind. You'll get to see me again when I march down the aisle, but heavens knows I don't hardly expect to live through it!" And with a deep sigh she went into the house, then ascended the front stairs and opened the bridegroom's door.

Renfrew, in dressing gown, turned nervously from his mirror. "What's the matter, Daisy? What was all the rumpus in the front yard?"

"Robert Eliot," she explained, simply. "I want to ask you a special favor, Renfrew."

"You do? Then hurry and ask it, Daisy."

"In the first place," she said, "I don't want to march up the aisle with that horrible ole thing."

"You don't?"

"No; as a special favor I want you to fix it so's I don't haf to."

Renfrew looked distressed and in his nervousness disarranged his smooth hair with a hand already tremulous with stage fright. "We can't change anything now," he said. "It can't be done. Everything's all settled, and such matters can't be altered at the last moment."

"It isn't the last moment," she said. "There's over more'n an hour yet, and if I haf to walk up the church aisle with that ole thing the whole wedding'll be spoiled."

Her manner was what is sometimes called intense, and had its effect upon her brother. At any other time, of course, he would have laughed at her; but he was every instant approaching the moment when he would make the first great public and ceremonial appearance of his life; and the consciousness of this approach was strongly upon him. In fact, the consciousness was growing stronger and more demoralizing with the passing of every second of the approach. Briefly, he was not quite himself, not entirely in command of his usual faculties. Few bridegrooms are.

"Spoiled?" he repeated, apprehensively. "Spoiled? What do you mean, the whole wedding'll be spoiled, Daisy?"

"It will," she said with conviction. "The whole bixnuss'll just be ruined if I haf to march up the aisle with that awful ole thing!"

"But why?" he asked. "Why, Daisy?"

"Because it just certainly will, Renfrew!" she stated, emphatically.

Her brother's forehead, usually of an unfurrowed surface, now showed the corrugations of increasing nervousness. "I can't understand why you don't tell me why, Daisy." And, his state of mind being what it was, he added: "Is there some reason you think it may be ruined you don't like to tell me because you think it might upset me?"

The question was unfortunate. In reality, Daisy had no particular objection to "marching" with Robert; merely, she was excited, felt self-important and wished to talk in an important manner, as of important things, with important people. Naturally, therefore, she replied in the affirmative. "Yes, that's exakly the way it is," she said. "I guess if you had everything on your mind I got on my mind, you would be upset!"

He became instantly haggard. "Good gracious!" he exclaimed. "Has something gone wrong they don't want to tell me?"

"It isn't so much it has gone wrong," she said, frowning. "It's more like it's liable to go wrong."

"What is?"

"I mean the wedding," she explained.

"But why, Daisy? My goodness! Why don't you tell me?"

Thus he pressed her in a manner of imploring, but with no enlightening result, since Daisy had nothing but the vaguest improvisation to offer him. "Well, there's reasons why I better not," she said, at a hazard, and then, not to lose in impressiveness: "But you better look out, Renfrew; this whole wedding's liable to be just ruined!"

"Good gracious!"

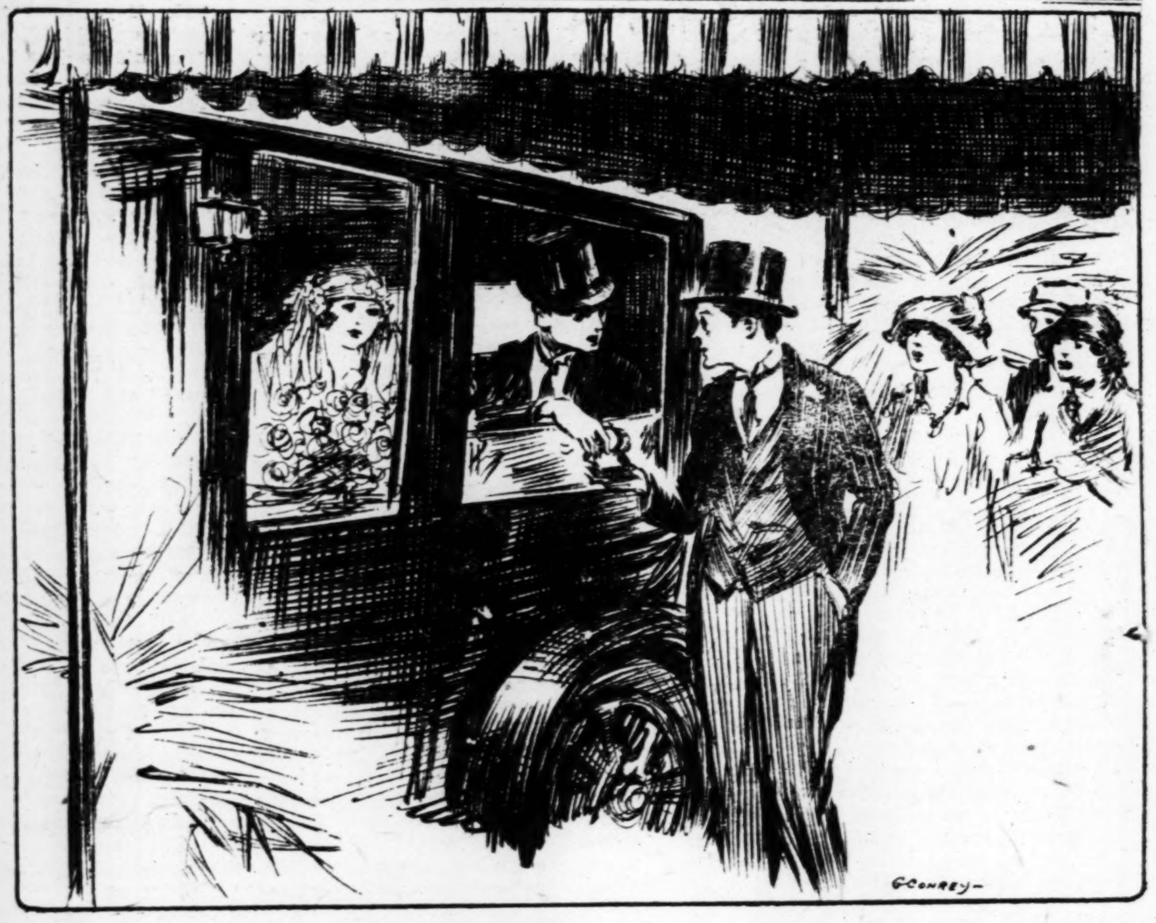
"It is," she insisted, without any idea of what she so darkly hinted. "I guess it can't be stopped now, anyway, and—and so you might as well"——

She paused, as her mother's summoning voice was heard from another part of the house. "Daisy! How often must I call you? Daisy!"

"Well, I guess I haf to go see what she wants," Daisy said, in an annoyed tone, and turned to the door.

"But, look here"——

"What, Renfrew?"



"Oh, yes, of course," said Renfrew, and having felt in his pocket, hastily placed in the best man's hands a small hairbrush.

"What do you mean saying all this, and that I might just as well? I might just as well what?"

"Oh," said Daisy, "I meant I expect it's probably too late now, an' you might just as well give up." Then, as her mother's voice continued to be heard, growing sharper with repetition, Daisy shouted: "Good heavens, mamma! Give me a minute, please!" and hastily departed, having done more to the bridegroom's nerves than she knew. He hurriedly finished dressing—too hurriedly, in fact—and went to seek her, intending to persuade her, or, if necessary, to force her to clear up her unbearably threatening mysteries. But she had left the house.

"Yes, I thought it better to send her on ahead," his mother said. "Your Aunt Mattie preferred to walk to the church, and Daisy's in such an excited state I thought she'd better go with her. The walk may cool her down a little."

"But, mother!" Renfrew exclaimed. "Why is she in an excited state? What is it you're keeping from me?"

"What?"

"She told me something was certain to go wrong. She said"——

"Who did, Renfrew?"

"Daisy did," said Renfrew. "She told me"——

Mrs. Mears began to laugh. "Daisy told you?" she inquired. "Daisy informed you that something is certain to go wrong?"

"Yes. But she wouldn't tell me what it is. Mother, what is it you're keeping from me?"

Mrs. Mears looked at him with some commiseration. "I think it must be your waistcoat, dear."

"What!" he cried, and his amazed stare at her took on the wildness of his sudden fear that she was delirious. "You say you're keeping my waistcoat from me? Mother, aren't you well?"

"I think so," she replied, calmly. "I only mean that somebody seems to be keeping your waistcoat from you, since you aren't wearing one, and I always thought, specially with that type of coat"——

"Good heavens!" he cried, looking down at himself. "I forgot it! Why, what a terrible thing to do! Suppose I'd gone to the church like this!" And he rushed back to his room. Half a minute later he returned to his mother with the question: "Now will you tell me why Daisy is in such an excited state?"

"I think it must be the wedding, Renfrew. People who are going to be in a wedding sometimes get a little excited."

"Yes; that's just what I'm talking about, mother. She said"——

"Yes," she interrupted, "you told me, dear. Daisy said something was certain to go wrong. Don't you think she's a little young to be a very good prophet?"

But the corrugations upon her son's fair brow only deepened. He was not in a condition to be easily reassured. "Mother, has something happened to Muriel, and you're all keeping it from me?"

"Renfrew! What do you mean?" said his mother.

"I believe I ought to go over there and see," he said, and, with both hands massaging his head, turned to the door.

"I believe it would be better if you'd go and brush your hair," Mrs. Mears suggested, soothingly. "You've ruined it."

"What do I care for that," he cried, "if anything's happened to Muriel? Mother, don't you think I'd better go over there?"

"No, I believe I wouldn't, Renfrew—especially as I don't think they'd let you see her.

"What! They wouldn't? They wouldn't let me see her? They wouldn't even let me see her?"

"I think probably not," said Mrs. Mears. "They're just about getting her dressed now, I imagine."

"She's able to be dressed?" he demanded. "You think"——

"I think you'd better try to calm down a little, Renfrew. You're getting yourself all upset over nothing."

"Over nothing!" he repeated. "You call it nothing to be going to be married in a few minutes and then have your own family keep something from you about the bride."

"Renfrew!" his mother exclaimed. "Don't be so absurd. Muriel's perfectly all right."

"But how do you know she is?"

"Because I do! The idea of your getting into such a nervous state merely because a 9-year-old child"——

"But she said"——

"Did she say anything about Muriel?"

"No, she didn't say it. But perhaps she meant"——

"Just what was it she said, Renfrew?"

Renfrew did further damage to his hair. "Let me think. She said—she said something was sure to go wrong at the wedding, but she wouldn't say what. And she said it was because she had to march up the aisle with little Robert. What do you think she meant, mother?"

But at that, in spite of his visibly intense anxiety, Mrs. Mears burst into outright laughter. "Nothing!" she cried. "Daisy meant exactly nothing at all."

"But people always mean something," he protested.

"Not at the age of 9, my dear. Daisy was only airing herself. She was pretending to be important."

"But she told me"——

Mrs. Mears became serious. "Renfrew," she said, "go brush your hair. It's almost time to start for the church."

"Oh, murder!" he said. "Is it? Do you know where I put the hat I got for it?"

"Yes," she replied. "I'll bring it to you if you'll brush your hair."

"My hair?" he said. "My hair."

"Yes, dear! Go and brush it and I'll bring your hat to you."

"My hat?" he said. "You'll bring my hat?"

"Yes, dear. But first go and brush your hair."

"I will," he said, with sudden decisiveness. "I'll do it, mother. I'll do that first, and then I'll put on my hat."

"I think I should if I were you," she returned. "Brush your hair first and then put on your hat."

"I will," he assured her, earnestly, as he went out of the room. "It's what I intended to do all along, mother."

"And you'd better hurry a little, dear."

"I am," he called back to her. "I'm already hurrying, mother. I've been hurrying all morning."

But in his own room, before his mirror, with his brushes in his hands, he stood facing his reflection and omitted to apply the brushes to his hair. That is to say, he faced his reflection, and his eyes seemed to look at it; yet he had no practical perception of it. It suggested nothing as to his hair or the use of the brushes.

"My goodness!" he murmured, and turning to the window nearest him, began to stare fixedly at Muriel's house across the street.

Closed cars in a high state of polish stood at the curb; a gay awning, in spite of the fair day, gave shelter all the way between the curb and the front door; jars of flowers were hinted in the lower windows; small groups of people, mainly colored people, waited cheerily along the sidewalk; and everywhere an intimation of festival was in the air.

Evidently this was a wedding day for somebody.

"My goodness!" Renfrew said again, with but faint realization that this wedding day was the day when he would wed his Muriel. What occupied his mind might be likened somewhat to the vague horror he had felt upon another nervous morning, a few years before as he approached the moment when he had to deliver an "oration in school."

What he felt now was incomparably more upsetting, though alleviated by a kind of dreaminess that prevented it from being precisely sinister; and yet this day, so strange, seemed to contain nothing definite pertaining to his actually changing into a married man; it appeared to be concerned only with his enacting before a silently critical multitude, all fine clothes and glittering eyes, a role most imperfectly rehearsed, for which he felt himself, both by nature and inclination, absolutely unfitted.

For Renfrew was of a naively modest habit, and inclined to the apologetic attitude of mind; he was, as people say, a young man of a painfully shy and retiring disposition.

Yet brides and brides' mothers, year in and year out, do take even such a young man into their own hands and turn a dismaying multitudinous attention upon him, as a leading man of the supporting company while the star comes down the aisle.

And the unjust part of this is that the star, who doesn't need it, is supplied with a veil, while the stricken leading man must make his grand entrance with pallid face all naked and undefended.

Here is indeed a wrong that needs fighting. Our country has great leagues and societies—new ones are formed hourly—for the reform of every wrong and right thing under heaven; and yet we have no organization (at least no national one) with the animating purpose of placing the wedding veil where it properly belongs. Renfrew might have felt better, and might more sensibly have conducted himself this morning, if he had known that he was to pass through the approaching crisis under a veil—preferably one of opaque material.

It is true that he did brush his hair, after turning back from the window to his mirror; but he subsequently tossed one of the brushes upon the bed and put the other in the right-hand pocket of his trousers. His wallet, full of money and railroad tickets, lay upon the dressing table before him; and probably some half-impulse toward it accounts for this singular choice of a receptacle for a hairbrush.

His mother appeared at his door, a glistening silk hat in her hand. "Don't worry any more, dear," she said, and came to give him the hat and to kiss him. "Your father and I are going to the church now; and your best man is waiting for you downstairs."

"Charley?" Renfrew asked, in genuine surprise. "What on earth is he doing downstairs?"

"He's come to drive to the church with you."

"But what for?"

"Because you and he arranged it that way, didn't you?"

"Did we?" said Renfrew. "Then perhaps that's why he's waiting for me."

"I think, perhaps," she agreed, gently, and kissed him with more agitation than she let him see. "Good-by, dear. Be sure to hold your shoulders back and don't be nervous, Renfrew."

"Nervous? Why, of course not!" he said, vehemently. "I'm no more nervous than I would be if I were just sitting down to breakfast with you and father and Daisy. I'm as calm as if I were just going to take an ordinary drive with old Charley Jones. I am as calm—I am as calm—why, mother, I am as calm as—why, I am absolutely calm!"

"Yes, dear," she said; and, her husband's voice being heard in a reiterated appeal from downstairs, she kissed Renfrew once more and left him. He stood looking earnestly at his hat for some moments, then placed it, back forward, upon his head, and descended to Charley Jones in the library.

"Charley," he proclaimed to that rather pallid, but glossily massaged and manicured best man, "Charley, I am as calm as—as stone! I'm absolutely as calm as a stone statue!"

"I'm not," Mr. Jones said, ruefully. "I'd like to know what was in that salad last night. I think I ate too many hors d'ouvres, too. I'm not calm at all."

"But I am, Charley," the bridegroom assured him. "I am as calm—why, I'm as calm—as calm—as calm"——

"We'd better be getting into that car," Charley reminded him. "You can tell me how calm you are all the way to the church."

Renfrew seemed to wish to take advantage of this permission. "I am," he said, when they were seated in the car. "I am, Charley."

"You are what?"

"Calm," said Renfrew. "I am as calm—well, I never felt any calmer than I do now since the day I was born."

"How calm were you then?" the best man inquired.

"When?"

The day you were born."

"Why, perfectly," said Renfrew. "Perfectly."

"That's good," said Mr. Jones. "I was afraid you might have been a little upset or something."

"No, no," the bridegroom protested. "I practically never get upset, Charley. There's only one thing disturbs me."

"What's that?"

"The ring. I'm disturbed about the ring, Charley."

"You are? Here it is, perfectly safe." He exhibited it reassuringly. "What disturbs you about it?"

"I'm afraid you might drop it."

"All right," said the best man. "I'll put it back in my pocket." And he did.

"No, no! I mean I'm afraid you might drop it when you hand it to me. Suppose you did, Charley. Suppose you did drop it and it lit on its side and began to roll, and went on rolling. You know, yourself, how any round piece of metal will roll, sometimes, when it lights on its side."

"Yes, I do," his friend assented, warmly. "Many's the round piece of metal that's rolled far, far away from me, no matter which side it lit on!"

"Well, suppose," Renfrew continued, "suppose when you're handing me the ring, you happen to drop it."

"But I won't. What on earth would I drop it for?"

"I don't say you will," said Renfrew, "but you might. Now, suppose you do, and suppose the ring lights on its side and starts rolling"——

"Then I'll run after it," Charley interrupted. "I'll dart after it like a flash."

"But what on earth will I do while you're running after it?"

"You just stand still with Muriel and the Bishop," said Charley. "You stay and try to quiet them while I'm running after the ring."

"But suppose it rolls all the way down among the pews and under people's feet, and"——

"It won't," Charley assured him earnestly. "I'll run after it till I get right alongside of it, and then, if it tries to get into somebody's pew, I'll jump way up in the air like a tiger and I'll come down on it and absolutely crush it under me. 'There, you fat rascal!' I'll say. 'Just one more roll from you and I'll throttle you as I would a varmint!'"

"Oh, my!" Renfrew said, and looked upon him pallidly. "You're not taking this thing seriously."

"You accuse me?" Charley asked, reproachfully. "When I'm doing my best to show you I know exactly how to act if that mean old ring tries to get away from us?"

"Can't you put your mind on it?" Renfrew urged him. "I'm seriously trying to get you to think what we could do if you dropped the ring."

"Quit your worrying. I'm not going to drop it."

"Well, then," said Renfrew promptly, "what would I do if, right in the middle of the ceremony, I had to sneeze?"

"You wouldn't. It isn't done."

"But suppose I had to."

"Oh, if you had to," said Charley, "then you would. Yes, I didn't realize."

"But it'd be just horrible!"

"You're right. It would!"

The best man spoke unsympathetically, and Renfrew's expression became more distressed. "But what would I do?" he asked, imploringly. "What would I do if I did?"

"If you sneezed? It's customary," said Charley, "that is, it's customary at weddings for the bridegroom to make some little demonstration if he sneezes. I'm mighty glad you've consulted me about this, Renfrew, because I like my grooms to be a credit to me, and without instructions you might have done the wrong thing. Will you promise to remember what I'm going to tell you, in case you sneeze at the altar?"

"I will," said Renfrew, anxiously. "I will, Charley."

"In case you sneeze," Mr. Jones began his instructions, "you must turn laughingly to the congregation and give them a saucy wave of your handkerchief. Then you tap the Bishop three times on his chasuble and say: 'How's that for a sneeze, old cleric? Have you got a sneeze like that? If you think so enough to back it for, I'll be glad to sneeze you at any time and place you'll name for $500 a side.'"

"Oh, murder!" Renfrew groaned. "You're just wasting my time with nonsense!"

"Well, I can't waste any more of it," Mr. Jones informed him, cheerfully, as the car stopped. "We're here."

"We're where?"

"At the church," said the best man. "Your time has come, Gerald Castleton."

"Oh, murder!" the bridegroom groaned again, and followed his friend through an open doorway at the rear of the church to a vacant room behind the altar. There Renfrew immediately began to pace up and down, while the best man went to a door leading into the body of the church and opened it just far enough to permit him to peer through a crack. "Your ushers are still doing their duty by families and friends," he told Renfrew.

"See here," Renfrew said, in a desperate tone, "I don't know if I know all that by heart. I don't know if I know what to say!"

"What to say when?"

"At the altar."

"Then you might improvise something," Mr. Jones suggested brightly. "When the Bishop says, 'Wilt thou, Renfrew, take this woman,' and so forth, if you can't remember the lines, why, just come back at him with any witty little thing you have in your head at the time."

"Oh, heavens!" Renfrew moaned. "I told you"——

"Wait," Mr. Jones interrupted. "I know something better than improvising, especially as you seem afraid to depend on the inspiration of the moment, and this would be mighty appropriate, too."

"What would?"

"What I'm going to tell you," Mr. Jones replied. "When the Bishop puts it up to you if you will take this woman or not, just look up at the rafters in a resigned way and say: 'It is a far, far better thing that I do now, than I have ever done. It is a far, far nobler end that I am making now than I had any right to expect. It is a far, far braver thing that I do now than any of my friends ever thought'"——

"Oh, murder!" the pacing Renfrew groaned once more. "You can't put your mind on it!"

"Listen!" the best man said, his ear to the crack in the door. "It's the overture."

The air became tremulous with vibration from the profound masses of the great organ pipes, and Renfrew was like the air; he became tremulous, too—and visibly.

"Oh, my goodness!" he said. "Is it time?"

"What time?"

"Time for us to go out there."

"No," said Mr. Jones. "But it's time for you to quit that shaking. Do you want the whole town to think you're afraid to marry Muriel?"

"What?"

"It looks like it," the best man said, severely. "When a man steps out to marry a girl, and a large and intelligent audience observes that he's shaking like an invalid in a blizzard, the natural conclusion is that he's [illegible] the bride."

"What?" Renfrew cried. "Why, y know, yourself, I tried for months months to persuade Muriel to be e gaged to me. Everybody in town kn it. I'd have been an absolute w if she hadn't said she would!"

"I can't seem to make out the di ence," the heartless Mr. Jones resp ed. "Everybody'll think you're anyway."

"Everybody'll think I'm one w

"One wreck," the best man expla speaking distinctly. "They will s parade in there shaking like that."

"Shaking? Am I? So you c notice it?"

"Yes. Maybe not at a mile, but a hundred yards, absolutely!"

"I think it must be the music," Renfrew. "I wish they didn't have play it. It makes the cold chills go and down your spine. I'll probably all right when it stops, Charley."

"It isn't going to stop," said Charle "Not till after you're married."

"Not till when?"

"When the music stops, you'll be your way to the subsequent festivities your father-in-law's, so you might well get used to it."

"At my father-in-law's?" Renfrew re peated huskily. "At my father-in law's?"

"Yes," said Charley. "Name of Elli Nice old man, but got an eccentri daughter."

"You charge Muriel with being ec centric?"

"Well, look who's she's marrying."

Renfrew bent upon him a searchin though haggard stare. "Charley," h said, piteously. "I believe you're jo ing."

But Charley had turned again to th crack in the door, and he made a war ing gesture. "Steady now!" he wh pered. "Brace up! Try to be a ma Get ready!"

The voluminous and chanting vo of the organ began to hint the chan to a theme new and startling to th most nearly concerned, yet old and fa miliar to everyone; the beating har monies of the chords conveyed th warning that an ancient melody w about to thrill out from among the that most articulate of melodies; a Renfrew's breathing was suspended f the time being. When he heard "[illegible] Comes the Bride," he was far less a ticulate than the melody, but [illegible] sounds.

"Quit that gulping and come o the best man said in a harsh, low voi "You've got to!"

"Oh, murder!" Renfrew gasped, hi last vocal exclamation as a bachelor; and by the imperious direction of hi subconsciousness he took his place a his best man's side.

Charley gently opened the door, an the two walked slowly out into fu view of 500 decorous people.

Renfrew had consciousness of no in dividual eye in all the ocean of eyes th seemed to beat upon him; the who world had become eyes that searched him and thought inscrutable thoughts about him. At the precise focus of the searchlight eyes of the universe he stood helpless, exposed to the vast, intolerable glare. Yet, as a matter of fact, not a person in the church was looking at him just then. The bride was more than half way down the aisle.

The bridegroom had no realization of her as his ladylove, his Muriel, whom he hoped to marry, when she appeared (unexpectedly) at his side and gently took his arm.

His perception of her was of a highly decorated and elaborate white bundle, of some odd sort, strangely claiming him, strangely moving beside him as if permanently, and impelling him strangely to move toward the Bishop.

This latter was a dreadful figure, with a dreadful composure, and out of the figure and the composure there presently came unintelligible sounds faintly resembling passages in the English language.

Then, out of Renfrew's own mouth, upon some unrecognizable prompting, a little later, came automatic false murmurs, he knew not why; and he heard himself meaningfully mumbling: "I, Renfrew, take thee, Muriel," swallowing dryly but heavily the while.

And then came the ring into his hands, placed there demurely and without any dropping, by a black coat sleeve and a white cuff that emerged from an unknown region, gave him the ring and withdrew magically.

The Bishop took the ring, gave it back to him, and Renfrew turned to place it upon a finger of the pretty little hand projecting from the decorated bundle (with its strangely persistent air of permanency) beside him.

Beyond the bundle, at a little distance, he saw two pink-faced, solemn children, laden with beautiful flowers, and a definite anxiety penetrated his numbed intelligence. Daisy had predicted catastrophe to follow her marching down the aisle with Robert.

Evidently and inevitably she had marched down the aisle with him. Where was the catastrophe? When would it begin? What would be its nature?

Robert stood flushed and solemn; and Daisy, beside him, had a sweet if superior aspect; naught appeared amiss between them. Catastrophe was at least postponed until they should be beyond sanctuary.

Comprehending this much, the bridegroom vaguely caught a drift of words from the Bishop, who had just said something apparently indefinite about "man and wife." Renfrew's mind did not go so far as to take in these words as important, or as bearing upon himself, particularly, in any significant way; but he knew a slight relief as he heard them, because the tone in which they were pronounced seemed to indicate that things were drawing perceptibly toward a conclusion. This exposure to the universal eyes would not continue forever. He had no more than grasped this than the white bundle was conducting him up the aisle.

But hope and sunshine suddenly came once more into his staggered life; at the church door the light of open noonday filtered through a brave awning, and beyond the awning waited a haven and shelter, a closed car. This closed car, so beneficent in its offers of privacy, he looked upon as some terrorized hermit crab might look upon the home shell of which it had been deprived; and it were not going far wrong to say that Renfrew, beneath the awning, fairly scuttled to the car, the persistent white bundle always accompanying him. By an effort of will, and with genuine presence of mind, he put the bundle into the car before he got in himself.

Then miraculously appeared the best man at the open window of the car, offering Renfrew's hat.

"Your hat," he said, as Renfrew gave him a stare containing only a wan relief and no human comprehension at all. "Take it!"

Renfrew feebly took it.

"And look here," the best man added, hurriedly, in a lowered voice, "there's something we forgot. I'm supposed to fee the Bishop for you, and I ought to do it now, I guess, while he's taking off his vestments in that little room back there, because I leave town at 3 o'clock myself. We forgot all about arranging"——

"No," Renfrew interrupted, "I didn't forget it. I've got it all arranged. You take my pocketbook, and in the back flap you'll find an envelope with the Bishop's name on it and a $100 bill in it. You give that to the Bishop, and bring the pocketbook up to the house with you. Be careful of it, Charley; it's got all my money for the trip in it, and all the railroad tickets and everything. Don't lose it, Charley."

"I won't," said Charley. "Are you still as calm as you were, Renfrew?"

"Absolutely. I've been calm every minute of the whole thing. I am as calm as"——

"Well, then," Mr. Jones suggested, "perhaps you'd better turn over that pocketbook to me."

"Oh, yes, of course," said Renfrew, and having felt in his pocket, hastily placed in the best man's hands a small hairbrush, one of a pair, and of elegant design. "There, Charley," he said, with finality, and addressed the chauffeur: "For goodness' sake, why don't you get started? Everybody's looking!" The chauffeur was obedient; the car glided rapidly out of hearing, and the best man was left staring glassily at the hairbrush and deciding to avoid the Bishop until somewhat later in the day.

"You are as calm," said the best man, staring at the shining back of the bridegroom's car, "you are as calm—as calm—well, you'll probably get a little calmer after Muriel's had you in training for a year or so!"

But Renfrew was already calmer. He had suddenly discovered that the persistent white bundle was the bride, and that the bride was Muriel!

scorn. "And you added this to the rest!"

He started to speak, but she did not hear him. She swung about, striking out across the lake.

The man at the pond's edge called out to her, in alarm, as he saw the course she was taking. But she neither waited nor wavered. She skated on until the point of one skate blade cut through the thinning ice, throwing her suddenly forward. She was conscious the next moment, of a quick pang of cold through all her body, of icy water closing over her and shutting off her breath, of emerging from numbing depths and clinging to thin lips of ice which broke under her weight. She heard Paran Cayley call to her as he ran out on the pond.

She saw him go down, even as she had done. She turned and tried to swim toward him, but the skates held her down, and the icy water deadened both her body and her will. She saw a double flurry of tan and white circle the lake. It was the dogs, Paran Cayley's dogs, she mistily realized as they tugged out neck and neck across the ice. She could hear their whimpering, short yelps and their owner's cry of "Quick, Bob! Quick, Bob!" as he fought his way toward her. But he was a long way off. And without breathing she could not live. And it was useless. It was quite useless, after all, to try any more, with that leaden weight on her feet.

She did not cry out, but she let her arms go up and then droop at her side, waiting for the sky to be shut out from her, shut out from her for all time. Then she was disturbed by a tightening about her throat. She realized the next moment that a pointed nose was breathing hard at the back of her neck and that four pointed incisors had taken possession of the collar of her coat. She could hear Paran Cayley's voice calling out: "No, Bob, not me! I'm all right! Go to her! Bring her in!" And a moment later a second pointed nose was buoying her up until Paran Cayley could get to her. There was another sharp struggle along the edge of the ever-breaking ice until he could reach shallow water. She felt his long arms around her. She felt him carrying her up the bank, like a child, and she knew she was safe.

He carried her all the way back to Gray Gables, where the housekeeper wrapped her in hot blankets and gave her so much hot toddy that she fell asleep with her ears ringing and failed to waken until the midnight chimes of Wimblehurst were blithely announcing the advent of Christmas. When she opened her eyes she saw the solemn-eyed housekeeper sitting at one side of her bed and the solemn-eyed owner of Gray Gables sitting on the other.

"Are you feeling better?" he asked, with his wistful, October-evening smile.

She lay studying his face for a long time. Then she moved her head from side to side, slowly, as he repeated his question.

"What's wrong?" he asked. He meant, apparently, to take her pulse. But instead he merely took her hand.

"You hate me!" she said, choking on a sob. It was his turn to shake his head.

"I've given you the wretchedest Christmas of all your life," she told him, doing her best to get control of her voice.

He bent over her, still holding her hand. "You could make it the happiest in all my life," he said, as his solemn eyes searched her face. She did not speak as she met his gaze. But into her eyes crept a light that was not to be mistaken.

"Hutchinson," said Paran Cayley, very quietly, to his housekeeper, "will you please have the two collies brought up to their new mistress." He waited until the door closed. Then he added: "For that's what you're going to be, my beloved, and I don't give a hang if Hutchinson and the whole wide world knows it!"

ing of the foot. They are almost certain to hold the game, particularly the jump traps and the double-jaw traps. They represent the "ideal" method of taking fur-bearing animals. Of course, from 25 to 50 per cent of the game taken is in the so-called "fluke" class—squirrels, rabbits, weasels and such creatures, which are not wanted by the trapper. These are tortured the same as are the real quarry sought.

Trapping means the most bitter physical torture for its victims, coupled with the mental torment of fear.

This agony is visited on many unsought victims, whose lives are thrown away as are their bodies when found.

NO EFFICIENT HUMANE TRAP HAS EVER BEEN DEVISED.

"Trapping pays well"—"Trapping is good fun" (for whom?)—"There's money in trapping, boys"—by such phrases schoolboys are urged to take up the fine, clean, manly, outdoor sport of submitting wild creatures to agonies before which the inventions of savage races pale by comparison.

Of course, milady must have her furs.

But look closely at your furs the next time you wear them, madam. There is blood on them.

Most perilous peace-time work is finished. This was the exploring and mapping of the Colorado River and its adjacent gorges by eleven members of the United States Geodetic Survey. Many times the party was almost swept away by rapids. Above, a view of the surveyors through a gorge in the Grand Canyon of Arizona. Below, two members of the expedition mapping a swiftly-moving stretch of the Colorado. The survey work was started in 1909.

The longest high voltage arc ever produced by man is shown in the accompanying photograph from the New York laboratory of the Westinghouse Co. The arc is 55 feet long and was produced by the highest voltage transformer in the world —a million volts in one minute.

—International Newsreel Photo.

J. Ramsay Macdonald, foremost leader of the Labor party in Great Britain, and very much in the limelight since the setback which the Conservatives encountered in recent Parliamentary election.

—Photograph by Underwood & Underwood, New York.

Water will wear out a stone, as the proverb has it. The picture shows Elephant Head Rock, carved by the waters of Puget Sound, Wash., which work 24 hours a day and have been at it for centuries.

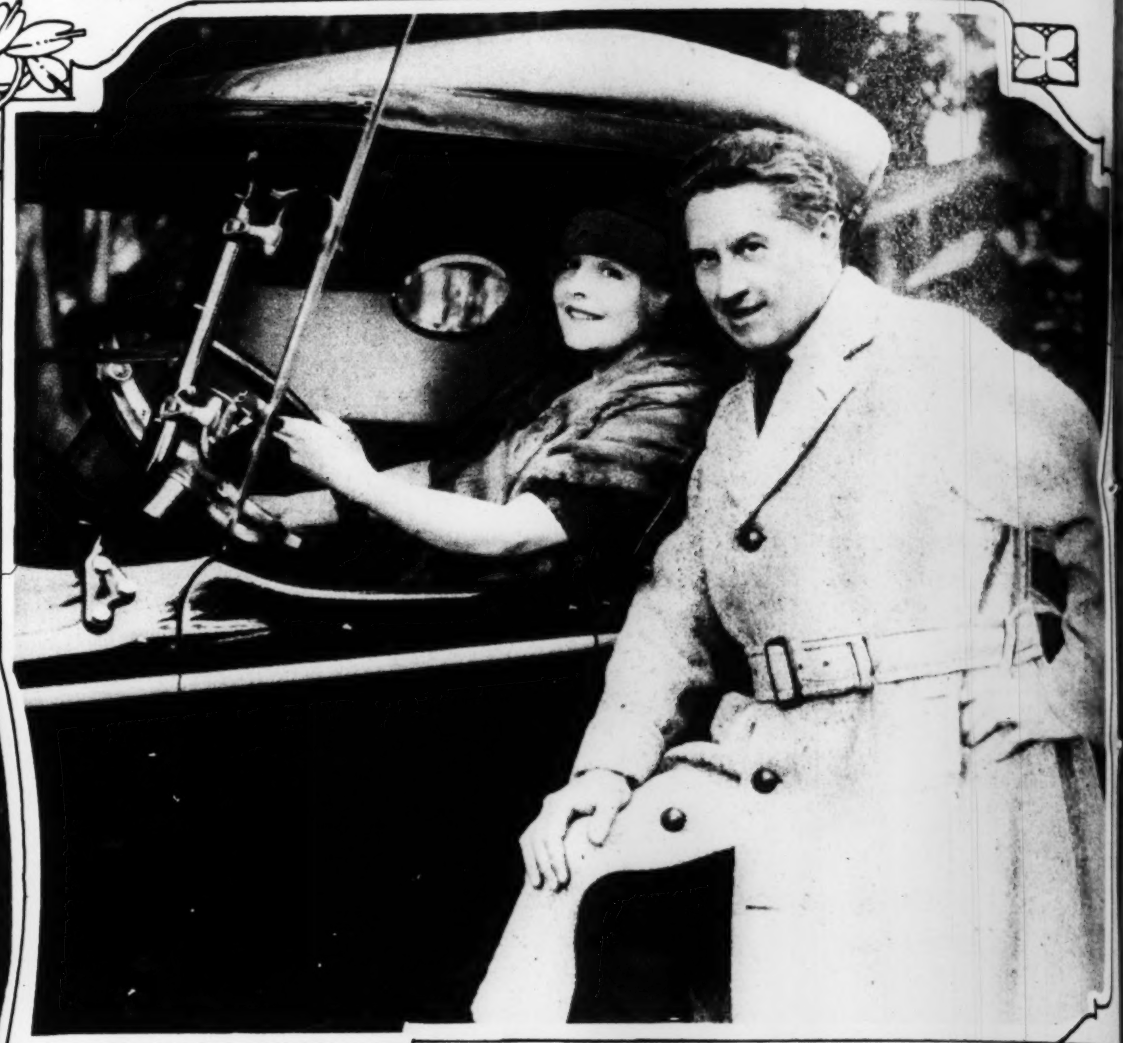
STILLS FROM STUDIO LAND

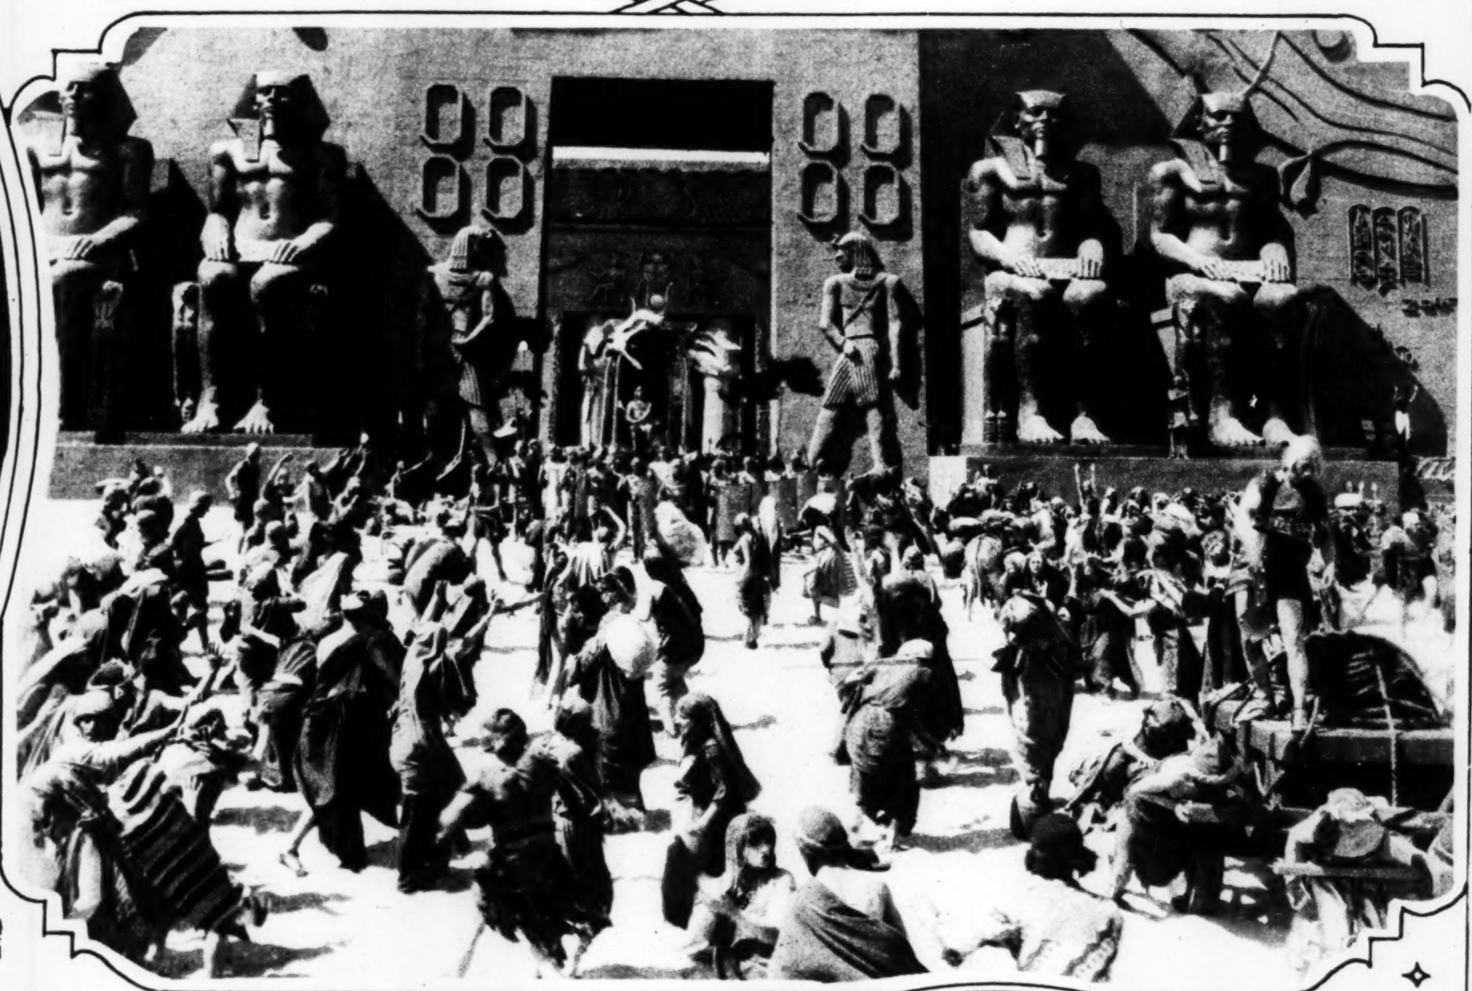
Ethel Shannon, chosen from among many candidates to play the leading role in the screen version of "The Boomerang," which was a Belasco stage success.

Now Corinne Griffith has taken to the wig. This is the way she looks in her latest. It is a matter of opinion whether it is more becoming than her natural hair.



A king and queen of the movies. Fred Niblo and his wife, Enid Bennett. She lets him boss her in the studio, but it will be noticed that she drives the family car.

The latest and, some think, the best portrait of Lillian Gish. It was made just before she sailed for Europe to be filmed in the title role of "Romola."



One of the big settings and remarkable groupings in Cecil B. DeMille's gigantic spectacular movie production, "The Ten Commandments."

No stuffy flats for movie stars. Conway Tearle and his wife, Adele Rowland, reading the "script" of a screen play in their Los Angeles home.

Another little girl grown up. Only a short time ago Clara Bow was playing child parts. Now she is on her way to motion picture stardom. Directors call her "the ideal flapper."

Harry Abeln, Unarmed, Attacks Robber and Disarms and Kills Him After Being Wounded Himself.

SLAIN MAN A CUCKOO GANGSTER

Charles Abeln, With Revolver, Drives Three Others From Cigar Shop at 3928 South Broadway.

Harry and Charles Abeln, unarmed at the moment, descended into their cigar store at 3928 South Broadway while four armed and masked men were holding up the place shortly before 4 o'clock last evening. They had heard the robbers as they were eating supper.

Harry attacked one of the robbers, and taking away his revolver, shot and killed the man, who proved to be Charles Crow, a Cuckoo gangster. Before he disarmed Crow, Abeln was himself shot twice, and one of the wounds in his right side, is considered serious.

Charles Abeln got his own revolver after entering, from a shelf in the center of the store, and emptied it in driving the surviving robbers out of the store, and in firing after the automobile in which they fled. Either he or a policeman shot a hole in the gasoline tank, forcing the robbers to abandon the car.

Robber Had Burglar Tools.

The four robbers, with handkerchief masks, and one carrying a collection of burglary and safe-cracking tools, entered the store while Henry Abeln, 63 years old, father of the proprietors, was in charge. Mrs. Charles Abeln was with him, and the only customer in the place was James H. Smith of 4521 Newberry terrace, former Chief of Detectives.

"Stick 'em up, stick 'em up," the robbers demanded. Two stopped to guard the two men and the woman. The others went on toward the rear of the store, which is a large wholesale and retail establishment.

In a rear room, four men were playing cards. The first of the robbers to find them ordered them to go into the store. One of the card players, Fred Giese, a Workhouse guard, was slow in obeying, and the robber struck him on the head with his revolver.

Brothers Were Upstairs.

As the card players filed into the store, one of the robbers laid down upon a chair the sledge hammer and two crowbars which he had carried into the place. Henry Abeln overturned the chair with his foot, and the crash of the heavy tools upon the floor startled the brothers, Harry and Charles Abeln, as they sat at their evening meal on the floor above.

The brothers ran downstairs and Charles, entering the store first, used the counter as his shelter while he moved toward the cash register, in the center of the store, where he had left his revolver. Harry Abeln made for one of the robbers—Crow, the assailant of Giese—and struggled with him for Crow's revolver.

One of Robbers Killed.

"Lay down, all of youse," shouted one of the robbers, trying to control this dangerous situation. The card players obeyed, but one of them, A. C. Altmeyer of 4017 South Broadway, seized Crow's leg, and pulled Crow partly down with him. Crow fired, wounding Harry Abeln. At the same time Charles Abeln, who had obtained the revolver he was looking for, started firing at the robbers from behind the counter. They fired back and four bullets dented the cash register, while others pierced boxes of cigars which served as a barricade for Abeln.

While this shooting was going on, Crow's revolver was fired first by Crow and then by Harry Abeln. Whether all three shots which wounded Crow were fired by Harry Abeln is not certain—Charles Abeln may have fired one of them, he says. Crow lay dead on the floor as his three comrades ran out.

All Others Get Away.

The robbers' car, kept ready for them by a fifth man, was standing on Alberta street, south of the store. In the rush of getting away, one of the robbers failed to get in the car. As the car started south on Broadway, Harry as well as Charles Abeln ran out to fire at it. A policeman appeared, fired at the car, then pursued the robber who was on foot. Former Chief Smith, who saw that Harry Abeln was wounded, directed him
